Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

—USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"Mr. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

He is no novice or jumping to beg, borrow or buy bolstery to uphold him in an art he does not fully understand in every phase of its beauty; but would respectfully point to the best of references, WORKS, and ability to discover, develope and train inherent talent to accomplish splendid results. His pupils are shining in private and public, here and elsewhere. His many Musical Exhibitions—such as others seldom or never present to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from having favoritism where true merit is too often absent. Terms, $12 for twelve weeks (twenty-four lessons) at his Music Room, or $15 at the pupil's residence, for Piano or Scientific Vocalization, separately or together. Daily Chronicle.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1874.

Readables.

The Lansing (Mich.) Republican says Horace White, the retiring editor of the Tribune, was a clerk to the Ways and Means Committee in Congress during the rebellion, and got information in advance of others as to the extent of the whiskey tax, which information he sold to a whiskey ring, and made enough money to buy his firstbatch of Tribune stock. Of course he has always been a fierce opponent of rings and all kinds of speculators in Government offices and legislation.

Hammatt Billings, the well-known artist and architect, died in New York on Saturday.

Of the 175 Congressmen elected this Fall, there have been but three representatives of our several million colored people chosen. This number will however, without doubt be increased to four. Only one colored men will be a member of the Senate, and his will be the seat once occupied by Jefferson Davis.

Speaker Blaine of Maine has written a letter declaring that on no account will he become a candidate for the United States senate.

In the next House of Representatives there will be upwards of one hundred and seventy members who have never been in Congress before, and there is every prospect that there will be a speaker who never held that position before. The result will be very much like Phaeton's adventures with his papa's horses, or rather like John Phœnix's attempt to drive a tandem—the front horse had business in the rear, and the rear horse looked passively in the future, and John contemplatively watched the cruel heavens from the botton of a ditch.

Congress meets on Dec. 7.

A curious feature of the Tennessee election was the popular vote taken on the Senatorship. Andrew Johnson, who holds that Senators should be elected by the direct vote of the people, proposed that the democrats, while voting for State officers, should at the same time cast an extra ballot indicating their choice for United States Senator. The returns from Memphis show that the vote was ten to one in favor of the Ex-President, and it is probable that the result in Central and East Tennessee is in the same proportion. And yet it is very doubtful if he will be the choice of the Legislature. His campaign has been very bitter and personal, especially his attacks on Gov. Brown. As Andrew Johnson would be sure to make an indecent exhibition of himself in the Senate, his election would hardly add to the democratic strength in that body. Financially he is a straight repudiationist.

The republican majority in Kansas grows in size as the returns come in. Governor Osborn's majority is now estimated at about 15,000.

The Illinois Staats Zeitung was formerly a republican paper, but in the late campaign lent its aid to the democracy. Now, however, it is offended at its democratic allies, and snubs them for feeling elated over the results of the late election. It tells them that the thing which went last year by the name of the democratic party remains to-day the same helpless, impotent minority which it used to be in 1872 and 1873. "The majorities of Nov. 3," says the Staats Zeitung, "are due to the fact that the votes of hundreds and thousands of republicans have been added to those of the democratic minority, but in doing so these republicans have by no means come to be democrats in the party sense of that word." It adds, that if the democratic organs want to make sure of this truth, all they need do is keepon with their silly boastings.

Of the thirty-seven States in the Union, twenty will now have democratic Governors, fifteen republican and two "Independent."

"Who," indignantly inquires the St. Louis Globe, "who galvanized the corpse of the democratic party?" The funny man of the Rochester Democrat musters up courage enough to be saucy and says: "We merely repeat the inquiry. We respectfully beg the corpse to understand that. And the corpse will please remember that we never applied an epithet to it in this world."

It is, to be sure, a little rough to pound a man after he is down, but the St. Louis Globe hurls so funny a missile at the body that was stranded on Gloucester beach during the democratic gale recently, that we cannot refrain from giving it. That paper says: Apropos of the recent war between the press and the late Ben Butler, we remember the evidence of the locomotive engineer at the inquest of the gamecock, whom he met professionally on the rails. Said he: "I stood it as long as I could, but when I see the old rooster drop his wing on the ties, whet his beak on the rail and turn his eye heavenward, forbearance ceased to be a virtue, and I just let into him with the engine and tender, seventeen cars and the caboose."

The estimates of the War department for the military establishment proper will be about $3,000,000 greater than the sum appropriated last year.

Mr. Shearman, who achieved a good deal of notoriety as Jim Fisk's lawyer, and who now sustains a similar relation to Mr. Beecher, burst into tears while pleading for delay on behalf of his present client. The saddest feature about this wretched scandal is that it should bring such unhappiness to so truly good a man as Mr. Shearman.

State News.

While Senator Wadleigh of Milford was driving, Friday, his horse ran away, throwing the Senator out and bruising him severely. The horse ran over a little girl, who was also hurt. The carriage was a complete wreck.

The Navy Report.

The Secretary of the Navy, in his annual report, will ask for about nineteen and a half million dollars, being the same amount that was asked for last year, but which was cut down to about sixteen million dollars. The bureau of construction and repairs is to have three and a half millions for repairs to naval vessels. The chief of the bureau thinks this amount will keep a good sized working force constantly employed in the different yards. No new naval vessels will be asked for by the Secretary, to be provided for in these estimates. It is not improbable, however, that an additional sloop of war will be provided for later in the session. In the miscellaneous appropriation bill $6,000,000 will be applied to the personnel of the navy; about $2,000,000 to the engineer bureau, the balance of the $19,500,000 being equally divided among the bureau of medicine, surgery, provisions, clothing and equipments. The Secretary will make a report on the Stevens battery, now building at Hoboken, N. J., and will recommend to Congress to accept the contingent bid of Mr. Hanscom, chief of the bureau of construction and repairs, which was $145,000, the government to take charge of it for this sum and complete it. This great iron-plated ship has cost the government already $1,000,000, after which the government abandoned its intention of purchasing it. Stevens, in his will, left another million, which has been spent on it, making the total cost of the work upon it thus far, $2,000,000. It appears to be the desire of the Secretary of the Navy not to let the ship go out of the country; hence the bid of $145,000 which Congress is asked to accept in order to secure it. An agent of the Japanese government was at the sale, with a view to purchasing it, but declined to bid on learning that government was a bidder.

Mutations in Ohio Politics.

In a well considered article on the past and present of political parties in Ohio, the Akron Beacon reminds its readers of the following facts which it will be well to remember in connection with our future party ascendancy in Ohio:

Political parties need occasional Bull Runs as reminders. As we have said their memories are short and the past is soon forgotten.

In 1861 David Tod was elected Governor by over 55,000 majority. The legislature stood: Senate, republican, 26; democrats, 8. The House, republicans, 73; democrats, 24. The State was overwhelmingly republican.

In 1862 an election was held corresponding to the election of this year. The country was somewhat soured by reverse in the South and the Emancipation Proclamation of President Lincoln. The democracy of Ohio in State convention took advantage of the reaction, and resolved in bitter terms against emancipation, declaring it to be "an act of inhumanity to the slaves." They further declared that such emancipation "would throw upon the border free States, and especially on Ohio, an immense number of free negroes to compete with and underwork the white laborers of the State. It would fill Ohio with a degraded population to compete with our brave soldiers on their return to peaceful avocations." Another resolution condemned the republican legislature for not prohibiting the immigration of negroes into Ohio.

What was the result? The democratic State ticket was elected by an average majority of 6,500 against 55,000 for Tod the year before, and the democracy elected fourteen of the nineteen Congressmen. Too much nigger defeated the party of that year, and leading republicans, from Lincoln down, were cursed by sore-headed republicans for forcing an unpopular issue upon the party.

The next fall Brough was elected Governor by 71,961 majority.

How was it six years later? In 1866 the State went republican by a majority of 45,000, and we elected seventeen out of nineteen members of Congress.

In 1867 the republicans barely carried the State for Governor Hayes by a majority of 2,983, and a decided majority of democrats was elected to the Legislature. The proposition to enfranchise the negroes was defeated by over 50,000 majority. Again there was too much nigger for the weak stomach members of the party, and they played their old game of bolting, and gave the State to the democracy.

In 1868 the State went overwhelmingly for Grant and the entire republican ticket. Negro emancipation, negro suffrage and negro equality, those terrible democratic scarecrows which frightened poor, timid, ignorant republicans for a time, were all indorsed in that election, and the right triumphed and all was well.

Butterby's Dog.

[Max Adeler.]

I had charge of Butterby's dog last summer. I was not very anxious to take care of him, but I am under obligations to Butterby, and when he asked me to keep the animal for him while he went to the seashore, I didn't like to refuse. Butterby brought him around and turned him into the cellar, where he could amuse himself hunting for rats. That was on the twelfth of June, and after that time only two persons entered the cellar. The hired girl went down once after cold beef, and came up dishevelled and bleeding, with a number of appalling dog bites on her legs, and I descended immediately afterwards for the purpose of pacifying the infuriated animal. He did not feel disposed to become calm, however, and I deem it probable that if I had not suddenly clambered into the coal bin, where I remained until he fell asleep in a distant corner about four hours later, I should certainly have been torn to pieces. We thought we would have to try to get along without using the cellar until Butterby could come up and take away his dog. But Butterby wrote to say that he couldn't come, and the dog, after eating everything in the cellar, and barking all through every night, finally bolted up stairs into the kitchen on the second of July, and established himself in the back yard. After that we used the front door exclusively, while we were waiting for Butterby to come up. The dog had fits regularly, and he always got on the geranium bed when he felt them coming on; and consequently we did not enjoy our flowers as much as we hoped to. The cherries were ripe during the reign of Butterby's dog; but they rotted on the trees, all but a few, which were picked by Cooley's boy, who subsequently went over the fence in a sensational manner without stopping to ascertain what Butterby's dog was going to do with the mouthful of drawers and corduroy trousers that he had removed from Cooley's legs. As Butterby did not come up, as the dog would not touch poison, and as I never shot at him without missing him by forty feet, I employed another and effectual means of ridding myself of him. We were to have fireworks in the village on the Fourth, but as it rained the exhibition did not take place. The man who had charge of it had several large rockets on his hands, and after buying eight of these and tying them in a bunch, I contrived to lasso the dog and fastened the end of the rope to the rockets. Then I touched them off, and in a moment Butterby's dog was swishing around among the celestial constellations in some doubt as to the stability of earthly things. He came down in New Jersey in an underdone condition with his hair off. When Butterby comes up I expect trouble, but I am prepared for it.

Country School Examination.

[Cor. Schenectady Star.]

"Solomon Smith, jr., step up here."

Smith, a stupid-looking country boy, advanced to the platform, tripped on the step, stood up, and began:

When General—

"Make your bow, sir!" interrupted Mr. Whipem.

The boy stopped short, made a jerky inclination, and went on:

When General Jackson climbed the heights,
(Here he raised his feet as if climbing.)
And tore the starry banner down;
(Snatching at the air.)
He caught his foot upon a stump,
And scraped himself from toe to crown.

During the delivery of these last lines he put on the most painful expression of countenance, and scraped his hand over his whole person.

"Well done, Solomon," said Mr. Whipem "go on with the next verse."

"Thar ain't no next varse, sir; the morel comes next."

As we rush upward on our way
Quick hastening o'er the sod.
(Running from one side of the platform to the other.)
Some little trouble stops our way,
And down we fall, by ——
(Sitting down sharply on the floor.)

"Solomon," said Mr. Whipem, as soon as he had recovered his breath, "did you write that?"

"No, sir," whispered the boy, "Sam Jones wrote it for me. I gave him two apples for it."

"Thar," exclaimed Mr. Whipem. "I thought Sam Jones did it; he's at the bottom of every piece of mischief in the county; wait till I ketch him."

How a Story Grows.

[Cincinnati papers, Oct. 30.]

Yesterday evening, between 10 and 11 o'clock, there appeared suspended between the heaven and the earth almost a fac-simile of one of Raphael's Angels. Though not of the full stature of a well-developed human being, yet it was perfectly formed, and as white as alabaster. The wings were outspread, with arms extended imploringly, and its evolutions were as rapid and beautiful as a bird, as it circled in mid air. Over one hundred and fifty of our best citizens, ladies and gentlemen, were witnesses of the singular spectacle and gazed with admiration and awe. The testimony of all those who were fortunate to behold it is that there was indisputable evidence that it was not a female, although the form was as delicately molded and the limbs as perfectly rounded as the most perfect Eve that ever came from under the chisel of an artist. Probably it can be explained by some of the scientists.

[N. Y. World, Nov. 3.]

On Sunday, October 25 last, the good people of Ripley, Ohio, while returning from meeting saw, to their amazement, flying in the air, an angel. The angel was evidently of the female sex, wore a long, white shining robe, and had long golden hair, and propelled herself with a pair of beautiful white wings. She flew about for at least twenty minutes; the citizens gazing upward at her in the meanwhile, and expecting that she would alight on one of the meeting house steeples. One rash person, to test whether she was a genuine angel or an inventor of a flying machine, fired off his shot gun at her, but either his marksmanship was poor or his bullet fell harmless against her, for she took no notice of it. Finally, just as everybody thought that she was coming to earth, perhaps to utter a warning to the people of Ripley of impending catastrophe, she made a spring upward and dissappeared behind a cloud. These facts are certified to by a large number of "the leading citizens."

Local Matters.

Hon. William Parsons,

Who lectures before the lyceum, this evening, belongs to the ancient Protestant house of Parsons, Earls of Rosse, and closely related to the well-known constructor of the great telescope, the late Earl of Rosse, president of the British Association, whose name may be associated with that of Franklin, Arago, Humboldt, and the great luminaries of the philosophic fields of science. He was born at Clontarf, near Dublin, and received his education at the Academy of Edinburgh under Dr. Williams, the famous Homeric scholar, the friend and associate of Sydney Smith, founder of the Edinburgh Review. He graduated at the University of Edinburgh under Prof. Wilson, the "Christopher North" of Blackwood, and the erudite Pillans; subsequently entering Lincoln's Inn, London, to prepare for the bar. He was then engaged on one of the leading metropolitan newspapers; and on many occasions contributed papers of eminent ability to the magazine literature of the day. Following the natural bent of his tastes and talents, he devoted himself to the lecture platform of Great Britain and Ireland, where he at once achieved a signal success, and became one of the most popular public lecturers in the United Kingdom. Meanwhile, the national movement taking place for an extension of the franchise, eventuating in Mr. Disraeli's bill for household suffrage, Mr. Parsons entered the political arena, where he became a staunch supporter of the people's rights, and one of the most powerful advocates of the reform. Here he attracted the attention of the leading men of the popular cause, and its chief inspirer, John Bright was so struck by the peculiar force and vivacity of his style as to emphatically declare that Mr. Parson's oratory electrified his hearers. The Reform League considered him asby far their most effective speaker, and always placed him where they anticipated the strongest opposition to their views. As an evidence of the appreciation in which he was held, he was earnestly solicited to put himself in nomination as a candidate for a seat in the British parliament, to represent one of the Yorkshire boroughs. At Bradford, England, he was held the champion of the working-men, who frequently testified their gratitude for his advocacy of their cause.

That's What the Matter With "We."

Some days since we received a communication on "Truth and Error," which we did not publish because we did not know what it meant,—and the more we read it the more we didn't know what idea the writer wished to convey. Since then we have received the following (from the same writer,) which not only explains our obtuseness regarding the "Truth and Error" article but gives "en rap" to our good opinion of ourselves, we having always considered that we were a reasonably good sort of men, as the world goes nowadays:

To the Editors of Chronicle: In a seance of complaisance had with my friends in Heaven, I wrote what they dictated, I did what they commanded. You have not spiritual insight, or you would have published what was written. You are en rapport with the Devil and his angels.

Yours, EDWARD J. LAIGHTON.

We are determined to be no longer in accord with the devil—in fact, that henceforth and forever we will defy that old buffer and all his works—so we publish the communication on "Truth and Error," hoping it may prove a live shell in Old Splitfoot's magazine, and blow him clean out of water:

The immortal is the spiritual. The laws of Nature is the inner life of the spiritual world. No law exists that is not omniscient figuratively speaking, in its own fulfilment. Everything which resolves itself into a real entity has the spiritual power of its own existence. In all the various configurations of matter there is an inner spiritual, ethereal substantiality which is perpetually, immutably and coherently revolutionizing all Nature's domains. The true doctrine of Nature's inherent life in everything which greets the eye in its multiplicity of persons, bewitching beauty and impressive harmony is yet to be rightly understood by the student who becomes its interpreter.

Genius is the world's emancipator from error, the spiritual conviction of the martyr.

The true is always enlightening the mind and restraining an inflated sentimentalism; it is in eternal correspondence with the mind's adaptedness to receive it—it is the platform of man's relation to God. No man lives who is not spiritually receptive of truth. The superstitions which keep the world in bondage and slavish ignorance are replete with falsities and vague superficialities. The freedom of thought which inspires men to seek the truth and embrace the false is only a mockery of religion and a foolish display of the serpent's wisdom.

When men reason they are in their highest congratulations with God's wisdom.

Logical deductions is the true and real of Nature's unfoldings—the logarithms of scientific subtleties and actualities and teach that the imagery of life's mystery is founded in a substantial reality. The ancient philosophers were the divine interpreters of Nature and were sanguine in their spiritual ritualism, which to-day the student reaffirms and which will continue, manifestly from generation to generation. Blot them out and the spiritual has no substratum—no regeneration—no persuasive arguments to establish the first principles of reason and conscience.

Nowhere is immutability more apparent than in the Astronomer's predicated reasoning. Fundamental axioms—mathematical demonstrations and geometrical problems are the basis of every truth which its discoveries reveals. In the upper world man finds harmony and a precision of motion which teaches eternal duration and a perfection of wisdom that tells of its wonderful construction, and converts the reasoner and deep-thinker to a belief of eternal, immutable, immortal existence.

Laconics.

The piece of black crape with which some sympathizing democratic friend ornamented the CHRONICLE office door on Wednesday evening of last week, awaits the donor's call at the office,—we don't need it, as we had nothing to do with getting up the "great democratic jubilee."

The sale of plants at the present low prices, at Mr. Goodall's greenhouse, will continue one week longer.

Charley Shay's Quincuplexal will give a performance at the Temple, Wednesday evening. The programme consists of songs, dances, etc., by male and female artists, and will conclude with the laughable pantomime of Hunkey Punkey and his comical Monkey. This troupe, which performed in this city about one year ago, gave good satisfaction. There will no doubt be a very large audience.

The Eastern railroad is having fifty cars built for the transportation of bark. They are to be run between Canada and Boston during the coming winter.

Sergeant Charles Powell, U. S. M. C., after a faithful service of thirty-eight years, retires to the Naval Asylum at Philadelphia. Sergt. Powell has carried the mail between this city and the navy yard for many years,—nearly twenty, we think,—and on more than one occasion, when the weather was so severe that the naval-ferry-boat's conductors dared not attempt the passage of the river, he has footed-it around by way of the bridge, rather than fail in his assigned duty. His uniform trustworthiness and courtesy have won him the universal respect and good will of the superior officers and comrades with whom he has been associated in the service, and of all our citizens who know him, as well; and no man, by duty long and faithfully performed, has better garned a right to be cared for by the nation in his declining years than he. We need wish him nothing better than that he may find in the Asylum as comfortable and pleasant a home as he deserves.

Wagner, in the State Prison, awaits, calmly, his fate, with the full expectation that the law will be executed upon him. His mind is not particularly of a pious kind, but he thinks that after he is gone the Almighty will cause the guilty individual to come forth from his hiding place and confess the dark deed, and thus, after his lips are sealed, the world will see that he (Wagner) was guiltless.

"For unto him a child is born—to him a son is given!"

A wagon was robbed of two packages, valued at $12, while standing in front of Mr. John Hodgdon's store just at dusk on Monday evening.

The post mortem examination of the body of Georgia Fowler, who drowned herself recently at Seabrook, showed that she was not enciente, as was at first reported. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of premeditated suicide.

—On Wednesday, the Chinese, in New York, celebrated their famous "Feast of Kites." The air was full of kites of all manner of strange devices, except that Beecher's "Life of Christ" was not visible among them.

—He was a nice boy, and lived in West Chester, Penn. He took the bull by the horns, but the bull killed him—he did, boy gored.

People Who Have
Cut their wise teeth, use the SOZODONT, and all who do are willing to declare to all who don't use it, that it is the most perfect and delightful thing for the teeth they ever dipped a brush into.

The Effects of Dosing.
Many persons who are wanting in natural vigor endeavor to supply the deficiency by constantly dosing themselves with drugs (often of a very pernicious nature), which they are credulous enough to mistake for invigorants. There can be no doubt that many lives are shortened in this way. All that such persons require is a pure vegetable tonic, which, like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, also possesses the regulating properties necessary to rectify those organic disturbances which are but the result of weakness. The feeble and the nervous cannot be too earnestly advised to abandon the dangerous practice of swallowing mineral tonics, sedatives and vegetable alkaloids, which disorder the stomach and produce the most hurtful reactions, and to substitute in their place this standard strengthening cordial and corrective of the numerous disorders proceeding from debility of the nervous system, as well as of the stomach, liver and bowels.

Important Medical Correspondence.
If all who are now suffering from Coughs and Colds and other throat and lung diseases, could read the letters continually received from all parts of the country, giving the details of cases similar to their own that have been cured by HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR, the demand for that life-saving specific, vast as it is, would be doubled. It never fails. No cough can resist its tranquilizing influence. It strengthens weak lungs and prevents the possibility of tubercular consumption.

PIKE'S TOOTH-ACHE DROPS—Cure in one minute.

Ten Thousand People.
There are more than ten thousand people in the United States who expect to be the happy possessors of the first grand prize in the Kentucky Gift Concert of $250,000. All of them but one will be disappointed. One will get it, for Gov. Bramlette, the manager at Louisville, has announced that the Concert will positively take place on November 20, 1874; that there will be no further postponement, and if our readers want to know more about it, write to him.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or merely interest character of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its subscribers, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the charm of variety.

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a purely American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from the use of foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent pictures are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious intersperse on of landscape, marine, figure, and animal subjects, sustains an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single art or subject. The literary feature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment, purely of the artistic features, with only such focalized disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful picture, in all respects, of the same noble dog whose portrait, in a larger issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Faithful Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the very presence of the original itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that he owns a Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) his own self. "The dog is natural, no one who sees it barks at it." Any man who owns such a dog as this chromo will have the slightest fear of losing his dog.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among its members. To large sets of 500 subscribers, 100 different pieces, every series of 500 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,000, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are in addition to the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union,

SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.

(No charge for postage.)

Specimen copies of THE ALDINE, fifty cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no retail, or club orders; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signatures of JAMES SUTTON, President.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"Mr. R. H. Eddy has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

He is no novice or humbug to beg, borrow or buy holsters to uphold him in an art he does not fully understand in every phase of its beauty; but would respectfully point to the best of references, WORKS, and ability to discover, develope and train innocent talent to accomplish splendid results. His pupils are shining in private and public, here and elsewhere. His many Musical Exhibitions—such as others seldom or never present to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from fawning favoritism where true merit is too often absent. Terms, $12 for twelve weeks (twenty-four lessons) at his Music Room, or $15 at the pupil's residence, for Time or Scientific Vocalization, separately or together. Mr. Moses will also Tune Pianos,—a business "familiar as household words" to him,—and solicits orders.

Daily Chronicle.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1874.

The Maine Senatorship.

The manly letter of Speaker Blaine commends itself to the good sense of men who have no especial axe to grind. He prefers to remain in the lower House of Congress, and it does not require much foresight to see that he will lead the minority and be likely to make more political capital than were he shelved in the Senate. We do not see the necessity of changing Senator Hamlin for any other candidate yet named, and the worst that we have heard said against him is that he doesn't keep his mouth clean from tobacco. Mr. Hamlin did the republican party more service when it needed aid than any two of the persons named for the succession. We can see no reason why Maine should not retain the services of her distinguished Senator with as much tenacity as Massachusetts has shown in the successive re-elections of Sumner and Wilson. His ability is unquestioned, his integrity has never been doubted, and the fact that he adheres to his friends is far more creditable than if he had been so independent as to be unfaithful and so egotistical as to consider himself of more importance than the principles he has professed. The republican party is never strengthened by retiring its most faithful and able advocates when they are most useful.

Readables.

Disastrous floods are reported from eastern Cuba, causing great damage to the crops and other property; and some loss of life.

The Boston Times has been studying up the records a little, and finds that, of the 78 members of the last legislature who are re-elected, 27 voted for Hoar for senator, 24 for Dawes, 25 for Curtis, one for Adams, and one for Washburn.

Hon. Ellis H. Roberts of the Utica Herald charges his defeat for Congress directly to Senator Conkling and some of the federal office-holders of that district. The democrat elected over him is Mr. Conkling's law partner. Mr. Roberts also distinctly says there was neither the wish nor intention to elect even Gov. Dix on the part of those who appeared to be the republican managers.

The democratic majority in Pennsylvania on Lieutenant Governor is 51, in a total vote of 554,339.

A case is on trial before the Massachusetts Supreme Court in which James F. Dallivan sues the Eastern Railroad for damages to the extent of $25,000 for the loss of one foot by being run over by a freight train some fifteen months ago. The accident occurred at about midnight, and the plaintiff claims he was struck in Mill street, Boston, dragged some distance and then run over; but the defendants will endeavor to show that plaintiff was, from some cause, asleep in the freight-house with his foot across the track at the time the cars were backed in.

President Grant proposes in his forthcoming annual message to take strong ground in favor of resuming specie payments. He is satisfied that there can be no permanent prosperity in the business of the country until hard-pan is reached, and he hopes to see specie resumption inaugurated before the close of his administration.

The Worcester Gazette intimates that Springfield, Mass., has "jacket and trousers too large for it."

The Boston News shows signs of returning sense. It says: "We don't care what a law is called, so it does the work. We would like to see fewer gin mills, and we will hurrah for that plan or party which does most and best in this line."

The official vote of New York gives Tilden, democrat, 361,406 votes for Governor, Dix, republican, 316,343, Clark, prohibition, 10,124. Tilden's majority, 34,939.

Letter from Mr. Blaine.

AUGUSTA, Nov. 14, 1874.

To the Editor of the Portland Press:

A paragraph originating, I believe, in your paper, has gained considerable currency, to the effect that I am in some way attempting to be Mr. Hamlin's successor in the U. S. Senate. Permit me to say through your columns that such is not the fact. I have engaged, by an accepted candidacy and election, to serve the people of the Kennebec district as a Representative in the 44th Congress, and from that duty I could not be turned, even were the Senatorship offered me, and of that I have seen no indication.

In making this correction you will allow me to add that an impression prevails (in which I cannot share) that in your opposition to the election of Mr. Hamlin you are ready to counsel an abandonment of the time-honored usage of the Republican party, by which its nominations for office have been settled by a majority vote in a free, fair and open caucus. I cannot believe this is true, and yet I think you owe it to the party of whose principles you have long been an honorable and able exponent, to make a frank declaration on the subject.

Mr. Hamlin has been many years in public life. He has served his State with a zeal, discretion and devotion that has never been surpassed—and rarely equalled. He has never given a vote that was not in harmony with Maine's best interests; he has never swerved from the strictest line of principle; he has never failed in any emergency to be present at the post of duty; he has never broken faith with any man; he has never proved false to any obligation; he has never been touched even by the shadow of a suspicion of his high personal honor and purity. In his party relations, from the hour of his brilliant triumph in the gubernatorial campaign of 1856, by which Republicanism was firmly established in Maine, he has been, at home and abroad, in the national and state councils, in peace and in war, in prosperity and in adversity, a very tower of strength to the good cause. To deny to such a man the ordinary courtesies and usages of the party he has done so much to strengthen and maintain, would be to proclaim the end of all party organization among Maine Republicans and to hand over the State to our opponents. I refuse to believe for one moment that you could countenance such a destructive course.

Do not understand that I am questioning, in the remotest degree, your perfect right as a Republican to oppose Mr. Hamlin's return to the Senate. That is a fair subject for the exercise of discretion, and if you prefer any one of the excellent and honorable gentlemen who have been named for the place, it is not only your right, but your duty, to advocate his election. For myself, and for all good Republicans with whose views I am acquainted, I can frankly say that if any one of the able gentlemen mentioned as Mr. Hamlin's competitors should be designated by the Republican legislative caucus, it will not only be my highest duty, but my greatest pleasure, to urge his election.

A great deal has been said in certain papers about Mr. Hamlin being the candidate of the office-holders—implying that he is to be forced, by some indefinite power, upon the people of Maine against their will. I do not pretend to speak with absolute accuracy, but I have the impression that, if not in numbers, yet certainly in emolument, the majority of the office-holding influence in Maine to-day is against Mr. Hamlin. The federal officers in my district are few in number, and there is not one of them of any grade from whom the slightest duty or labor in regard to the Senatorship has been exacted,—nor is there one who does not feel perfectly free to go for or against Mr. Hamlin as he chooses, without in any way endangering his tenure of office. Several of them are known to me to be opposed to Mr. Hamlin—two of them, holding lucrative places, are conspicuously so. But into this subject I do not care to go at any length, because my knowledge of the people of Maine has given me a very high estimate of their intelligence, their manhood and their independence, and I am confident that the custom house officers, revenue agents, and postal clerks, ranged on the one side or the other, will not be a very large element in deciding the choice of U. S. Senator.

But I think the efforts and interference of these officers may have been greatly exaggerated. I judge so because in the same papers that parade it and denounce it, I constantly see myself mentioned as engaged in desperate efforts to manipulate votes for Mr. Hamlin. A casual reader would infer from these papers that since my return from Washington, I have been engaged in little else except plotting and planning to promote Mr. Hamlin's re-election. And yet, as a matter of simple fact, I have, up to this day and hour, spoken on the subject to but two members of the Legislature, and to them only by a chance meeting, nor have I written to a single one, nor sent word or message of any kind to one. I have not even spoken to my near neighbor and old friend, Hon. James W. North, and I do not at this moment know what his views on the Senator question are, nor how he will vote in the legislative caucus. At the same time I have never concealed, nor on proper occasions failed to frankly express, my deliberate judgment, here and now repeated, that Maine would best consult her highest interest and honor by returning Mr. Hamlin to the Senate. And I see nothing in the recent political reverses elsewhere to weaken that conclusion, but much to strengthen and confirm it.

Very truly yours,

J. G. BLAINE.

The Danbury Man Abroad.

Mr. Bailey, in his last letter, has the following on the habits of the English:

There is an accompaniment to each meal which strikes a stranger most forcibly. It is their way of saying grace. They are the suddenest people in this respect that I ever saw, and have a way of firing off their gratitude which is most startling. The text is something like this: "For what we are about to receive make us truly thankful," and this, by some families, is slid in most unexpectedly, and it has come so rapidly and so abruptly that I have occasionally missed it entirely, hearing only the word, "about" preceded and followed by a subdued whistling, there being no abatement in the work of the table at the time tended to make the impression the less distinct. The giving of thanks, where it is the custom at the end of the meal, has frequently cut off a mouthful of food, so swift and unostentatious has been its coming; and the conversation and happy laughter flowed along with scarcely a break in its current, and those who were to finish did so, and everybody felt contented and looked edified.

This is quite in contrast to our New England fashion of doing grace. I have sat under a grace which froze the gravy, irretrievably damaged the mutton, and imbued the greater part of the guests with the gloomiest forebodings; in which the African and the South Sea Islanders were looked after and secured beyond harm; and all political cabals were taken under the fifth rib, completely dumb-founded, and their evil machinations scattered to the four winds of heaven. It was a fine performance and a good thing for humanity at large, but it made the dinner look sick.

The English are as unostentatious in their names as in other things. John is the common male and Jane is the popular female cognomen. I begin to think that nearly all the female servants are called "Jane." I am not sure there is not an act of Parliament to that effect. The term servant is used in a broader sense than in our country. The employes of a company are called "servants" whether they are at the head or foot of the list. Imagine an American railway ticket seller called a servant. But it is too dreadful to think of, and, fortunately, no one would dare do it.

We exceed the English in building cars, but they completely distance us in wearing an eye-glass. It is not a double glass, understand, but a single disc, with a silver or gold rim, and secured with a cord about the neck, from which it dangles when not in use. It is worn only by the English exquisite, and he generally dons it as he asks a question, or on entering a room where there is anybody to see him. Sometimes it is suddenly put up without any apparent provocation. I imagine that it is worms. The wearer has a baggy costume, parts his hair in the middle, and has in his face an expression of mild idiocy, which is much strengthened by the glass.

He wears it in the depression just between the bridge of the nose and the brow of the eye. He places it there without any effort, and holds it by a slight depression of the brow. He could carry it more easily under his arm, but he prefers wearing it as I describe, where it rides as calmly and peacefully as a babe on its mother's breast, or a wet dog on a clean oil cloth.

Imitative Americans vainly strive to capture the fashion. There was one young man from Marlboro, Mass., stopping in London last summer, who devoted three whole months, but in vain, to make an eyeglass stay in his eye. I could always tell when he failed, by hearing him howl and swear and kick the furniture. At the end of the three months he went home, as both his time and money were exhausted. When his room was cleaned two full quarts of damaged eye-glasses were gathered up.

Although the English chew but little tobacco, they consume great quantities of the weed in smoking and snuffing. I have seen a number of young people addicted to the latter habit. I don't care who snuffs, if he will only keep away from my victuals. In many of the old-fashioned English inns snuff boxes or snuff horns are to be found in the smoking-rooms, from which the guest helps himself without charge. The same inns keep a stock of long-stemmed clay pipes on hand for the use of patrons. Clay pipes are in such favor here that some of them are dignified with an amber mouthpiece.

It is marvellous the amount of soda water which is consumed here. But it is nearly all bottled. I have seen less than a half dozen soda water fountains in the past summer. I don't suppose they can afford the ice to run them. The soda water comes in bottles as we have it, but it is plain soda, as devoid of flavoring as a billiard-ball is devoid of whiskers. It is used largely with spirits and as a head-easer in the morning after seeing a few friends; but it is not popular as a beverage by itself. It makes a nice companion for brandy, but alone its society is hardly worth looking after.

You see no cakes of ice on the sidewalk here, and I can readily imagine that an American city street in the morning must fill an Englishman with surprise. An American misses the great variety of vegetables, meats, and breads served up at his home hotel, and the equal variety of mixed drink dealt out at his home bar, but I think he misses ice more than all these. I feel safe in asserting thats even-eighths of the bar-rooms, and full that proportion of the hotels, are not regularly supplied with ice; and I have yet to see the restaurant, with a single pitcher of ice-water. And of the two countries, England stands more in need of ice than we do, as its drinking water is generally inferior.

The Troy Whig relates the following: "We have heard much of the wonders of cable telegraphy in outrunning time and annihilating space, but an anecdote related to us recently by Mr. W. P. Phillips, assistant agent of the State Associated Press in New York, who is on a visit to this city, surpasses anything we have ever heard. A gentleman of the Western Union Telegraph office, at No. 145 Broadway, New York, was sitting in the cable-room when a telegram from Philadelphia, destined for Paris, came over the wires. This message, like all others for France, was to go over the cable via Duxbury, Mass. The operator called Duxbury a few times and then said; 'That fellow is asleep, evidently; but the cable men are always awake—I'll have to get one of them to go in and wake him up.' So he stepped to another desk, called Plaister Cove in Newfoundland, and sent the following message: 'To Cable Operator, Duxbury: Please go in and wake up my own true love.' This message Plaister Cove hastened to send across the ocean to Valencia, Ireland, who in turn rushed it to London; thence it was hurried to Paris, and still onward to the European end of the French cable of St. Pierre; the operator there flashed it back to Duxbury. In less than two minutes by the clock the message had accomplished its journey of some 8,000 miles by land and sea, as was evinced by the clicking of the instrument on the Duxbury desk, which ticked out in a manner a little petulant; 'That is a nice way to do. Go ahead. Your own true love.'" —"What you been a doin'?" asked a boy of his playmate whom he saw coming out of the house with tears in his eyes. "I've been a chasin' a birch rod 'round my father," was the snarling reply.

MESSRS. CUTLER BROS. & CO.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, March 13, 1872.

Please send us TEN gross small and FIVE gross large "Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam." This is doubtless the best Cough Medicine in the World.

[Signed] ALLEN & CO.

P. S. These parties have sold this Balsam for over thirty years.

[From one of Boston's most estimable citizens.]

No. 5 Worcester Sq., BOSTON, March 18, 1873.

Messrs. CUTLER BROS. & CO.

In ordering another small lot of your invaluable

VEGETABLE PULMONARY BALSAM,

I should like to tell you what I know about it, in order that others may have the benefit of my EXPERIENCE.

Since this Balsam first came to my notice, in 1848, I have kept it constantly in the house, never allowing myself to be out of it over night. In all these

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

It has not failed in a single instance in my own case to give the desired relief; and I will say the same in regard to my mother, whose

LIFE WAS SAVED

By it as I cannot but think. Hers was a case of Congestion of the Lungs, and although attended by a most skillful physician, she seemed to fail constantly, so that we despaired of her recovery, when an old friend and neighbor persuaded her to try this Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam. The result was most gratifying, I assure you.

RELIEF WAS IMMEDIATE

And recovery rapid. She is now over 82 years old, and is active and well. Whenever she gets a severe cold, which happens once in a while, she takes thirty to sixty drops, according to the violence of the cough, which has always yielded in a day or two by taking the Balsam only on retiring at night. With it the

IRRITATION

Is at once subdued, and a good night's sleep secured. I will mention another case, that of a young lady acquaintance, who

BLED AT THE LUNGS

And coughed frightfully, had night sweats and was fearfully reduced. She left Boston for her country home, 150 miles away, as we supposed to die. I sent her a bottle of your Balsam, and soon had the satisfaction to hear that she was much better. She continued taking it for a while and got

ENTIRELY WELL,

And is living now, which fact is to be ascribed mainly to the use of the Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam.

Very truly yours, JOHN CAPEN.

As there are many imitations, be careful to get the genuine. Price in large bottles, which are much the cheaper, $1; small bottles, old style, 50 cents.

Local Matters.

Westward!

Ex-Alderman T. S. Nowell is very appropriately building a handsome French roof house for a residence, nearly opposite the new girls' school on Miller avenue,—which name was given to this fine thoroughfare by Mr. Nowell himself while a member of the City Council. Mr. George E. Stackpole is also building a residence on the lot next above Miss Morgan's schoolhouse. Gas-pipes are laid as far as this point, and Miller avenue thus gets street lights while yet the gloom hangs undispelled over heart-sick Richards avenue. Aqueduct-pipes have also been laid to supply the school. Mr. James Janvrin is building a house for sale on the corner of Miller avenue and Spring street, below Lincoln avenue; and Mr. Jas. Hall is putting up a residence on the opposite corner,—making four houses in course of construction within a stone's throw and in full sight of each other, on one street,—an occurrence the like of which was probably never before seen since this old town was first settled.

On Lincoln avenue, at the corner of Union street, Dr. N. B. Sides some time since laid the foundation for a block of four tenements, and Mr. C. H. Sides is just starting to put up a new house opposite; while the new dwelling for Mr. A. F. Craig, corner of Union and Middle streets, is nearly completed.

On Wibird street, near Hawthorn, Messrs. C. E. Manent and Frank Junkins are building residences, and others are immediately to follow suit on this and adjacent streets—so that it is safe to say that in a few years there will not be a vacant lot in all this new section of the city.

It is reported that Mr. B. F. Webster has purchased the old Franklin estate, on Middle street near Union, and will open a new street at that point from Middle street toward Lincoln avenue. The removal of the unsightly old Franklin (or Adams) house and surroundings will be a great improvement, and the proposed new street will open up the fine lots in the rear, near Rundlett's mountain; but the mistake of a lifetime, for that neighborhood, was in allowing the extension of Cabot street across Middle to South, to be stopped.

The petition of Mr. C. H. Mendum and others for the Board of Mayor and Aldermen to fix the line of Middle street above Cass, reminds us to ask City Solicitor Hodgdon if he has any personal knowledge of any encroachments on the highway at that point?—and hadn't the Board better settle the long-disputed boundary on the other side of Middle street, below Wibird, at the same time?

The new windmill for pumping at Mr. Hutchinson's greenhouses on Lincoln avenue and Broad street, eclipses anything of the sort ever seen in this vicinity. And why not, seeing that it was made by the Eclipse Windmill Co. of Beloit, Wisconsin?

The new naphtha-gas light on South street, at Lincoln Hill, does not light up the whole globe exactly, but it is of the Globe Gas Light Company's patent, and shows to good advantage the great improvement recently made by the street-widening at that point.

An Idle Schooner.

The Times of Monday evening contained the following: "Schooner Carrie E. Simpson, which was launched from the shipyard of William D. Fernald last spring, is being loaded with apples, onions, etc., for Philadelphia, by J. Stokell & Co. This vessel has been lying here since she was launched, her owners considering it safer to have her laid up than to carry freight at the low rates paid during the past summer."

Our neighbor's statement is correct in all essential particulars,—that is, a schooner launched here last spring is now here and loaded with apples, onions, etc.,—but on some minor points the Times is in error. No such vessel as the Carrie E. Simpson was ever built here; and Mr. Wm. D. Fernald didn't build her,—nor any other vessel. Mr. Wm. F. Fernald built the schooner Clara E. Simpson; she was launched on the 28th of June, and on the 17th of July (the day after the riggers finished their work) sailed for Windsor, N. S., where she took in a cargo of plaster for Alexandria, Va.; took a return cargo of coal to Boston; from Boston went to Windsor again, and loaded with plaster for Baltimore, thence returning to this port with a cargo of coal; and she is now (Tuesday) ready for sea again with 1600 bbls. of apples, onions and fish on board, bound for Baltimore—not Philadelphia. And on the day (Monday) the Times stated that the Carrie E. Simpson had been lying idle ever since she was launched, $1500 of the Clara E. Simpson's surplus earnings were divided among her owners!

Laconics.

Rev. Carlos Martyn will deliver the first of a series of free lectures on schools and education at Mechanics' Hall this (Wednesday) evening, commencing at half-past seven. Mr. Martyn's subject will be "The Meaning of our Schools." The public is cordially invited, and it is hoped that in view of the fact that this course of lectures is free and of interest to all who have at heart the proper education of our youth, they will be fully attended.

When you use a postal card always write the address the first thing. Tons of postal cards without any address are destroyed in the Dead Letter Office, because people write their message first, and then forget to address the card.

The fishing steamer Belle & Hattie, Capt. Jamieson, arrived at this port last Sunday with 35,000 pounds of cod and haddock.

An alarm of fire shortly after one o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, brought out the fire department very promptly. The shingles on the roof of Huntress' carriage shop at Christian Shore caught fire from the chimney, which caused the alarm. The flames were speedily extinguished by the neighbors.

The new hall in the Franklin House is to be 125 by 40 feet, with a gallery, and will be completed in January.

Charley Shay's programme for this evening includes the Cocoanut and Giraffe Dances; Monroe's stump speech; a triple clog dance by the Arnold Brothers; songs by Lottie Legrine; performances by those funny little fellows, Antonia and Charlie Rogers; Punch and Judy; the pet Elephant; and the novel pantomine, "Hunkey Punkey and his Comical Monkey," with Miss Ida Vincent as "Columbine" and Nat. Rogers as "Pantaloon." Of course there will be a rush, and those who go early will get the best seats.

Rev. W. F. Mallilieu, of Boston Highlands, on Thursday evening gives his very popular lecture, "The New Era," in the Methodist church. Says the Webster Times; "Monday evening Rev. W. F. Mallilieu lectured to a large audience of our most refined and cultivated citizens. He gave us one of the best lectures it has been our privilege to listen to this winter. It is seldom that an audience is held in such profound attention. Those who failed to attend lost a rare treat." Admission, twenty-five cents. Don't fail to hear him.

Newspapers as a Means of Culture.

[Biddeford Times.]

One of our best magazines, "Old and New," some time since contained an article in favor of newspapers in which the writer says, "Doubt any one's good sense who speaks scornfully of newspapers;" and he might have added, who fails to preserve them or some parts of them. There are some parts of them that is trifling and, perhaps, demoralizing; but in the best of them, how much that is wise and noble! We have a few choice volumes in our library, but a well selected newspaper scrap-book is worth more than either of them. By not preserving newspapers in this way, many families waste more than their library is worth, perhaps, if they have one. In thirty years the writer preserved more than a hundred volumes, but circumstances induced us to sell them which we now regret exceedingly. Volumes of these papers presented to any antiquarian institute would be considered a valuable donation each. Few volumes contain so much sound thought, good English, good sense and important knowledge. From your newspapers, then, select a good scrap-book.

If you ask for wit, from such a scrap-book, we will agree to match every jest and sarcasm in "The School for Scandal" with quite as good in the way of epigram, and flashed upon some mischief which it is important should be seen. Here are full reports of lectures on history by Hedge, poetry by Lovell, science by Agassiz and Tyndall. Here are Mill's speeches in Parliament, his free-trade letters to New York admirers and Mr. Greeley's reply to them. You will find copious extracts giving the heart of the best modern books, and intelligent summaries of the systems they advocate. Here are occasional sermons into which leading American divines have put their most earnest thoughts. Here are vigorous expressions of the best political intelligence clipped from the leaders of the best newspapers. And, quite as important, here are little crisp criticisms of blundering political work from indignant citizens whose daily duty has brought them face to face with absurdities of legislation. Take the best newspapers by all means—and then take nine-tenths of their reading matter for granted. Some of it is good for nobody; much of it is good for somebody; but only a small part is wanted by you. Preserve that. But how precious are these fragments, if wisely chosen! If you are interested in the investigation of any political subject—and every American citizen should have some study of this sort—you will find in almost every newspaper an illustration of some aspect of it. Remember that it is better to subscribe to a few first-class newspapers, that you may read at home with the scissors in your hand, with which to select for future reference, than to glance over a score of them in a public reading room, from which you will retain nothing in your memory till the next meal.

The Effects of Dosing.

Many persons who are wanting in natural vigor endeavor to supply the deficiency by constantly dosing themselves with drugs (often of a very pernicious nature), which they are credulous enough to mistake for invigorants. There can be no doubt that many lives are shortened in this way. All that such persons require is a pure vegetable tonic, which, like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, also possesses the regulating properties necessary to rectify those organic disturbances which are but the result of weakness. The feeble and the nervous cannot be too earnestly advised to abandon the dangerous practice of swallowing mineral tonics, sedatives and vegetable alkaloids, which disorder the stomach and produce the most hurtful reactions, and to substitute in their place this standard strengthening cordial and corrective of the numerous disorders proceeding from debility of the nervous system, as well as of the stomach, liver and bowels.

Important Medical Correspondence.

If all who are now suffering from Coughs and Colds and other throat and lung diseases, could read the letters continually received from all parts of the country, giving the details of cases similar to their own that have been cured by HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR, the demand for that life-saving specific, vast as it is, would be doubled. It never fails. No cough can resist its tranquilizing influence. It strengthens weak lungs and prevents the possibility of tubercular consumption.

PIKE'S TOOTH-ACHE DROPS—Cure in one minute.

Ten Thousand People.

There are more than ten thousand people in the United States who expect to be the happy possessors of the first grand prize in the Kentucky Gift Concert of $250,000. All of them but one will be disappointed. One will get it, for Gov. Bramlette, the manager at Louisville, has announced that the Concert will positively take place on November 20, 1874; that there will be no further postponement, and if our readers want to know more about it, write to him.

Qan25 75

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great native artists, has already been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt to establish an art journal, did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature and a collection of gems, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number adds a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of the paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in a narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its aim is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from a use or for sale sources.

The artistic illustrations of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the subsequent treatment of details than can be afforded by any initial page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure, and animal subjects, each in its kind of interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style or subject. The literary—THE ALDINE—is the choice and graceful accompaniment to the artistic features, with only such reading as is designed not to interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful painting, in oil colors, of a noble dog whose picture is a fancy breed deserved so much attention.

"Rex, the Faithful Friend"

Will be recognized in every home. Everybody loves a good dog and the painter has executed so true to the life that it stands for veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage tells of that dog (his own Newfoundland, the finest in Brooklyn) that he will allow no other dog to approach, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, may be delivered among the members. To every subscriber who remits, 100 different pieces, valued at $100, are distributed as soon as the season is ripe, and the subscription of each series as made, are delivered with the issue of the succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscriptions received in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union,

SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.

(No discount to clubs or agents.)

Specimen copies of THE ALDINE, fifty cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. It will not be delivered or club rates. Remittances must be sent to the publishers, through the local canvasser, or by registered letter, except in cases where the money is paid to officers bearing the fac-simile signature of the President.

AGENTS WANTED.

A liberal commission will be paid permanently as a local agent to the right man. Send for prompt information by addressing

The Aldine Company,
58 Maiden Lane, New York.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the once of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, &c.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death, was offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.

EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"Mr. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such undeniable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most skillful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.

Piano and Singing.

THOS. P. MOSES, thorough and tasteful Teacher of Music, from A in its alphabet to composition and arrangement, has concluded not to accept a recent call to go South again, but will retain his permanent location in the grand "Old Town by the Sea" where he was born,—and renews the offer of his services as above, with unabated zeal and love for this branch of human refinement. He is no novice or humbug to beg, borrow or buy boisters to uphold him in an art he does not fully understand in every phase of its beauty; but would respectfully point to the best of references, WORKS, and ability to discover, develope and train inherent talent to accomplish splendid results. His pupils are shining in private and public, here and elsewhere. His many Musical Exhibitions—such as others seldom or never present to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from knowing favoritism where true merit is too often absent. Terms, $12 for twelve weeks (twenty-four lessons) at his Music Room, or $15 at the pupil's residence, for Piano or Scientific Vocalization, separately or together. Mr. Moses will also Tune Pianos,—a business "familiar as household words" to him,—and solicits orders.

Miss Kate Field made her first appearance on the stage, Saturday evening, in Booth's Theatre, New York, as Peg Woffington in Masks and Faces.

Eight months of Biddeford's municipal year have passed by, and not a step has been taken to raise money to pay the current expenses of the year. Over $100,000 is needed annually to pay the county and State taxes. No officers have been chosen, no taxes assessed, and no bills have been paid, because there is no money to pay them. The State and county taxes will soon be due, and lively times are anticipated if they are not paid.

Joseph Davis, a peddler, sues the Eastern Railroad for $10,000 damages. He got out at the West Lynn station, and says that while getting his baggage from the train, another train came along in an opposite direction and struck him, whereby he has received severe and permanent injuries. The plaintiff alleges that the accident was caused by the negligence, of the defendants. The defence is a general denial.

Says the New York Republic: Speaker Blaine pays a generous compliment to Ex-Vice President Hamlin. Among gentlemen the fact would be considered an evidence of honor and good sense. The Tribune, however, makes it the occasion of a scurrilous fling at the Speaker, implying that Mr. Blaine would not praise Mr. Hamlin unless he thought his (Blaine's) chances of election to the United States Senate doubtful, if not impossible. When an "Independent" editor reaches the point where he scents an interested motive in a simple acknowledgment of another man's worth, the editor is to be pitied.

H. A. Roberts, the missing cashier of the First Ward National Bank of Boston, is a defaulter to the extent of $30,000.

The American House, Boston, was damaged Tuesday afternoon, by a fire in the sixth story, which was extinguished after the hotel had been well drenched. Damage, $15,000.

By a steamtug explosion near New York, Tuesday, five persons were killed and the captain fatally injured.

An extensive mine cave occurred at Pittston, Pa., Tuesday causing the death of two men.

Wong Chin Foo, the Chinese refugee, has been offered a professorship in the Asiatic department of the University of Modern Languages at Newburyport, and will probably accept.

The official vote of New Jersey gives Bedle, democrat, 13,309 majority for Governor. For Congressmen, Sinnickson, republican, has 1189 majority; Dobbins, republican, 968; Ross, democrat, 2041; Hamilton, democrat, 4643; Cutler, democrat, 4; Teese, democrat, 108; Hardenburgh, democrat, 3920.

State News.

Miss S. Peabody was seriously injured a few days since in a mill at Franklin by a shuttle flying out of the loom.

—A long time ago, a fair-headed blonde, an actress, set a very bad example by attempting to horsewhip a Chicago editor. Another actress has essayed the same role in Rochester, but Rochester editors do not seem tractable subjects for this species of muscular amusement. On Saturday morning Mrs. Harry Ryder, accompanied by her son, entered the editorial room of the Rochester Chronicle, and told Mr. Adams, the dramatic editor, that he was an "ignorant, incompetent critic," and added, "You want something to write, do you? Put in the morning paper that I horsewhipped you, puppy!" dropped her muff, drew from her sleeve an ivory-handled whip, and endeavored to strike the unsuspecting critic with it. A scene then ensued so ludicrous as to excite laughter from a cynic. Mrs. Ryder's aim proved bad for she only hit Mr. Adams on the coat sleeve, and he didn't scare worth a cent. Master Ryder proved equal to the rencontre, however, and pulled out a knife; whereupon the amiable and good-natured critic, comprehending the situation, quietly put the irate matron out of the office, spanked the boy soundly, and burst into an uproar of laughter that caused the mother and son to beat a hasty and ignominious retreat down stairs.

—Danbury Bailey has seen an Edinburgh dyer's sign, in which that person is announced as patronized by her majesty, and he immediately imagines the queen saying—"Albert Edward, will you be so good as to step into Mr. Cameron's when you are in Edinburgh, and see if my carpet rags are done?" Or, "Alexandra, you had better wear your brown poplin this week, and have Mr. Cameron clean your blue silk in time for the next drawing-room." Or, "Beatrice, tell the duke of Connaught to leave out his gray trousers before he goes away, that I may send them around to the dyer's this afternoon with those hair ribbons of yours which are to be cleaned."

—A couple of members of a colored conference were passing down the avenue when one trod on the indigestible portion of a pear, and as his number elevens went up the rest of his body was correspondingly lowered. "Ki-yah brudder Jones, is you fallin' from grace?" chuckled his companion. "Not prezactly, deacon; I'se settin' on de ragged edge ob dis pear."

The Trick played on Dougherty.

One day last week four or five Detroiters went into Macomb county to shoot squirrels and kick their shins against logs and fence rails. They had just eaten a cold lunch in the woods one noon, when one of the party, a young man named Dougherty, stretched out on his back, pulled his hat over his eyes and gave his mind up to the work of assisting his body to catch a little rest. The remainder of the party, having an understanding beforehand, quietly withdrew one by one. One of them passed around to a bush near Dougherty's feet and took a tin rattle-box from his pocket. Another stood close to the young man's legs and in a suppressed voice, when the signal was given, whispered:

"For heaven's sake! Dougherty, don't move so much as a finger! A big rattlesnake is right under your leg!"

Dougherty was flat on his back, eyes covered, arms sprawled out, and his voice trembled as he replied:

"My God! What shall I do?"

"Keep perfectly quiet! It is your only hope! If you even raise a finger he will dart his fangs into you!"

The man with the rattle-box gave it a shake, and reached out and laid a club across Dougherty's legs, while the other man moved off about twenty feet and exclaimed:

"Heavens! what can we do? If we shoot we may kill Dougherty!"

The club was rolled off on the ground and the victim whispered:

"For mercy sake kill it!"

The club was rolled over his legs again, the box shaken, and the man whispered back:

"Be quiet or it is instant death! I think the snake wants to go to sleep, and if you keep still you will be all right."

The box was shaken, the club moved around, and finally the "snake" seemed to Dougherty to settle down on his breast. He dared not whisper for fear of poising it, but one of the men called out:

"There! it is asleep! We'll move away and wait for it to glide off."

The whole crowd moved over behind a bank and laughed, and rolled, and tore up the dirt until they were exhausted, while poor Dougherty lay there like a log, not even daring to draw an ordinary breath. The sweat ran down his face, and started out from his body until his shirt was wringing wet. The fellows took their guns and tramped away, leaving him thus, and were gone an hour and a half. When they returned Dougherty was sitting up, having discovered the joke about five minutes previously. He didn't have a word to say, but there was a whole unabridged dictionary in his eye. They spoke to him, but for an answer he rose up, shouldered his gun and made a bee line for the highway and none of the party has met him since.

Touching Eloquence.

[Detroit Free Press.]

They have a very rhetorical magistrate in Detroit. An Indian was lately arrested for drunkenness, and brought before him:

"Child of the whispering forest, son of the grassy plains, it grieves my spirit to see you here," said his Honor. "Only a few more moons will come and go before you will be gathered to the happy hunting grounds of your brothers gone before. You are an aged tree. Time has shorn you of your strength. You can no longer chase the wild condurango and follow the roebuck. The buffalo grazes in front of your lodge, and your arm is not strong enough to draw the bow. The rumbling thunder and the sharp lightning make you afraid. Once you could not count the camp fires of your tribe, so many did they number; now there is nothing left of your tribe but yourself, two old army blankets, and a shot gun with the lock out of repair. Son of the forest, why is this thing thus, and what do you mean by coming into my trapping grounds and getting drunk?"

"The white chief has spoken many wise words," replied the Indian in measured tones, resting one foot on the edge of a spittoon. "My race has fallen like the leaves—been washed away as water washes out the marks of chalk. I stand alone. My camp fire has gone out, and my lodge is cold and has no mat. Kawnee kekick has tears in his eyes when he looks to the West and no longer sees the smoke of many camp fires. Our great chieftains have fallen, our warriors are dust, and the wolf utters his lonesome howl on the spot where stood our big village. I am sad."

"The red man may go," said His Honor. "I cannot give you back your dead; I cannot cover the hills and meadows with forest again; the wild fox and the deer have sought the deeper glens, and no power can waken the warriors whose whoops rang from hill to river. Go back to your lodge; beware of fire water; keep in nights; vote early and often, and be virtuous and you'll be happy."

—A Philadelphia girl was cured of a nervous disease by attending a minstrel performance in that city. Ever since the metamorphosis of the nine daughters of Pierus, music has mixed itself up considerably in the affairs of the world, and men have even been broken of the bad habit of loafing around the house on Sunday morning by merely living next door to somebody who owns a melodeon.

—Experiments have recently been made at Liverpool with a new mast-head light, intended for ocean steamers. It throws a fine brilliant white light and can be seen distinctly five miles. The light is made from a powder and is thrown through a magnifying glass, something on the magic-lantern plan.

—The high-toned young women who danced with Alexis when he was in this country, will be glad to hear that the young man is well. He has ordered another barrel of American beans.

"I Lickee You."

[Denver Sunday World.]

Hop Gee is a tallow-faced son of the Celestial Empire who lives on Wazee street. His house is a very unpretentious-looking building, consisting of one cramped up little room, in which he and Wah Lee carry on the business of washing and ironing. Hop Gee is the recognized head of the firm, and performs the fine-haired part of the business—takes in the washing and money. The twain sleep one above the other in narrow bunks, where they may often be seen stretched out enjoying a smoke. A descendant of the warlike Hannibal has occasion to pass by their residence to and from his work. One morning last week he chanced to pass when these partners in the "washee" business were partaking of their matutinal meal. The African was indiscreet enough to halt and watch the pair as they dexterously handled their chop-sticks in disposing of their rice. He had never seen the operation before, and his surprise found expression in "Well, I be —!" at the time moving on. At this moment he was discovered by Hop Gee, who stepped to the door and demanded an explanation of his conduct. Some hot words passed which brought from John the threat, "I lickee you." This was too much for the black man, who put down his dinner pail and advanced toward his adversary, declaring that he would "wear him out in a minute."

The trouble had now gone far enough to draw a crowd of a dozen Chinamen from neighboring shanties, several of whom expressed their opinion of the "niggee" in the most stunning adjectives known to the wicked Melikan man. Encouraged by his backing, Hop Gee struck the dusky knight full in the face, which was followed by a well directed blow between the eyes from the darkey, which sent him beautifully to grass. Here commenced a general attack upon the negro by the assembled "washee" merchants, who made it so hot for him that he was obliged to take to his heels. Hop Gee was now placed upon his feet by sympathizing friends, and with Celestial blood trickling down his face he paced the sidewalk, boastfully exclaiming, "One Chineeman whippee three niggee!"

Saratoga Fried Potatoes.

A correspondent of the Springfield Republican says: Saratoga potatoes, the poetry of a common life and costly charm of Delmonico's and Parker's, can be made in perfection in any kitchen by the use of a sharp blade set slanting into a trough with a narrow slit in the bottom, two wire screens or sieves, and a common spider. Select eight large potatoes, pare them and slice very thin with the cutting machine, soak them in cold water for two hours, and stir common table salt into the water, one teaspoonfull to a quart, and allow them to remain in the brine half an hour longer. Pour them upon the screen to drain, and put on a spider with a pound of clear lard over a brisk fire. Wipe the sliced potatoes dry on a towel, wait until the lard is smoking hot, and pour a large platefull into the spider. The result is like a small sea in a white squall; and now the cook shows the artistic soul which every votary of that nobiest of the arts must possess to be worthy of the name. Patient and calm, with steady and incessant motion of the skimmer she prevents adhesion of any too affectionate slices and watches carefully for the tender flush of brownness to appear. Slowly it creeps and deepens until it rivals the hue of the fragrant Havana. Haste then takes the place of caution, lest any martyrs burn for the perfection of others; and they must be quickly spread upon another sieve to drain until dry and greaseless enough for the fairest fingers, then served hot, to melt like a kiss on sweet lips, with a dying crackle like the fallen leaves of autumn.

—The Chinese materia medica abounds in remedies unknown in the healing art as practised by Americans. For instance, Ah May was before a San Francisco court charged with stealing a pair of antlers from a druggist named Dya Hook. The court was astonished when Hook gravely asserted the value of the antlers as $50. But Hook explained that the horns of deer, properly prepared, were sovereign remedy for half the ills of life. The deer were worried and pursued until they dropped from exhaustion, at which time, the active blood has coursed through the antlers. These, promptly removed, were supposed to contain the essential properties of the blood, and, reduced to powder, were infallible curatives. The facetious judge thought that the name of the ultimate preparation might be Chinese hart's horn. Ah May was forwarded to the penitentiary.

—A Mobile negro hit the mark in answering an inquiry as to the reason for the present poverty of that city and the surrounding country: "Now both the white gemmen and the darkies have dun gone crazy on politics. Afore de wah, niggers worked and white folks had money plenty, but now don't neither of dem do no work, and consequently neither of 'em got 'nough to buy corn bread."

—There was an attempt at murder in Cincinnati. A lover of music, coming out of the Opera-house with the delicious strains of Schubert's Serenade still ringing in his ears, met a boy whistling "Mulligan Guards," and smote him to the earth, with terrific force. The police, upon hearing the circumstances, discharged the accused, with apologies for having interfered.

—Alabama, Delaware, Indiana, New York and Wisconsin send one each, and Michigan two persons to Congress this time named Williams, besides the one that Massachusetts did not send. No lack of new Bills for the Congress of 1875.

—Milwaukee News: A party of Sioux Indians stole a patent ice-cream freezer last week, thinking it was a hand organ, and all the big medicine men turned the crank a week before they concluded there was no music in it.

Sagacious Mules.

[Virginia (Nev.) Enterprise.]

A gentleman, who is too modest to allow us to use his name, furnishes us the following instance of sagacity which he yesterday saw displayed by a pair of mules—those curious spotted fellows belonging to Hank Blanchard. Hank and John Fagan were seated in a buggy behind the mules, driving along South C street, near the Divide. Suddenly the animals halted. Whipping and coaxing were alike vain; they would not move. What to make of this Hank didn't know, as the mules had never before so conducted themselves. Seeing that the animals constantly turned their heads in one direction, Mr. Fagan began to look that way to see what it was that so strongly attracted their attention. In a moment he dropped on it. It was a shingle which read, "Hay, $23 per ton," the retail price being $25. The mules had observed this and could not be moved beyond it until Hank got out of the buggy, went into the place, and came back, pretending that he had ordered ten tons of the article at the reduced rates. They then trotted off perfectly content.

—It is said that the cave of Cacahuamilpa is the largest cave in the world. Several persons, who have visited the Mammoth Cave of Kentucky and that of Cacahuamilpa in Mexico, pronounce the latter the larger. A volcanic mountain with an extinct crater covers this cave. It is not described in guide books or books of travel. It has, in fact, never been adequately described. Mr. Porter C. Bliss has twice examined and explored it, the last time in February of the present year. Six hundred persons constituted the last exploring party. They were provided with bengal lights and scientific appliances. After reaching the level, at perhaps fifty feet depth, they proceeded three and three-quarter miles into the interior. The roof was so high—a succession of halls—that rockets often exploded before striking it. Labyrinthine passages leave the main hall in every direction. Stalagmites and stalactites are abundant. Below this cave, at a great depth, are two other immense caves, from each of which issues a branch of a great river, uniting here. These two rivers enter five miles distant at the other side of the mountain, flow parallel, and issue at last together. Vast quantities of bats are the most numerous inhabitants of these caverns.

—They manage it better in the South, and if they dislike a political candidate they don't hesitate to declare their opinions. With that innate delicacy peculiar to the southern blood, Memphis voters recorded their convictions on their ballots as follows: "Memphis, Nov. 3, 1874,—Through thick and thin I'm for United States senator, the pride of our nation, Andrew Johnson, and this my primary vote I want recorded for him as the first choice of the Big Fat Oysterman of Memphis. My desire is to award him one more chance with his shears and one more time to thread his needle. Joseph Farrell." "I vote against Andrew Johnson for the United States senate, for the reason I believe him to be the source of all our dissension since the war, and supremely selfish." "For United States senator vs. A. J., the ghost of Madame Surratt." "For United States senator—The devil in hell against A. Johnson." "For United States senator—Colonel Barney Hughes, the railroad orator."

—George Dawson; I do not say that Mrs. Luther had a great understanding, but she had understanding enough to understand that her husband's understanding was greater than hers, and that is a very great thing for any woman to understand.

Played Out Nostrums.

Will codfish oil cure a consumptive cough? No! Will opiates? No!! Will inhalation? No!!! Can such a cough be cured at all? Yes, it can. Reject all these nostrums; they have been weighed in the balance and found wanting. Try HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR. Thousands upon thousands are using it. Millions have tried it. So far it has never disappointed any man or woman who took it for a cough or cold, however violent.

A Triumph Of Chemistry.

Among the numerous health-giving discoveries of pharmaceutical chemistry, none has achieved a more transcendent and lasting success than Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Of course there is a reason for this. It would have been impossible to palm off, for nearly a quarter of a century, upon so shrewd a people as the Americans, a meritless article, or have established by mere advertising such a reputation as the Bitters enjoy, if they did not possess a substantial title to public confidence. The truth of this statement is proved by the fact that bogus nostrums, no matter how extensively puffed, usually enjoy but a transient existence, are then discovered to be worthless, and discarded. Hostetter's Bitters, on the contrary, after a career of twenty years, were never so popular as they are to-day. Soon after their appearance it became manifest that they possessed in a remarkable degree the power of toning and regulating the human system, and to-day they rank as the standard restorative of the age.

What is the matter?—Your hair looks dry and dead, it breaks off, and is falling out. You dress it with an alcohol and oil mixture or some well advertised Hair Restorer. The hair is poisoned, it is killed. If you would restore it, cast away these things, go buy a bottle of Rexine which can be had of any Druggist, and we will guarantee a change for the better at once! 9

—When we walk near powerful machinery we know that one misstep and those mighty engines will tear us to ribbons with their flying wheels, or grind us to powder in their ponderous jaws. So when we are thundering across the land in a railroad carriage, and there is nothing but an inch of iron flange to hold us on the line. So when we are in a ship and there is nothing but the thickness of a plank between us and eternity. We imagine, then, that we see how close we are to the edge of the precipice. But we do not see it. Whether on the sea or on the land the partition tha divides us from eternity is something less than the oak plank or a half inch iron flange; the machinery of life and death is within us. The tissues that hold the beating powers in their places are often not thicker than a sheet of paper, and if that thin partition rupture it would be the same as if a cannon ball had struck us. Death is inseparably bound up with life in the very structure of our bodies. Struggle as he would to widen the space no man can at any time go further from death than the thickness of a sheet of paper.

On Tuesday night, one of the freight trains on the Eastern Railroad broke in two between Newburyport and Salisbury. A following freight train ran into the detached cars, smashing and setting them on fire and nearly destroying the engine Champion, and badly injuring the engineer, Mr. Henry Hill. The "wild" cars, seven or eight in number, were running back at a rapid rate on a down grade when the collision occurred.

The Civil Service.

KITTERY, Nov. 14th.

To the Editor of the Portland Press:

I see you are opposed to the re-election of Hannibal Hamlin to the U. S. Senate. So am I, and I will tell you why:

Last July I was discharged from a clerkship on the Navy Nard to make room for young Goodwin of Wells, whose only claim to the place is based on the fact that he is the son of his father—and that his father is a "Hamlin man."

My claim to the place is based on the facts that I am a one legged cripple of the late rebellion, and as good if not a better Republican than the youngster who displaced me or the honorable Senator who backs him.

Yours truly,

GEO. A. PUTNAM.

A Reply.

KITTERY, Nov. 17th.

To the Editor of the Portland Press:

In your paper of yesterday appears a communication from this town, which, from its falseness in nearly every particular, I think must have been made for political effect. I am the "Young Goodwin, of Wells" referred to in the article, and, as an act of justice to myself and Mr. Hamlin, request you to publish the following denial of Mr. Putnam's statement:

I was appointed to the position of store clerk in the department of steam engineering, in February, 1874, and not in place of Mr. Putnam, who was at that time a writer in the same department, appointed by New Hampshire or Massachusetts influence and who has never to my certain knowledge held a clerkship in the yard. In the reduction in the civil establishment last July, I was retained at a reduced salary in the identical position to which I was appointed in February, as above stated, thereby neither dispossessing, nor injuring any one. At this time Mr. P. was discharged from his position as a writer and immediately re-employed at reduced compensation in a position which he has since occupied and is still holding at the present time, thus simply bearing a reduction equal with my own.

In relation to "claims to office" I will say nothing, but as regards politics allow me to state, that if I were less a "Republican't than one who seldom takes sufficient interest in the elections to deposit his own ballot, I should hardly deserve to be called the "son of my father."

Yours truly,

R. C. GOODWIN.

Ice for Diphtheria.

Since that dreadful disease, diphtheria, has made such dreadful ravages in New York, and is, indeed, obtaining a foothold in Baltimore, it may not be out of place at this time to call attention to a recent letter, written by Dr. George Cragin, of the Oneida Community, which thus explains a novel but very successful treatment of diphtheria:

Recognizing as we do the spiritual nature of disease, as well as its physical characteristics, our first efforts were to arouse the spirits of the patient by means of criticism to resist the power and leaden influence of disease, which enveloped him like a cloud, stupefying and befogging every mental faculty and effort of the will to repel the intruder. The invariable effect of criticism was to stir up the patient in mind and heart to make a stout defence against the attack, to resist the influence of the disease with might and main, and to throw him into a sweat, this at once relieving the fever.

The next thing was to prepare a quantity of ice broken into small bits, which could be easily taken into the mouth and swallowed or allowed to melt, letting the piece slip as far back as possible, around the roots of the tongue, tonsils and upper part of the throat. This application of ice was made every ten minutes, day and night, until every vestige of the canker had disappeared and the inflammation had subsided. During the day the patients, unless very sick, could help themselves to the ice if a supply were placed at the bed-side or near at hand; but during the night watchers were required to give the necessary lump of ice every ten minutes, one nurse attending to several patients. This course of treatment was faithfully followed as long as there were any traces of the disease about, and although we had over sixty cases during the fall and winter, and many of them very severe, we lost not a single patient, after adopting the ice criticism treatment.

Of course, the application of criticism would be difficult, if not impossible, under ordinary hospital routine or private practice, even if desired by the patient, but the application of ice can be made under any circumstances, and there must be but few who cannot afford a few pounds of medicine so cheap, so pure, and so powerful.

The efficacy of the ice treatment lies in its being applied continuously until every trace of the fungus growth has disappeared and the swelling and inflammation has subsided. Acids and alkalies and fashionable gargles will in some measure check the morbid growth, but they cannot allay the fierce heat and reduce the inflammation of the swelled throat. Ice will do both and not injure the patent. Try it.

—Governor Dix, a fortnight before the election told a good story about one of the causes of the "tidal wave." One of his farm laborers on Long Island held a conversation with a fisherman, who was his neighbor. When the latter was asked how the fishermen would vote, he said, "Well, I don't know. I like Governor Dix. I think he has been a good governor, but times are hard; business is dull. We don't average now more than half an eel to a pot and I don't know but there had better be a change."

New Publications.

"THE FROZEN DEEP," written by Wilkie Collins and published by William F. Gill & Co., Boston, is a book of 189 pages or more. It is a narrative thrillingly written, but is little more than readable. A drama of the same title was put on the stage by Mr. Collins nearly twenty years ago, and its success led him to write it into a story, the moral of which is that he who conquers himself achieves the greatest of victories. The heroine of the tale is a clairvoyant and the man who conquers himself is a discarded lover. For sale at the book-stores.

"CHRISTIANITY AND SCIENCE" is the title given to a volume of lectures delivered on the Ely Foundation to the students of the Union Theological Seminary by Dr. Andrew P. Peabody. They constitute a concise and strong presentation of Christianity as in harmony with science. "The proposition which I hope to maintain," says the author in the first lecture, "is that science and Christianity, as I have defined them, so far from being mutually hostile, and from excluding and negativing each other, in fact rest upon the same foundation, and must stand or fall together. They appeal to precisely the same sorts of evidence, and there is no principle on which these can be admitted in behalf of science, and set aside in the case of Christianity." He then proceeds to consider in order the three sources of proof, or evidence, which science and Christianity have in common,—namely, testimony, experiment (or experience), and intuition, the first at much the greatest length. This is pre-eminently a book for the times. It has to do with a subject that is of vital importance to the whole Christian world, and its distinctness, power and clearness of exposition adapt it to popular use. The work is calculated to exert a wide and powerful influence in strengthening the faith of Christians, and clearing the vision of those who doubt. Published by Robert Carter & Bros., New York.

"MY SISTER JEANNIE," a novel, by George Sand, translated by S. R. Crooks, is one of the series of handsome volumes, comprising the works of this famous French writer, which Roberts Brothers, of Boston, are publishing. The translation is good, and the story is one of exciting interest, partaking of the peculiar characteristics of Madame Dudevant's novels. For sale by J. H. Foster.

"MISCHIEF'S THANKSGIVING," and other Stories, by Susan Coolidge, illustrated, and "MORE BEDTIME STORIES," by Louise Chandler Moulton, also illustrated, come to us from Roberts Brothers, Boston, marked by the artistic beauty which distinguish all the books of these careful publishers, and as charming in their instructive and fascinating fictions as they are attractive in their various embellishments. For sale at the bookstores.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great native artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt to establish an art journal, did not prove the apathy of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign art.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its unobtrusive place does not allow a due appreciation of the exceedingly artistic treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious intersperse of landscape, marine, figure, and animal subjects, unites in the highest interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literary portion of THE ALDINE is a peaceful accompaniment, not to the artistic features, with only such pretensions as not to interfere with the paper or pictures of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait of Gordon, in the same noble dog whose picture in a previous issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Truest Friend"

Will be welcome to every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the picture is executed so true to the life, that it seems almost the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his dog Newfoundland Joe (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it, and he says it is so well, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 1000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at one thousand dollars, are distributed in sums as the subscribers fall, and the results of each series are made, and the distribution made at the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This income only applies to subscribers who pay in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union,

SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.

(No charge for premium.)

Specimen copies of THE ALDINE, fifty cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates, and no subscriptions will be sent to the local canvasser, publishers thus relieving the subscriber, except in cases where the subscription is paid in advance, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON, President.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, &c.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,

SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

NO. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"Mr. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. We think this unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend the inventor to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

A True Story.

[BY MARK TWAIN.]

It was summer time, and twilight. We were sitting on the porch of the farm house, on the summit of the hill, and "Aunt Rachel" was sitting respectfully below our level, on the steps,—for she was our servant, and colored. She was of mighty fame and stature; she was sixty years old, but her eye was undimmed and her strength unabated. She was a cheerful, hearty soul, and it was no more trouble for her to laugh than it is for a bird to sing. She was under fire, now, as usual when the day was done. That is to say, she was being chaffed without mercy, and was enjoying it. She would let off peal after peal of laughter, and then sit with her face in her hands and shake with throes of enjoyment, which she could no longer get breath enough to express.

At such a moment as this a thought occurred to me and I said:

"Aunt Rachel, how is it that you've lived sixty years and never had any trouble?"

She stopped quaking. She paused, and there was a moment of silence. She turned her face over her shoulders, towards me and said, without even a smile in her voice:

"Misto C——, is you in earnest?"

It surprised me a good deal; and it sobered my manner and my speech, too. I said:

"Why, I thought—that is, I meant—why, you can't have had any trouble. I've never heard you sigh, nor never seen your eye when there wasn't a laugh in it."

She faced fairly around now, and was full of earnestness.

"Has I had any trouble? Misto C——, I's gwyne to tell you; den I leave it to you. I was born down 'mongst de slaves; I knows all 'bout slavery, 'cause I b'longed to 'em my self. Well, sah, my old man—dat's my husban'—he was lovin' an' kind to me, just as kind as you is to yo' own wife. An' we had chil'en—and we loved them chil'en just de same as you loves yo' chil'en. They was black, and de Lord can't make no chil'en so black but what dey mother loves 'em an' wouldn't give 'em up, no, not for anything dat's in dis whole world.

"Well, sah, I was raised in de Virginny; but my mother was raised in Maryland; an' my souls! she was terrible when she'd git started! My lan' but she'd make de fur fly! When she'd git into dem tantrums, she always had one word dat she said. She'd straighten herself up an' put her fists on our hips an' say 'I want you to understan' dat I wasn't born in de mash to be fool by trash! I'se one o' de ole blue hen's chickens, I is!' Ca'se, you see, dat's what folks dat's born in Maryland calls deyselves, an' dey's proud of it. Well, dat was her word. I don't ever forgit it, becas'se she said it so much, an' becas'se she said it one day when my little Henry tore his wris' awful, an' most bu'sted his head, right up at de top of his forehead, an' de niggers didn't fly around fast enough to 'tend to him. An' when dey talk' back at her, she up an' she says, 'Look a-heah!' she says, 'I want you niggers to understan' dat I wasn't born in de mash to be fool by trash! I'se one o' de ole blue hen's chickens, I is!' An' den she clear' dat kitchen an' bandage' up de chile herself. So I says dat word, too when I's riled.

"Well, bym-e-by my ole mistis says she's broke, an' she got to sell all de niggers on de place. An' when I hear dat dey gwyne to sell us all off at oction in Richman', oh de good gracious! I know what dat mean!"

Aunt Rachel had gradually risen, while she warmed to her subject, and now she towered above us, black against the stars.

"Dey put chains on us an' put us on a stand as high as a dis po'ch,—twenty foot high,—an' all de people stood around, crowds an' crowds. An' dey'd come up dan an' look at us all roun', an' squeeze our arm, an' make us git up an' walk, an' den say, 'Dis one too old,' or 'Dis one lame,' or 'Dis one don't 'mount to much.' An' dey sole my ole man, an' took him away. An' dey begin to sell my chil'en an' take dem away, an' I begin to cry; an' de man say 'shut up yo' dam blabberin',' an' hit me on de mouf wid his han'. An' when de las' one was gone but my little Henry, I grab him close up to my breas' so an' I ris up an' says, 'You shan't take him away,' I says, 'I'll kill de man dat teches him!' I says. But my little Henry whisper an' say, 'I gwyne to run away, an' den I work an' buy yo' freedom.' Oh, bless de child, he always so good! But dey got him—dey got him, de man did; but I took an' tear de clos' mos' off of 'em, an' beat 'em over de head wid my chain; an' dey give it to me, too, but I didn't mine dat.

"Well, dah was my ole man gone, an' all my chil'en, all my seven chil'en—an' six of 'em I hain't set eyes on agin to dis day, an' dat's twenty-two years ago las' Easter. De man dat bought me c'long in Newberry, an' he took me dah. Well, by-me-by de years roll on and de waw come. My marster he was a confedrit colonel, an' I was his cook. So when the Union took dat town, dey all run away an lef' me all by myself! Wut de other niggers in dat mansus house. So de big Union officers move in dah, an' dey ask me would I cook for dem. 'Lord bless you,' says I, 'dat's what I is for.'

"Dey wan't no small fry officers, min' you; dey was de biggest dey is; an' de way dey make dem sojers mosey roun'! De gen'l he tole me to boss dat kitchen; an' he say, 'if anybody come meddlin' wid you, you jist make 'em walk chalk; don't you be afeared,' he say: 'you's 'mong frens, now.'

"Well, I thinks to myse'f, if my little Henry ever got a chance to run away, he'd make to de Norf, o' course. So one day I comes in dah whah de big officers was, in de parlor, an' I draps a kurtchy, so, an' I up an' tole 'em 'bout my Henry, dey a listenin' to my troubles jest de same as if I was white folks; an' I says, 'What I come for is because if he got away an' got up norf whah you gemmen comes from, you might 'a' seen him, maybe, an' could tell me so as I could fine him ag'in; he was very little, an' he had a sk'yar on his lef' wris' an' at de top of his forehead.' Den dey look mournful, and de gen'l say, 'How long sence you los' him?' an' I say, 'Thirteen year.' Den de gen'l say, 'He wouldn't be little no mo', now—he's a man!'

"I never thought o' dat befo'! He was only dat little feller to me, yit. I never thought 'bout him growin' up an' bein' big. But I see it den. None o' de gemmen had run across him, an' dey couldn't do nothin' for me. But all dat time, do' I didn't know it, my Henry was run off to de Norf, years an' years, an' he was a barber, too, an' worked for his se'f. An' bymeby when de day come, he ups an' he says, 'I'se done barberin',' he says; 'I's gwine to fine my ole mammy, less'n she's dead.' So he sole out an' went to whar dey was recruitin', an' hired hisse'f out to de colonel for his servant; an' den he went all froo de battles everywhar, huntin' for his ole mammy; yes indeedy, he'd hire to fust one officer an' den anoder, till he'd ransacked de whole Souf; but you see I didn't know nuffin 'bout dis. How was I gwyne to know it?

"Well, one night he had a big sojer ball; de sojers dah at Newbern was always havin' balls an' carryin' on. Dey had 'em in my kitchen, heaps o' times, 'ca'se it was so big. Mine you, I was down on such doins'; be-'ca'se my place was wid de officers, an' it jest rasp' me to have dem common sojers cavortin' 'roun' my kitchen like dat. But I always stood roun' an' kep' things straight I did; an' sometimes dey'd git my dander up, an' den I'd make 'em clar dat kitchen mine, I tell you!

"Well, one night,—it was a Friday night—dey comes a whole plattoon f'm a nigger ridgment dat was on guard at de house—de house was headquarters, you know,—an' den I was jist a bilin'! Mad? I was jist a boomin'! I swelled roun', and swelled roun', I was jist was a itchin' for 'em to do somefin' for to start me. An' dey was a waltzin' an' a-dancin'! my! but dey was havin' a time! an' I jist a swellin' an' a swellin' up! Pooty soon 'long comes sich a spruce young nigger a sailin' down de room wid a yaller wench roun' de wais'; an' roun' an' roun' dey went, enough to make a body drunk to look at 'em—an' when dey got abreas' o' me, dey went to kin' o' balancin' aroun' fust on one leg an' den on t'other, an' smilin' at my big turban, an' makin' fun, an' I says, 'Git along, wid you!—rubbage!' De young man's face kin' o' changed, all of a sudden, for 'bout a second, but den he went to smilin' ag'in, same as he was befo.' Well 'bout dis time, in comes some niggers dat played music an' b'long to de ban', an' dey neber git along widout putting on airs. An' de very fust air dey put on dat night, I lit into 'em! Dey laughed, an' dat made me wuss. De res' o' de niggers got to laughin', an den my soul alive but I was hot! My eye was jist a—a blazin'! I jist straightened myse'f up so,—jist as I is now, plum to de ceilin', mos'—an' I digs my fists into my hips, an' I says, 'Look-a-beah!' I says, 'I want you niggers to understan' dat I wan't bawn in de mash to be fooled by trash! I's one o' de ole blue hens chickens, I is!' an' den I see dat young man stan' a starin' like he fo'got somefin' an' couldn't 'member it no mo'. Well, I jist marched onto dem niggers, an' dey jist 'cave away befo' me an' out at de doo'. An' as dis young man was goin' out, I heah him say to another nigger, 'Jim, you go 'long an' tell de cap'en I be on han' 'bout eight o'clock in de mawnin'; deys somefin on my min';' he says, 'I don't sleep no mo' dis night. You go 'long an' leave me by myse'f.'

"Dis was 'bout one o'clock in de mawnin'."

"Well, 'bout seven I was up an' on han', gittin' de officers' breakfast. I was a stoopin' down by de stove.—an' I'd opened de stove doo' wid my right han', an' I'd jist got de pan o' hot biscuits in my han', an' was 'bout to raise up, when I see a black face come arounder mine, an' de eyes a-lookin' up into mine, jist as I'se lookin' up close under yo' face now; an' I jist stopped right dah, an' de pan begin to tremble, an' all of a sudden I knowed! De pan dropped on de floo' an' I grab his lef' han' an' shove back his sleeve, an' den I goes for his forehead, an' push de hair back, so, an', 'boy?' I says, 'if you ain't my Henry, what is you doin' wid his welt on yo' wris' an' dat skyar on yo' forehead? De Lord God of heaven, be praised, I got my own ag'in!'

"Oh, no, Misto C——, I hain't had no trouble. An' no joy!"

The Course of the "Prohibitionists."

The prohibitionists meet in convention at Concord on the 2d of December to nominate candidates for Governor and Railroad Commissioner. The matter of nominating candidates for Congressmen is undecided. It is understood that the policy of nominating independent candidates for the legislature, which defeated about thirty republicans last year, will be abandoned. By running a third candidate for Governor the prohibitionists hope to defeat an election by the people and throw it into the legislature, where only the two candidates receiving the most votes are eligible for the Governorship. This is a roundabout way of arriving at a conclusion, but the prohibition element has peculiar ways of enforcing its peculiar views. Probably sixty per cent. of the 2097 persons who voted for Blackmer this year will find the platforms of the republican and democratic parties sufficiently clear to enable them to stand upright on them. Of the remainder, there are doubtless some who prefer a course tending to discourage republicanism and correspondingly elevate democracy. The one evident fact, however, dawning upon those who are conscientious in their belief is that democracy promises the most radical change while republicanism is content with its former record. Well meaning men sometimes make the most mischief from mere stupidity, and the Blackmerites of 1874 furnished ample illustration of this axiom. We do not class the leaders of the Spring campaign among the "stupids," for there seems little doubt that they preferred a democratic victory with the prospect of a license law to a republican triumph and continued ascendency. Petty spite often obscures the visions of men whose professions deceive their best friends. If the Blackmer-Jasper-Millen tribe do not repeat their little game of last year, it will be because they cannot so successfully control voters who were duped last March. It is a singular and lamentable fact in politics that the people who generally hold the balance of power are those who cannot attain leadership in any existing political organization. Some are too virtuous to associate with the masses for the general good, while others have too little principle to consider a ballot worth more than its value in whiskey. And politics often makes these two classes bedfellows.

Readables.

The Polar expedition to be fitted out in England will start next May.

The Concord People has arrived at the sapient conclusion that the GAZETTE "is opposed to the repeal of the prohibitory law quite as strongly as it is to the nomination of a candidate for Governor who would sustain that law." The People would get at our views more fully if it would believe that we favor the enforcement of all laws on the statute book, where practicable. Many laws are a dead letter in some places, but serve well in others. When better laws can be enforced it will be time to change.

The case of Theodore Tilton vs. Henry Ward Beecher has been set down for December 8

As Fernado Wood has aspirations for the Speakership of the next House of Representatives, it may be just as well to recall the fact that during our great rebellion he was the individual who called upon Lord Lyons, the British Ambassador, while in New York, in order to obtain the assistance of England to secure the independence of the slaveholding States. It was really an atrocious treason, but it commended him strongly to the favor of the Bourbon democracy. Mr. Wood was also an unflinching and unrepentant advocate of the back pay grab, but that has not affected his reputation in the least with the democracy.

Gratz Brown, the tail of the Greeley kite, is now laboring to secure an election to the United States Senate in place of Carl Schurz. It will be a grand triumph for the Cincinnati reformers to have Carl shelved by Gratz.

Mr. Vest, of Missouri, "pants" for the honor of being Carl Schurz' successor.

The prohibitionists of the first district of Cayuga county, N. Y., gave 313 votes for their candidate for Assembly, and the result is that Mr. Hardy, the republican candidate, is defeated by a plurality of 130. The behavior of these temperance "reformers" was most unreasonable and most unjust, and the result is the defeat of one of the most consistent temperance men in the last legislature, while the democratic candidate, who was virtually elected by temperance votes, was recently in the liquor trade!

The robbers of the American Express office in Cincinnati have finally confessed where they secreted the plunder, and most of it has been found.

The New York World, democratic, states that the total vote of the State for Governor falls 45,649 short of that polled in 1872.

It is believed that the loss of life by the disaster to the Empire, at New Orleans, will reach 30 or 40.

The Turkish authorities have sentenced thirty-two of the perpetrators of the Montenegrin outrages to twenty years' imprisonment.

The Philadelphia Press calls attention to the fact that when the democracy of Pennsylvania turned over the State government to the republicans the State debt was $40,000,000, and had been increasing yearly. Under republican rule it has been reduced one half. But the Press now expects to see it increase again under democratic mismanagement.

The Graphic says Mrs. Francis D. Moulton will appear as a witness against Beecher, and Gen. Butler will be present as her counsel to protect her from annoyance by the opposing counsel. The New York Judges have affirmed the decision of Justice Neilson denying Beecher's demand on Tilton for a bill of particulars.

State News.

In 1861, the office of the Democratic Standard in Concord was destroyed by a mob, and five suits to recover damages were brought against the city by members of the Palmer family, the proprietors of the paper. Four of the suits have been settled at various times, and the last, that of John B. Palmer vs. City of Concord, was settled, by Mayor Kimball, who paid Palmer $2000, for which he agreed to withdraw all suits and claims. All the necessary papers were passed. The suit was for between $7000 and $8000. In a trial of the case, last year, the city recovered a verdict against Palmer for all the costs.

Eaton & Harvey, a new firm, professing to be commission merchants, have absconded from Nashua, leaving liabilities of $11,000.

Canaan has been excited by a recent breach of promise case, wherein the plaintiff is a gentleman seventy years of age, and the defendant a blushing maid who has trifled with his young affections. The matter has been amicably settled.

An infantry company has just been organized at Pittsfield, consisting of fifty men, who are to be equipped immediately by the State. The company is called the Weston Guards, in honor of Governor Weston. Asa O. Carr is Captain.

The citizens of Peterboro' recently contracted with a Philadelphia firm for six-inch water pipes for Main street, for protection from fire. The pipes were laid, hydrants properly adjusted and the power applied, and the result was that the pipes, being of light weight and of poor quality, burst in several places with less than 100 pounds' pressure. They are to be replaced, at the expense of the contracting firm as soon as possible.

A company is forming to build a horse railroad in Exeter, running from Portsmouth avenue, in the easterly part of the town, to the depot of the Boston and Maine Railroad, via Front street and Lincoln avenue.

The tannery of Otis Jones at Wilmot Flat, was entirely destroyed by fire, on the 17th, with all the stock and machinery. Loss about $12,000; insured for $3500.

On the 17th, a fire broke out in a house on High street, in Lebanon, owned by George Brown, which was damaged to the extent of about $1000. Loss fully covered by insurance.

Letter from Boston.

BOSTON, Nov. 18.

Our burnt district is an old story and is mostly in excellent shape. Better buildings, as a rule, to resist fire or the ravages of time, can not be found in this or any other country. While such streets as Franklin, Devonshire, etc., cannot boast their old wealth of beauty and grandeur as solid granite blocks, more ornate than anything of the kind in this country (if in the world,) the mass of the business streets below Washington, to Summer and beyond, can display most admirably constructed buildings for the various kinds of business that centre there.

The widening and straightening of streets has cost Bostonians an almost fabulous sum, but if one can judge from the improvements in the new District, this will prove a grand investment. To those who watched the fire on that terrible Sunday, a little more than two years ago; who saw its tongue lap up the granite blocks across ordinary streets; who listened to the roar of the flames, the screams of the steamers, the falling of walls, the explosion of mines; these wider avenues and occasional squares (all anything but square) must give renewed confidence.

There was an election here a week or two since, but no one seems to know much about it. If Gov. Gaston is not more judicious in the use of his veto than the late lamented Talbot, the people will doubtless wish that the republican party had won. The result proves beyond a doubt that the descendants of old Puritan stock will not submit to sumptuary laws.

I notice the advertisements in your paper because I can't help it. Every son of Portsmouth reads his home paper with the same fervor with which a genuine Celt bows down and worships "a bit of the ould sod." The "Chichester cradles" advertised by Geo. T. Comins & Co. are an excellent article, worthy of inspection, while the doll's cradle is a perfect gem as a present for children.

I observe that you also advertise the great Wholesale Paper Collar Warehouse of Emerson Leland & Co. I have taken much pleasure in visiting their fine premises on Boylston street, and gained some idea of the immensity of their business. Of only two brands—or styles—for which they were agents, twenty millions were sold last year. They sell a great variety of styles, and also all other desirable neck-wear for gentlemen. For the benefit of humanity (if humanity is as hard upon a shirt as I) I wish to recommend the Sans Pareil and Burlock shirts; they are the only ones I have ever found that would not wrinkle and crush under my harsh treatment.

Above this house, I visited a busy place, where seventy or more girls were making the "Jaqueline corset," so favorably noticed at our recent Fair. Of course I cannot dilate on the merits of this article, but I was greatly interested in viewing the different processes of cutting, fitting, sewing, laundrying, etc.

Miss DeMontford, lately in your city, is delighting thousands of our citizens at Beethoven Hall by her wonderful mesmeric displays.

I enclose a bill of a wonderful doctor who claims to have treated over 200,000 patients in ten years. Either they were wonderfully "patient" or were "treated very shabbily." Twenty thousand a year would be at least sixty a day, and that would only allow ten minutes each in ten hours' work. It is time such charlatanism was exposed. HERO.

Melancholy Justice.

"Somehow or other, soda water isn't what it used to be," sighed His Honor, as he leaned back behind the pile of warrants and brushed the chestnut shucks off his lap.

"And the world itself seems a dreary waste of to me," replied Bijah, a sad look coming to his eyes. "I sometimes don't care how soon I am called upon to go."

"My feelings exactly," added the Clerk. "This world has no more pleasures for me."

The wind sighed drearily around the gables. A dog under the table uttered a mournful howl. A small boy in the corner wiped his eyes on his hat. The entrance of half a dozen additional spectators, together with the thunder-like noise of a passing dray, acted to snap the link of sadness, and His Honor forced a smile and told Bijah to reach in and grab the first person he could get hold of. * * * His name was Winn. He admitted that he could not buy a door-knob if brick houses were selling at a shilling apiece, and he further owned up that he had sat on the dock for hours and looked the wolf of starvation in the face.

"I don't think this world has any further use for you," remarked His Honor, after taking a long look at the prisoner. "I see you haven't any get-up-and-vote-twice in your nature, and your character has been allowed to tumble around until you feel like an old omnibus horse."

"Don't abuse me," replied the prisoner in a mournful voice.

"But it annoys me to see a big, fat hulk of a loafer idling away his life and chewing apple-rinds to keep from starvation. I'd get under a pile-driver, go to sleep on a railroad track, or walk off the wharf before I'd drag out such a life. However, it's no use talking to you. Consider yourself elevated for three months, and when that's out come back for some more."

Played Out Nostrums.

Will codfish oil cure a consumptive cough? No! Will opiates? No!! Will inhalation? No!!! Can such a cough be cured at all? Yes, it can. Reject all these nostrums; they have been weighed in the balance and found wanting. Try HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR. Thousands upon thousands are using it. Millions have tried it. So far it has never disappointed any man or woman who took it for a cough or cold, however violent.

A Triumph Of Chemistry.

Among the numerous health-giving discoveries of pharmaceutical chemistry, none has achieved a more transcendent and lasting success than Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Of course there is a reason for this. It would have been impossible to palm off, for nearly a quarter of a century, upon so shrewd a people as the Americans, a meritless article, or have established by mere advertising such a reputation as the Bitters enjoy, if they did not possess a substantial title to public confidence. The truth of this statement is proved by the fact that bogus nostrums, no matter how extensively puffed, usually enjoy but a transient existence, are then discovered to be worthless, and discarded. Hostetter's Bitters, on the contrary, after a career of twenty years, were never so popular as they are to-day. Soon after their appearance it became manifest that they possessed in a remarkable degree the power of toning and regulating the human system, and to-day they rank as the standard restorative of the age.

Last Chance.

But a short time remains for the purchase of tickets in the Fifth Gift Concert of the Public Library of Kentucky. Agents have been notified to make returns from the 20th to the 25th inst., but for the convenience of those who may have failed to supply themselves through the agents, CASH orders will be filled at the home office up to the evening of the 28th, and if any money should come too late it will be promptly returned to the party sending it. n16,17,20

Four Men Drowned.

Messrs. Selden Tarlton and Albert Bickford of Newcastle saved the life of a man named George Mitchell, one of the crew of fishing vessel J. W. Bradley of Rockport, Mass., about ten o'clock Wednesday night. From all that can be gleaned, Mitchell and four others of the crew of the Bradley had been up town and as Portsmouth groggeries offered ample opportunity to obtain whiskey, the five got befuddled and in returning to their vessel in a small boat while the tide was running rapidly were capsized just below "Pull-and-be-d—d Point" where the tide of the ocean meets that of the river and makes quite a "sea." Four of the five—John Lowe, Warren Stillman, John J. Griffin and George Breene—were drowned. Griffin leaves a wife and two children. The cries of Mitchell brought Messrs. Bickford and Tarlton to his rescue.

Educational.

The first of a course of six or eight free lectures pertaining to schools and the education of our youth, was given at Mechanics' Hall, on Wednesday evening, by Rev. Carlos Martyn. The hall was well filled and a few went away unable to get good seats. The audience was select in its character, being composed of that better class of the community who are interested in the good work of properly educating the children. The lecture of Mr. Martyn was prefaced and supplemented with singing by a class of scholars from Mr. Sherburne's school together with a trio of boys from Mr. Kidder's school on Cabot street,—both being under the tutelage of Miss Franklin.

Mr. Martyn's subject was "The Meaning of our Schools," and was an eloquent and scholarly discourse, showing the speaker to be as thoroughly posted in mental education as he is in moral. He divided his subject into three distinct parts, the physical, mental and spiritual, each requiring careful attention. He likened these several branches to a well appointed three-story dwelling house, whose ground floor represented the physical, the second story the mental, and the third the highest or spiritual faculties. To the cultivation of each of these, the same care should be exercised as that of a wise builder in the erection of a perfect dwelling.

It would be impossible to do justice to the lecturer by attempting even a synoptical report of it, as it abounded with apt illustrations and allusions that could be best appreciated by listening to the lecture. It is a compliment due the reverend gentleman to say that the manager, Mr. E. P. Sherburne, displayed much wisdom in his selection of such a speaker to inaugurate this promising course of educational lectures. And we will here take occasion to remind the public that the next of the series will be delivered, Monday evening, Nov. 30th, by Professor Sanborn of Dartmouth College, whose subject is not yet known. It would be well for those who contemplate attending the above entertainment to be on hand for a seat, as Mechanics' Hall has already proved itself too small to accommodate all who are interested. The expenses attending this course of lectures (Mr. Martyn very generously gave his services) are considerable, being defrayed by the school teachers, aided somewhat by a generous public. Such being the case, it is thought not wise to lease a larger hall, and thereby necessitate the diminishing of the number of lectures. Hence our citizens may depend upon being accommodated in proportion to their generosity. There can be no question in regard to the necessity of keeping alive the school interests and all that pertains to the proper training of the rising generation, and these lectures will, without doubt, prove salutary in this direction. We heartily second the movement.

Laconics.

William Bodge, Esq., nearly 82 years of age, died in this city on Thursday evening, very suddenly, having been about town in apparently good health during the forenoon. He was as honest as his days were long. He was once Surveyor of the Port of Portsmouth.

An effort will be made to secure liberal appropriations from the present Congress that the work at different navy yards may be more steady and permanent.

U. S. S. Speedwell will be taken out of the dry dock to-day.

An estate valued at from $50,000 to $75,000, goes to the town of Kittery to establish an academy, on the decease of a sister of Mr. R. W. Traipe, who left this large estate for that purpose, subject to this provision.

United States steamer Plymouth has arrived at New York.

Among the most gifted and successful vocalists in this country are the Hyers Sisters (colored) of California. Their fame was fairly made at the great Boston Jubilee, when, from sheer merit, they occupied, with Madame Leutner, Madame Rudersdorf, and Mrs. West, the position of highest honor among the twenty thousand voices who participated in that grand jubilee of song. Those who have heard them agree in pronouncing their song gifts truly wonderful.

The Eastern Railroad has won the suit which was brought against it by a peddler named Dollivan who lost a foot at West Lynn.

One of the encouraging signs of the times is that a popular "show" drew only a small audience on Wednesday evening, while the address of Rev. Carlos Martyn on "The Meaning of our Schools" was listened to by an audience limited only by the size of the hall.

Mr. Israel P. Miller has been appointed keeper of White Island Light. We understand that Mr. Miller will spend his leisure hours in the completion of certain literary labors on which he has been engaged for a year or two past. A host of friends will make calls on the new keeper next summer.

The Caroline Richings-Bernard Musical Union left this city with $100 less than it brought in, $250 being the daily expenses of the company and $150 the receipts here—yet the noble city fathers obliged the manager to pay a license of ten dollars!

The people of Kittery are agitating the construction of two new bridges, one over 300 feet long, to Badger's Island, and the other across Spruce Creek.

It Hurt His Feelings.

There was poetic justice in the retribution poured out upon the amorous Charles Perrin, a young carpenter at Detroit, Mich., a few days ago. Charles had fiery red hair and a face as freckled as a bran sieve; yet these need not have been against him, but that his subsequent conduct disclosed him devoid of those amiable traits looked for in a lover. In short, Charles proved himself to be by nature a vicious scamp. He became enamored of a very worthy young lady, but she did not reciprocate his attachment. Perhaps she comprehended all of Charles' bad traits and regarded him as the miserable scalawag he was, unworthy to have any girl. She told him plainly that she could never think of marrying him, yet treated him courteously. This enraged Charles, and he panted for revenge. He called upon the lady one evening as usual, but the bottle he carried in the rear pocket of his pantaloons did not contain what gentlemen usually carry in a pocket-flask. He besought the young lady to take a walk with him, but she refused to go. He then importuned to see her alone; this she also declined. The crisis at last had come. He would spoil her beauty forever, and had just got ready to draw the bottle from his pocket when (we follow the faithful chronicler of the Free Press) "something bit him. He thought it was a dog, but it wasn't. The cork had worked out of the bottle, and his coat-tails were turning brick color at the rate of a yard a minute. The acid wasn't content with the coat-tails, but struck out for flesh, and in about a minute the young man was dancing around the house as if to escape a bullet. Shouting and whooping he got out of doors and threw off most of his clothing and rolled in the mud, and it was some time before any one could find out whether he had snakes in his boots or had sat down on a brad-awl. He was so badly burned that two men had to help him to his boarding-house, where a physician dressed his burns." The fellow will probably take his food standing for some time to come.

—That wonderful child, who is always saying queer things, turns up this time at Stockton, Cal., and his latest is thus recorded: "During the storm recently, which was accompanied by a touch of thunder and lightning, a bright little four-year-old boy of one of our citizens advanced a new idea concerning electricity, which is entirely at variance with the views of scientists. He had been eagerly watching the play of the lightning, and finally besought his mother to tell him what it was, or what caused it. She told him, but the explanation did not agree with his childish fancy. He shook his head, and looking up at his mother while his eyes sparkled and danced, exclaimed: "No, no, mamma, I know what it is; it's God winking!"

—In an Illinois town, not long ago, one of the attractions of an evening entertainment was to be a tableau of the Prodigal Son, after Dubufe's painting. But the best-looking young man in the place had been selected for the prodigal, and every one of the girls wanted to be the woman who should hang on his shoulders and look lovingly at him; and that broke up the business.

—J. Proctor Knott is now Knott the congressman.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or hurriedly interval character of ordinary periodical publications. It is an elegant repository of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the finest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior excellence, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception, and is unprecedented—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The individual features of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not ignore the world's contributions to the representation of the beautiful. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only in regards of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before its patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, sometimes will always be given to some famous foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from a mere perusal of such works.

The artistic excellence of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and will be continued. The engraving of a size more appropriate to the enhancement of details than can be attended by any other publication. The judicious interpretation of landscape, marine, figure, and animal subjects, subject to the highest interest, imparts to the whole the stamp of the work of masters, with only the requisite amount of skill in each subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is chaste and graceful accompaniment, not to overshadow the pictures, with only such text as is needed to explain them, and not interfere with the popular character of the work.

Celia's Moth.

(Appleton's Journal.)

"There he is in the candle again!" exclaimed Celia, stopping her needles, and whisking the half finished stocking at a circling moth obstinately bent on perishing in the flame.

"I wonder what moths were made for?—stupid things!"

"Made for the candle, perhaps," said Rory with a peculiar inflection in his lazy voice. Celia gave him an impatient glance, but resumed her knitting without answering him.

"Its all very well to call them stupid," continued Rory, presently, but if the truth were told, don't you suppose the candle likes the game, too?"

"No, I don't," answered Celia.

"Well, you ought to know," said Rory with that queer accent again.

Celia threw down her knitting-work a second time. "I declare, Rory, I won't be hinted at like this!"

"What can I do but hint—if you won't let me speak out?" said Rory.

"Well, speak out, then; make an end of it; may be it's better so."

Rory's reply to this was to get up and come round the table to where Celia sat, whereupon Celia, in her turn quietly slipped round and seated herself in his empty chair. Rory did not dare to follow her, but he looked at her in a discomfited and imploring way that raised a ghost of a smile upon her hitherto stern mouth. But she immediately became judge-like again.

"Now just sit there, and say out what you have to say."

"What's the use?" muttered Rory, sulkily at being out-maneuvered. "You know it as well as I do."

"Know what? Say out I tell you!"

"Why that I—that you—O Celia! that I love you so much I can't say it!" cried Rory, a sudden gush of boyish tenderness melting through the little crust.

Here Celia dropped one of her knitting needles, dived down for it, and came up with a red cheek. But her reply was practical in the extreme.

"Well, suppose you do, what does it amount to? I wouldn't marry a shirk anyway."

This time it was into Rory's dark face that the blood flew, and he bit his lip. Celia's words had stung deeper than she knew, or meant perhaps.

"What would you have me do?" he said at last.

"Anything! Get a hammer and break stones on the road work rather than nothing."

"But why should I work, since my father left me enough—"

"Why should you work?" interrupted Celia. "Why, for the sake of working. Yes, I know—more's the pity; your father left you just enough to dawdle along. Yes, you do dawdle, Rory—no use scowling like that; what else can you call the way you've spent your time ever since you came home? When it's rainy, you dawdle off with a fishing rod; and, when it's pleasant, you dawdle under the trees with a book all day long, and then in the evening—"

"I dawdle around the candle," completed Rory sarcastically.

"Yes, exactly; and I can tell you that the candle doesn't like it!"

"Doesn't it?" said Rory, getting up. "Well, good night, then, candle; I won't dawdle around you any more this evening, anyhow!" With which speech he took his six feet of laziness out of the room.

Celia stopped the click of her needles and listened for his tread on the stairs. She did not hear it, but what she did hear the next minute, was the outside door closing with a bang that indicated Master Rory to be in no very gentle mood. A little smile and then a little frown came over Celia's face.

"Well, I can't help it; I can't see him running to waste so, and hold my tongue. But where has he gone? To Susy Tibbits', perhaps. Well, if he chooses to revenge himself by going to Susy Tibbits', why, he must, that's all. I suppose he won't expect me to sit up for him; he knows that there's the pantry window for folks that's out late courting."

But Rory had not gone to Susy Tibbits' albeit certain of being suffered there to hover round the candle as long and as close as he liked. He had gone down to the mill stream to a mossy stone where he had been wont, as Celia said, to dawdle with a fishing-rod; but there was no fishing-rod in his hand now, and no dawdling in his mood either. The word "Shirk" was still rankling within him; it was not by any means the first time that Celia had scolded him for being lazy, but the epithet somehow seemed to point and drive home the reproach in quite a new way.

Rory was lazy, there is no denying that. You saw it in the languid grace of his well-developed figure; in the peculiar curve of his lips; in the very way in which the heavy lids rose slowly from his eyes, as if it were hardly worth the trouble; in motion and outline, as in coloring, the Southern mother was betrayed in him. Yet, underlying all the tropical warmth and softness, was the firmer stratum that came from his New England ancestry on the other side; and just as you were surprised, when the black lashes were lifted, to see a pair of deep blue eyes set in the olive face, so you were surprised sometimes to see those large sleepy eyes kindle into a keenness of comprehension and energy foreign to his whole exterior. To repeat, the rock lay under all, only it ay so deep that it was seldom touched. But it had been touched. He had left Celia in one of those flashes of anger not at all unusual with him; but he seated himself now on the stone by the mill-brook, with an uncommonly well-defined purpose of thinking it all out; "it" being Celia, himself and his own position with regard to her and things in general.

What that was, does not require many words to explain. Rory—and here it may be remarked that he did not owe his Irish name to any Irish blood, but to the inability of one of his father's farm hands to—as he phrased it—get his tongue round the little fellow's name. For Captain Trent, with that peculiar taste in nomenclature not unfrequently to be observed in the New Englander born and bred, had called his boy Rosario, after the South American settlement where he had met his wife; and this appellation being unmanageable to more tongues than Pat McGinnis', that worthy's solution of the difficulty had been speedily adopted by everybody. Rory Trent, then, was the orphan son of a South American Spaniard and a roving New Englander, who had been a sailor and a little of everything else before becoming a settler in Buenos Ayres, where he had made considerable money in sheep which he afterward lost in speculation. Shortly after his marriage, the fancy took him to return to his native town, which he accordingly did, richer than when he left it by a wife and a fortune. But he did not retain either very long. The dark-eyed Peruvian pined and drooped in that uncongenial air; and before the village folks were tired gossipping about her outlandish garb and ways, one bleak November day, they were bidden to a hushed assembly, where "the foreign woman" lay rigid enough now, her outlandish garb exchanged for colorless graveclothes; then the black, frozen sods of the little New England cemetery closed over the stranger from the far-away land of the vine and the palm, and there was nothing left to tell of her save that mound and the motherless little boy.

Capt. Trent followed his wife before many years, but not until he had succeeded in making ducks and drakes of his recently acquired wealth by rash speculation, and the undertaking of a New England farm on a South American scale, the result to be expected from more zeal than discretion. That accomplished—concluding, perhaps, that he had about exhausted this world—he betook himself to another, leaving Rory, with the wreck of his property—just enough as Celia had said, to let him dawdle along through life. Boy and property were confided to the care of the captain's half-brother, Jacob Wetherell, who gave the lad a home during his minority, sent him to college—this being expressly stipulated by the testator, with the exaggerated ideas of the advantages of that institution peculiar to those who have not shared them—and he altogether a father to the fatherless boy.

The provisions of the will had been duly carried out. Rory, grown up, had passed his four years within the university walls, and left them wiser, no doubt, by all that experience of prank-playing and authority-cheating which are among the benefits of a collegiate course. Otherwise, it cannot be said that he particularly distinguished himself. He had just graduated, and returned home at the age of twenty-two, healthy, handsome, and lazy, with all his life before him, and no apparent notion of what to do with it beyond smoking, idling, and making love, in season and out of season, to his cousin Celia Wetherell.

As for the last pastime, no one, seeing Celia, would be disposed to blame him. She was the type we all know in New England, and shall hardly meet without it; a mixture of fun and gravity, sentiment and shrewdness; so pretty, it seemed that she must be good for nothing, and so capable, one felt that she ought to be ugly; kind, keen, and clever; fresh and sweet as an opening brier-rose, with all the rose's bloom and some of its thorns—as luckless Rory could testify. Occupying herself from morning till night, she looked with extreme disfavor on his purposeless existence, as she regarded it. But then it happened, he had one purpose and that was to make her his wife; and so when she said to-night, with such uncompromising plainness, that she would never marry a shirk, the words went straight home as no other could have done. He could not get rid of them; the mill-current seemed to ripple to their tune; they formed the basis of the thoughts of anger and mortification that ran through his mind while he sat on the stone thinking it out, and out of the plan he had taken shape before he returned home to let himself in at the pantry window, unheard by anybody but Celia, who, though she would not sit up for folk that staid out late courting nevertheless did not sleep till she had heard said folk come in.

The next morning at breakfast, Rory astonished his Uncle Jacob by inquiring if there were not some books of his father's on South America somewhere about the house.

"I guess so," answered the old farmer, intent on the carving of a pink-and-white ham, artistically picked out with black pepper spots. "But what do you want of South American books, Rory?"

"Only because I'm going there myself," was Rory's startling answer.

Celia improvidently dropped five large lumps of sugar, one after the other, into her father's coffee-cup, and the old man himself left the knife quivering half-way in the tender ham.

"You going to South America!" he repeated, wrinkling up his eyebrows, the better to stare at Rory. "Why, bless the boy, he ain't waked up yet!"

"On the contrary, Uncle Jacob, I've just waked up," answered Rory, with a side glance at Celia. "And quite time, too. I must see something of the world, you know, and I can't be always hanging round here doing nothing."

Considering that, at that time, yesterday, Rory had not appeared to find the slightest difficulty in such a mode of life, it was no wonder if Uncle Jacob was somewhat surprised by the decided way in which this statement was advanced. But, as the nephew stuck to his plan, the old man was soon brought to regard it as an excellent idea. So the thing was settled, and Rory, with an eager energy which Uncle Jacob declared he had not thought was in the boy, set about his preparations forthwith, and gave no rest to himself or anybody else till all was ready.

"Good-bye, Celia," he said, as he held his cousin's hand at the moment of his departure. "The moth's going where he won't trouble you for one while at any rate! The Lord knows if I'll ever come back, but, whatever happens, whether I live or die, you shan't call me a shirk again." Then he looked at her with his great, pleading, deep-blue eyes, which said all that pride tied his tongue from saying, kissed her twice, thrice, passionately, and was gone.

Celia, perhaps, if she could have ordered all exactly to her liking, would not have had her moth fly quite so far off, but she was not the one to look back, her hand once put to the plough; she had spoken for Rory's good, come what might of it; if he was thereby lost to her, he was gained to himself, and she was not going to regret her work because it was working itself out beyond her anticipation. So she kept on cheerily along the round of her daily duties, those multifarious cares known only to farmers' wives and daughters, who, whatever happens, must be prepared for seed-time and harvest. Celia was as capable a little mistress as ever lived, and her quick eye and step pervaded the house like a spring breeze; she was here and there, and everywhere, providing for the men and overseeing the maids, scolding them, too, sometimes, no doubt, all through the week, and then on Sundays ready in her place in the choir, with a voice and face as fresh as her go-to-meeting-best, laid up in lavender and rose leaves; leading in short, the old fashioned, orthodox village life, including, perhaps, the "sparking," who knows? For she was not only the prettiest girl in the town, but an only child whose father possessed substantial charms of another sort.

Rory, meanwhile, was doing well "over there," as they called the great, far-away tropical country, whose distance in crossing he seemed somehow to have bridged over for those left behind in the red house under the northern pines and maples. He had been very lucky, he wrote, in the partnership into which he had entered; was not making money with a rush, exactly, but was certainly not losing it; was getting very rich in experience if not in gold. His letters were assuredly prosaic enough; they dealt less with description than with facts, and with sentiment least of all; the wildest stretch of imagination could not have made them into love letters; they might have been read aloud on town meeting day without raising a blush on Celia's cheek. Yet still there was always some allusion which nobody but herself could understand, something which, without any direct appeal, was meant to refresh old memories which might yet be alive in her heart. So at least the girl fancied, until she remarked certain other allusions, more frequent of late, to the cousin whom he had found over there, the Cousin Juniata, who owned miles of vineyard, who had the largest eyes and the smallest feet, and was the best bolero-dancer of all the senoritas in that whole region. Then a doubt gradually formed itself in Celia's mind, a doubt strengthened by the innocent comment of Uncle Jacob, who had no more notion of any special tenderness between his daughter and his nephew than if they had been a pair of lovers in the moon instead of right under his silver-bowed spectacles. "The boy's following in his father's track," chuckled the worthy man, and in her heart Celia believed that her father was right. Then over her knitting, she would try to make a picture for herself of Juniata, as she looked dancing that outlandish but no doubt bewitching dance, the bolero, and the Spanish girl's black eyes would flash and her little feet twinkle curiously all through the staid New England conversation, till, finally, when Mark Wilson, or young Dr. Heath, or Lewis Saunderland from over the hill, had said good night and gone away, Celia would betake herself to her chamber, there to piece out the broken images again in dreams, and fancy she heard Rory's rich voice singing serenades under the thick-blossomed creepers, and saw the gleam of gold in Juniata's black cloud of tresses, till she started suddenly broad awake, with the sun in her eyes and Peter's whistle in her ears, as he went out to fodder the cattle in the early morning. Then she would half smile as she rose and made her simple but dainty toilet, and standing before the glass, shook loose over her fair face the thick waving locks that needed no foreign ornament to give them the gleam of gold; then she would go lightly down stairs, for she must set the whole household machinery in motion, she must see that others ate and drank, she must eat and drink herself, and amid her multiplicity of occupations, she had no time to pine and pale, and so the new day would wear pleasantly enough to a close, like those that had gone before, and should follow after it.

So four years slipped away, and then—Rory came home, suddenly, without a word of warning; he wanted to give them a surprise, he said. And a huge surprise it was; only, after a little he had dropped so completely into his old place, that it seemed as if he had never been away. So said Uncle Jacob.

"You ain't a bit changed, not a bit," went on the old man. "You're brown enough—yes, but then you always was coffee-color, you know, Rory, hey?"

"Yes, I know," answered Rory, returning the old man's laugh. "But I am changed for all that, Uncle Jacob. Ask Celia."

"Well, well, perhaps you be, perhaps you be," said the old man. "My eyes ain't what they were—nor my glasses neither. I shall have to buy a new pair, I guess." But the change to his nephew was one which no new pair of glasses—nor even of eyes, unless they had been Celia's—would have enabled Uncle Jacob to see.

"Suppose we shan't keep you long," continued he, presently. "You will be in a hurry to get back again?"

"No, Uncle Jacob," answered Rory; "I've come home for good. I mean to try to turn to account here what I've managed to pick up out there."

"Ada! didn't I say so? Going to do just as his father did!" chuckled the old farmer, oblivious, apparently, of the fact that neither his father's agricultural nor matrimonial ventures had thriven in transplanting "But you'll have to go back, though, to fetch your bride. When's it to be, eh, lad? When's the wedding coming off?"

"The wedding?" repeated Rory, dreamily, then, with a start and a smile, "Oh, some time next year, I expect."

"Then it really is to be," thought Celia as she watched Rory's unconscious face. How strange that she should have been the one to send him half across the world to find a wife in this unknown cousin, who otherwise would doubtless have remained unknown to him forever. Well she did it for the best, she told herself, as often before, but this time she could not thus console herself quite so readily. And thus then Roy's eyes turned suddenly full upon her, and she blushed guiltily, and got up and went into the kitchen, remembering all at once that Nancy Walsh was a raw girl, and was probably spoiling whatever she had in hand.

Two or three days passed by much as of old.

"Do you expect anybody to night, Celia?" asked Rory, one evening.

"No, not that I know of," answered Celia, in surprise, "Why?"

"Nothing, only as Dr. Heath was here last evening, and Lewis Sunderland the night before that, I was wondering if you had one for every evening in the week?"

"What nonsense, Rory!" said Celia, turning away in search of something in her work basket.

"Is it nonsense?" said Rory. "I'm sure I hope so, for then we have a prospect of an evening."

A very quiet evening they seemed to have a prospect of, for it was a long time before either of them spoke a word. Both, perhaps, thought of just such an evening, four years before.

"There's your moth back again, Celia," cried Rory, suddenly.

Celia looked up with a start, first at Rory, and then at a large moth which, in fact, was circling uncertainly round the candle.

"Yes, but he's grown shy; he'll be off again in a minute," said the girl, unconsciously following out the thought of her mind.

"What odds do you bet on that?" asked Rory.

"Betting is wrong, sir," said Celia, demurely.

"Not between cousins," returned Rory, with equal gravity. "This coral-headed pin of mine to—let me see—to that rose in your hair that Mr. Moth stays and singes himself?—what do you say?"

Celia did not refuse, and silence consented. They kept quiet, and watched, and waited. Not for long. The winged simpleton advanced, retreated, advanced nearer, executed a few zigzag flights and eccentric curves, then made a blind dash at the flame, and fell scorched on the table.

"Well?" said Rory, coming round to Celia, and his eyes looking straight into hers, while he detached the rose. That required time and patience, for it was a thorny bud, and, by the time Rory had finished, one of his fingers was bleeding.

"You pay dear for your whistle," said Celia.

"No dearer than I expected," answered Rory. "I knew it was a briar-rose," and again he looked at her. He did not go back to his former seat then, but drew a chair beside her, and leaned his elbow on the table where the moth was still feebly fluttering.

"Poor old fellow!" said Rory, looking down at it with a queer smile. "Come and die in sweetness." And he picked it up and placed it on the rose-leaves. "Moths like roses," he said.

"You're thinking of butterflies," said Celia, knitting away most industriously.

"What's the difference?" asked Rory.

"Oh, I don't know—ever so much."

"Well, yes, so much, at any rate, butterflies are rovers, and moths are constant—to the candle."

There was another pause.

"Do you remember just such an evening as this, four years ago, Celia," said Rory, at last, "when you called me a shirk, and sent me about my business?"

"Oh, Rory! I did hope you wouldn't remember all my silly speeches against me."

"Against you!" repeated Rory. "Those were the kindest words you ever spoke to me. Made a man of me. Came just in time, too, for, a little longer, and I should have settled down into a regular village lounger—like old Tom Wiley, perhaps,—hanging about the stores, sitting on molasses barrels, and drinking old Jamaica. Might have come to that, who knows?"

Both laughed.

"But, Celia, I'm not a shirk now, and—is there any chance for me? You know you're all the world to me, dear."

The transition from molasses to sentiment was so abrupt that it confused Celia for a moment. Then she remembered Juanita, and her lips compressed. How dare he play with her like that?

"Rory, you ought not to talk so to me," she said quickly.

"Why not?" said unabashed Rory.

"Oh!—you know."

"No I don't. Is it Lew, or is it Dr. Heath, Celia?"

"No, no! But—ain't you going to marry your cousin?"

"I hope so!"

"Well, then!"

"Well," repeated Rory, "well, what of that?"

"What of that!" echoed Celia, with a wondering glance at him, as if to make sure he had not been taking just a drop of old Tom Wiley's specific—"why, you can't marry two people, and you know you said yourself the wedding would be next year!"

"Oh, you're thinking of Juanita? Yes, but her wedding won't be mine, you must know?"

"Not—yours?"

"Of course not! She's going to marry a Spanish fellow as high-heeled as she is. They danced into love together, and now they're going to dance into matrimony."

"Oh!" Scarcely to save her life could Celia have spoken more than that one word, nor have looked up into the dusky blue eyes she felt were waiting for her.

"Did you think Juanita was the cousin I hoped to marry?" said Rory, in a lower voice. "I've got another cousin—Celia—"

Silence; and Celia knitting as if for a wager. Rory leaned forward and captured both her hands in defiance of the daring needle-points and the imminent risk of another wounded finger. "Celia," said he, "it Dr. Heath or I?".

"It's—not Dr. Heath—" said Celia, and then knitting and needles became entangled in hopeless confusion, and I am afraid some of the stitches in that stocking had to be taken over again.

* * * * * * *

"Talking of Juanita, Celia," said Rory, by-and-by, "as I told you, the packing me off was the making of me; but, all the same, wasn't it something of a risk? How did you know but I might turn out a butterfly instead of a moth?"

"No danger," laughed Celia, ignoring all her previous doubts and fears. "Once a moth, always a moth!"

Rory answered this saucy speech as it deserved. But his reply cannot be set down on paper.

There is no ground of truth whatever in a report circulating to the effect that there is reason to believe that a man named West, a discharged convict from State prison, was the murderer of Miss Hanson at Brookfield. West was convicted of arson, and Miss Hanson was a witness in the case, but before going to prison, West fully confessed the crime. There is not the slightest reason for believing that West harbored any ill feeling toward Miss Hanson. A Triumph of Chemistry.

Among the numerous health-giving discoveries of pharmaceutical chemistry, none has achieved a more transcendent and lasting success than Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Of course there is a reason for this. It would have been impossible to palm off, for nearly a quarter of a century, upon so shrewd a people as the Americans, a meritless article, or have established by mere advertising such a reputation as the Bitters enjoy, if they did not possess a substantial title to public confidence. The truth of this statement is proved by the fact that bogus nostrums, no matter how extensively puffed, usually enjoy but a transient existence, are then discovered to be worthless, and discarded. Hostetter's Bitters, on the contrary, after a career of twenty years, were never so popular as they are to-day. Soon after their appearance it became manifest that they possessed in a remarkable degree the power of toning and regulating the human system, and to-day they rank as the standard restorative of the age.

MESSRS. CUTLER BROS. & CO.

In ordering another small lot of your invaluable VEGETABLE PULMONARY BALSAM, I should like to tell you what I know about it, in order that others may have the benefit of my EXPERIENCE.

Since this Balsam first came to my notice, in 1848, I have kept it constantly in the house, never allowing myself to be out of it over night. In all these TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

It has not failed in a single instance in my own case to give the desired relief; and I will say the same in regard to my mother, whose LIFE WAS SAVED

By it as I cannot but think. Hers was a case of Congestion of the Lungs, and although attended by a most skillful physician, she seemed to fail constantly, so that we despaired of her recovery, when an old friend and neighbor persuaded her to try this Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam. The result was most gratifying, I assure you.

RELIEF WAS IMMEDIATE

And recovery rapid. She is now over 82 years old, and is active and well. Whenever she gets a severe cold, which happens once in a while, she takes thirty to sixty drops, according to the violence of the cough, which has always yielded in a day or two by taking the Balsam only on retiring at night. With the

BLED AT THE LUNGS

And coughed frightfully, had night sweats and was fearfully reduced. She left Boston for her country home, 150 miles away, as we supposed to die. I sent her a bottle of your Balsam, and soon had the satisfaction to hear that she was much better. She continued taking it for a while and got

ENTIRELY WELL.

And is living now, which fact is to be ascribed mainly to the use of the Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam.

Very truly yours, JOHN CARPENTER.

"MEDICAL WONDER"

Prepared by Dr. O. C. Gage, Saratoga, New York.

Geo. C. Goodwin & Co., Wholesale Agents, Boston.

To The Afflicted.

In presenting this valuable remedy to the public, I would say that the almost unlimited and wholly unprecedented success it meets with, stamps it at once as the GREATEST DISCOVERY OF THE AGE. On its merit I am willing to stake my reputation as a physician; and so confident am I that it will not disappoint the most sanguine expectations of a single invalid, that I am prepared to make contracts on the basis of CURE OR NO PAY. With those who have tried other medicines without relief until they have become too faithless to make another attempt. To substantiate what I claim, for this Wonderful Vegetable Remedy, I do not propose to import far-fetched testimonials, but will simply refer to well-known, reliable living witnesses in your own State.

The afflicted's obedient servant,

DR. O. C. GAGE, Saratoga, N. Y.

Home Testimony.

MRS. IRA S. APPLETON, Hillsboro' Bridge, N. H.; spinal and kidney diseases, confined to bed, and doctors failed to raise her; her husband procured "Medical Wonder," and she now writes, "I am able to do considerable work."

J. E. MORRILL, Franklin; scrofulous humor, says nothing has ever helped him like "Medical Wonder."

MRS. C. P. ORDWAY, Centre St., Concord; confined to bed and had been sick two years without benefit by several physicians, for female and kidney diseases; took Dr. Gage's "Medical Wonder," and was cured in a month.

ANDREW J. PEASLEE, Sutton, N. H.; humor, debility, disease of liver, lungs, &c.; most wonderful recovery.

REV. O. J. WAIT, Franklin, N. H.; wife sorely afflicted; took "Medical Wonder" with great success.

GEO. W. EVANS, Derry; difficulty of bladder and stomach, humor, weakness, &c., cured, and went to work.

MRS. J. W. FIFE, Suncook, N. H.; female weakness, dropsy, nervous prostration, &c.; discharged a blood girl.

We would also refer to Mrs. Wm. Shepherd and daughter, and Ebenezer Newhon, Manchester; Hiram Stanyan, Chichester; Alton H. Hall, Canterbury; Mrs. Warren Glover, Hooksett; Thomas Wilson, Dunbarton; Mrs. Walter J. Farrar, Hillsboro' Bridge; J. P. Elo, Hooksett; Miss R. A. S. Hoyt, Mrs. S. J. Elo, Manchester; Mrs. C. P. Rideout, Milford; Joseph Davis, Hollis; Ellen Proctor, Pittsfield; M. J. Leavenworth, Andover.

Local Matters.

City Council.

In Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Thursday evening, a resolution was passed providing that in all cases, when leave is granted to encumber any street for building or other purposes, it is to be understood that the person encumbering the street is to be held liable for any accidents and damages occasioned thereby.

Leave was granted Albert C. Anderson & Co. to encumber High street for building purposes.

The use of the Court House for three days in December was granted to the "Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals."

A communication from the City Solicitor relative to the claims of Rev. J. K. Aldrich and Samuel M. Joy was accepted; and it was voted that the claimants have leave to withdraw.

The committee on finance, to whom was referred the petition of the School Committee for $75 to defray the expenses of the lectures in the interest of the schools, reported that the Board had no power to grant the petition. Report accepted and adopted.

The following resolution was passed:

Resolved, That if the Common Council concur, the joint committee on city lands and buildings enquire into and report upon the expediency of adopting some plan of bringing into the market for sale as building lots, such parts of the City Farm as may be suitable for that purpose.

Adjourned for two weeks.

Laconics.

On Thursday evening a large number of the members of the Court street Society made a friendly call upon their pastor, Rev. John A. Goss, taking with them a generous supply of the good things of this life, viz.: a barrel of flour, two barrels of apples, a large quantity of sugar, tea, coffee, potatoes, etc.,—and last, but not least, Wm. D. Fernald, Esq., on behalf of the company presented a good sized roll of greenbacks. The hearty thanks of the pastor were given for this renewed evidence of love and esteem. The evening was spent in a social manner, and at an early hour the visitors retired to their homes, evidently believing that "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

The revenue cutter Gallatin is ordered to cruise from Portsmouth to Nantucket.

The new manager of the secret service is fortunate in selecting J. Horace Kent, Esq., for the New England agency, and is striving to raise the reputation of this branch of the service by the substitution of respectable men for some of those whose records are not unblemished. Mr. Kent possesses rare abilities for the business. The Dover Enquirer says: He is admirably qualified by natural aptitude and experience for his new duties, and will make, we are sure, a shrewd, efficient and faithful officer in the discharge of the difficult and delicate trusts devolving upon him.

Lieut. John D. Driggs and Passed Assistant Surgeon George F. Winslow have been ordered to the receiving ship Sabine.

C. H. Mendum & Co. offer their large stock of dry goods at lower rates than the same quality of goods has been offered in Portsmouth since 1861. The stagnation in business brings prices away down to "hard pan," and Mendum & Co. have availed themselves of the situation to tempt customers to buy. Go in and look over the stock, which is to be largely reduced by New Year's.

The first snow storm of the season commenced Friday afternoon, was mixed with rain in the evening.

As the docket was being called at the Circuit Court by Judge Rand, a motion was made to refer a certain case, by Hon. Samuel M. Wheeler of Dover, whereupon Hon. Albert R. Hatch, objected; Judge Rand ruled that the burden of the argument was upon the party who objected as he understood the statute. Upon this point, Mr. Hatch stated his views that the legislature never intended and in his opinion never did pass any such law. Quick as thought, Hon. W. H. Y. Hackett, said, "Your Honor, when our late Speaker has had a little more experience in legislative matters he will doubtless learn that the people who make laws know little of what they make." The court and bar enjoyed the reply with a good laugh.

Messrs. Wilson & Magraw have just received an excellent assortment of skates which they are offering at prices to suit the times.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great native artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt to establish an art journal, did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, high, and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, affording subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artist is illustrious of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size most appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details that can be afforded by any interior page. The judicious intermission of landscape, marine, figure, and animal subjects, sustain an unbroken interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment, worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical discussions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait in oil colors, of the fine and noble dog whose picture is a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Truest Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 200 different pieces, valued at over $6,000, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the works of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

The terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all Kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedies agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, &c.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot be advised to employ a more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. A Talk to Reasonable Men.

[Lebanon Free Press.]

We see it stated that the political prohibitionists propose to try again in this State, and will call a convention to nominate a State ticket. Well, if after the experience of last June they do not see the folly of such a course we do not see use of trying to convince them. They had but a single member of the Legislature, a majority of whose members were elected upon a distinctly license platform. But the republican party stood nobly up to the issue, and helped them to wring victory out of defeat, notwithstanding the well understood fact that it would better have served republican party ends to allow the majority to carry their license bill. We are certain that, however a few impracticable leaders may act, the masses of prohibitionists will decide that whatever temperance legislation we may get or save, must be gotten or saved through the instrumentality of the republican party. That party, whether it stand by the most advanced theories on this subject or not, does represent the most advanced legislation practicable.

We sometimes hear this prohibition party compared to the old Liberty party, and a similar history predicted for it. Those who make this prediction are strangely blind to the most obvious fact, that the work of the Liberty party was the organization of a sentiment already existing and common to the civilized world, while the prohibitionists have first to create a sentiment. Clearly, it is folly to organize a party on such an issue alone, until that sentiment predominates, especially if the effect will be to bring into power a party whose principles and whose record are as bad as bad can be, not only upon this but other very important questions, and who promise no amendment.

We were among the first to enlist under the prohibition banner, and we propose to stay under it. With alternating ebbs and tides that sentiment has very appreciably advanced within the last quarter of a century. It is still advancing. We are not discouraged at the slowness of its growth. Certainly no man of sound, impartial judgment will claim a majority for it in any State, save Maine, and possibly Vermont. Outside of the New England and a few other Northern States, it scarcely exists anywhere in the world, as yet. Beyond all question, from two-thirds to three-fourths of the voters of this State are to-day opposed to a prohibitory law. A large portion of these, however, in the republican party, tacitly or openly consent to the existence of the statute, in deference to the sentiments of their political brethren, (a majority, probably, of the party,) simply because it is important, for other reasons, to keep the republican party together. This is the real situation, and it is madness to be blind to it. The question is whether we will avail ourselves of the concession, and so keep the law upon the statute book, and have its aid in working up a sentiment in its favor, by being able to point out the difference between those communities where public sentiment enforces it and those where it is not enforced, or, making an issue of this alone, lose all. We should think the prohibitionists of New Hampshire had run near enough to total defeat to learn something. Reasonable men among them will not forget that, everywhere, the republican party represents the most advanced practicable temperance legislation. Where the issue is prohibition or license the republican party takes the side of prohibition; the democratic party that of license. Where the prohibition sentiment is only so far advanced that the right of towns to prohibit is all that temperance men ask, the republicans favor local option; the democrats favor license. Where the issue is between stringent and loose license systems, the republicans favor the most stringent provisions, the democrats favor the largest liberty of sale. Where the issue is restriction of sale or no restriction, the republicans go for restriction, the democrats for free rum. These facts speak volumes, and, in spite of all the sophistries in the world, will dictate the course of the great mass of temperance men.

—Max Adeler writes in the Danbury News: "A man dressed in sailor costume was up in our criminal court upon a charge of stealing a pair of boots. As he had no counsel, the court appointed a young lawyer to take charge of his defence. The lawyer opened the case with a speech in which he alluded to his client as 'a child of the sad sea waves, a nursling of the storm whom the pitiless billows had cast, a forlorn and friendless waif, upon the shores of time, after a life spent in fierce and heroic contest with raging elements.' Then the defendant was put upon the stand and the fact was revealed that he was a cook upon a Snyder County canal boat, previous to which he had peddled clams in Wilmington. The nursling of the storm is now in jail for six days."

Burned on the Prairie.

[St. Joseph (Mo.) Herald.]

Captain Lackland, a recent citizen of Lincoln, Neb., and well-known in the community, gives us the details of the terrible calamity that overtook the family of Mr. William S. Herndon, a farmer of Gage County, Neb. He says he met Mr. Herndon on Monday night on his way to Lincoln, where he had relations residing and where he expects aid. From Mr. Herndon's own lips he learned the story of his sufferings. Some three years ago Herndon moved to Gage County from Iowa and purchased sixty acres of land nine miles from the county seat. He prospered and was succeeding well until the late disaster, which not only destroyed his property but left him alone in the world, the fire having overtaken his family, consisting of his wife and two children, and burned them to death. Herndon says he noticed the fire miles away on Saturday night, but it was no uncommon thing to see grass burning, and he paid but little attention to it, although his wife seemed considerably alarmed, and before bed-time she had called his attention to it several times. In the morning it was noticed that the fire was burning with more vim, and had evidently come nearer to them. He was still inclined to believe that it would pass around and leave him unmolested, or that it would rain and thus put danger out of the question.

A heavy wind springing up at noon, however, and blowing directly from the fire toward the house, warned him that the danger was growing imminent. His children were now crying through fear, and his wife was importuning him to make the best of time. Arrangements were soon made for the journey, and in a two-horse wagon they started, more than ten miles in advance of the fire, with every probability of being able to get out of its reach. Good time was made by the team, and not until late in the evening, when the wind increased in fury, was there any apprehension of danger. About dusk the wind increased to a hurricane and the flames began to approach them with terrible speed and awful grandeur. Faster and faster they came, and Mr. Herndon says that it was evident they would overtake them in a very few moments. What to be done under the circumstances was a question that had to be decided quickly. The horses had now become unmanageable, and were as likely to overturn the wagon and start for the flames as any other way. A marshy piece of ground was some two miles distant and near this was a small branch of water, from which, he remembered, he had frequently watered his horses. This was the only chance for life, and hastily leaving his wagon and horse to their fate, he started for the marsh, with his youngest child, a lad of eight years, in his arms. It was a struggle for life. Death was coming, and they made one grand effort to get out of its reach, but alas, it was unavailing. We will not undertake to depict the anguish of that father as he was compelled to see the cherished ones of his own heart, those whom he loved even better than his own life blood, sink down, one after the other, and become a prey to that most terrible of all deaths, fire. The little daughter was the first that was overtaken, and the mother was prone to stay and give up her life with her darling, but she kept on, while the flames were yet more than a hundred yards behind, and little Mary was left upon her knees, praying that her Heavenly Father might take her to his bosom, and save her father and mother and little brother from perishing. Death soon came for her, and not long did it wait for the little brother and mother. In a few moments the mother's clothes were on fire, and she was unable to proceed. The father, with desperate determination to save his little son, pushed on, but already his clothes were on fire, and the little boy, the pride of his heart, was struggling to free himself from the tortures, and soon he was at rest in death. His body but hindered the progress of the father, and to save himself he determined to abandon it. Thus freed of all incumbrances, he succeeded in reaching the stream.

After the fire had passed by he retraced his steps, and gathered in one place the blackened and charred remains of his late household. Next day the homes of some distant farmers were reached, and they returned with Herndon and assisted him in the burial.

A Triumph Of Chemistry.

Among the numerous health-giving discoveries of pharmaceutical chemistry, none has achieved a more transcendent and lasting success than Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Of course there is a reason for this. It would have been impossible to palm off, for nearly a quarter of a century, upon so shrewd a people as the Americans, a meritless article, or have established by mere advertising such a reputation as the Bitters enjoy, if they did not possess a substantial title to public confidence. The truth of this statement is proved by the fact that bogus nostrums, no matter how extensively puffed, usually enjoy but a transient existence, are then discovered to be worthless, and discarded. Hostetter's Bitters, on the contrary, after a career of twenty years, were never so popular as they are to-day. Soon after their appearance it became manifest that they possessed in a remarkable degree the power of toning and regulating the human system, and to-day they rank as the standard restorative of the age.

Will codfish oil cure a consumptive cough? No! Will opiates? No!! Will inhalation? No!!! Can such a cough be cured at all? Yes, it can. Reject all these nostrums; they have been weighed in the balance and found wanting. Try HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR. Thousands upon thousands are using it. Millions have tried it. So far it has never disappointed any man or woman who took it for a cough or cold, however violent.

Prepared by Dr. O. C. Gage, Saratoga, New York.

Geo. C. Goodwin & Co., Wholesale Agents, Boston.

To The Afflicted.

In presenting this valuable remedy to the public, I would say that the almost unlimited and wholly unprecedented success it meets with, stamps it at once as the GREATEST DISCOVERY OF THE AGE. On its merit I am willing to stake my reputation as a physician; and so confident am I that it will not disappoint the most sanguine expectations of a single invalid, that I am prepared to make contracts on the basis of CURE OR NO PAY, with those who have tried other medicines without effect until they have become too faithless to make another attempt. To substantiate what I claim for this Wonderful Vegetable Remedy, I do not propose to import far-fetched testimonials, but will simply refer to well-known, reliable living witnesses in your own State.

The afflicted's obedient servant,
DR. O. C. GAGE, Saratoga, N. Y.

MRS. C. P. ORDWAY, Centre St., Concord; confined to bed, and had been treated without benefit by several physicians, for tumor and kidney disease; took Dr. Gage's "Medical Wonder," and was cured in a month.

Captain John Mason.

The memory of Captain John Mason, the founder of New Hampshire, is now likely to be fitly commemorated. An elaborate memoir of him is in preparation, and it is proposed to place a befitting memorial of him in the English church at Portsmouth, England. The following is a copy of a letter recently received by the governor of New Hampshire from Archdeacon Wright on this matter:

PORTSMOUTH (ENG.), Sept. 11, 1874.

Sir: It has been my privilege to live with many Americans around me. In California and British Columbia, as well as in the western States and Canada, I have received from Americans the greatest kindness. You will, therefore, I am sure, pardon my writing to you upon a subject of interest to both America and Great Britain, and especially to the State of New Hampshire. "Captain Mason" was "Captayne" of Southsea Castle,—in other words he was governor of Portsmouth, in the time of Charles I. He left the port of Yarmouth in the Isle of Wight and went with a body of kindred spirits and endured with them the perils and hardships which attended the noble fellows who founded the now renowned State of New Hampshire.

A highly-intelligent American named Jenness has lately been at Portsmouth seeking information about Captayne Mason in order that an accurate history of the great man may be written. He visited our world renowned church, the story of which I forward to you with this letter. In it we have England's noblest soldiers and sailors, as you will read in the story. Now only one object for a memorial remains,—the four gas standards lighting the forty-two sails, of which the first on one side is to Nelson's memory and the other to that of Wellington. I want in a solemn and marked way to connect New Hampshire with old Hampshire,—the hero who was one of the founders in New Hampshire and a governor of Portsmouth with the heroes several of whom have been governors of this vast arsenal.

I write, therefore, to ask if you, Mr. Governor, and your many New Hampshire friends will present the four standards at a cost of £110 (including the brass plate and its inscription on the wall of the chancel) to the memory of Captayne Mason. If so, Sir Hastings Doyle, our present general and governor, and the president of our committee, will gladly communicate your desire, and our secretary of state for war will, I am sure, rejoice in accepting so gratifying an offer. I need hardly observe that it is not the money we seek, for had we a hundred memories they would be speedily applied for. No; what I want is a holy link between old Hampshire and New Hampshire, old Portsmouth and new Portsmouth, old England and a new and already mighty people whom I have learned to honor and esteem. I am sir, yours faithfully and obedient, H. P. WRIGHT.

Mr. George B. Came, a well known carriage maker, formerly of this city, died of consumption last week at North Reading, Mass.

The Hyers Sisters' concert, says the Nashua Telegraph, was one of the most wonderful musical treats ever offered in that city. Miss Anna sings G, above the staff, a note touched by no other singer since Jenny Lind.

The schools in Newcastle have ceased for one week. Our teachers have been competent and faithful, and good success has attended their efforts. Our grammar school, under the instruction of Mr. E. F. Locke, has been remarkably successful, excellent progress having been made in the studies pursued. New studies have been introduced in this school, and we believe that it can deservedly be numbered among the best. The winter term will open with fifty pupils, and being in charge of our present Principal, whose professional training and experience in teaching give assurance of continued prosperity, we anticipate a good degree of advancement. NEWCASTLE.

Sch. E. R. Emerson, from Charlestown, Mass., has arrived at the navy yard with the engines and machinery of U. S. S. "Marion."

—I see a paragraph going around telling of a girl who fell out of a window while listening to a serenade. This reminds me of Peter Lamb's adventure, down our way, a year or two ago. He was serenading one of the Metcalf girls, and she was leaning out of the window, with shutters bowed so that he could not see her. Lamb's little tune contained one high note, and he struck it suddenly and with such terrific force that it made her jump. She lost her foothold, fell out, and described half a somersault, one foot hitting Mr. Lamb squarely in the face, and the other smashing in the top of his guitar. Simply ejaculating "Gosh!" he leaped up from the gutter and fled, under the impression that old Metcalf had thrown a bedstead at him, while Lucretia picked the catgut and bass wood from her back hair and went into the house. Lamb stopped visiting her, and last year he married the widow Jones who has four children and a cowlick.

—At one of the Brooklyn theatres, recently, there was an "infant phenomenon" four years old, who was under an engagement to enact the part of "Spring" in a fairy piece. All went up to the last rehearsal, when Baby, being called upon to go through her part, refused in these terms: "I done dat enough. I done dat every day. I want to do home." No arguments, threats or persuasions could move that correct infant mind. She had "done dat enough," and when the time came for the evening performance she was of the same opinion, and a less acute but more tractable child was hurriedly prepared for the work.

—A Danbury man went off Saturday noon for a half-day of fishing. When he returned he had walked thirteen miles, lost a forty-five dollar watch, sprained his thumb, spoiled an eleven-dollar pair of pants by sitting down on his luncheon, and caught a four-pound mud turtle. He got back in time to help the doctor cut from his oldest boy's foot one of the several fish hooks he had left at home. He took a cursory view of the situation, and went to bed.

—Maggie Mitchell received one vote for Governor in Syracuse.

JOHN S. TILTON.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and information obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The note in illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the delicate engraving treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior paper. The judicious intermission of landscape, marine, figure, and animal subjects, sustains an unbroken interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment, worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical discussions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog; and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) bows at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union,

SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ALVANCE.

(No charge for postage.)

Specimen copies of THE ALDINE, fifty cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no regular agents or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON, President.

MOSES, thorough and tasteful Teacher of Music, from A in its alphabet to composition and arrangement, has concluded not to accept a recent call to go South again, but will retain his permanent location in the grand "Old Town by the Sea" where he was born,—and renews the offer of his services as above, with unabated zeal and love for this branch of human refinement. He is no novice or humbug to beg, borrow or buy bolsters to uphold him in an art he does not fully understand in every phase of its beauty; but would respectfully point to the best of references, WORKS, and ability to discover, develope and train inherent talent to accomplish splendid results. His pupils are shining in private and public, here and elsewhere. His many Musical Exhibitions—such as others seldom or never present to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from fawning favoritism where true merit is too often absent. Terms, $12 for twelve weeks (twenty-four lessons) at his Music Room, or $15 at the pupil's residence, for Piano or Scientific Vocalization, separately or together. Mr. Moses will also Tune Pianos,—a business "familiar as household words" to him,—and solicits orders.

PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

Daily Chronicle.

A Grandson For Thanksgiving.

[Mary H. Gilbert.]

"Hey! Old Peanuts! How much a pint?"

"Twelve cents," answered the old man who presided at the stand.

"But look here," said the ragged little questioner, "couldn't you let 'em go for ten cents, seein' as I want to keep Thanksgivin' and haven't any more than this."

He held up a torn ten cent stamp.

"That's no good," said the old man. "The gover'ment don't take torn ones."

"There is quite a piece off it," said the boy, looking wistfully at the piles of peanuts, "but you could pass it." It was passed on me."

The old man shook his head. "Torn ones don't go," he answered.

"Gosh! that's so," said the boy. "I've tried it in three places. Can't keep Thanksgivin'. I s'pose. Wish I war you."

"Do you?" asked the old man, smiling faintly. "But I am not keeping Thanksgiving either."

"I would, if I war you," said the boy. "I'd eat a whole quart."

"You wouldn't if you had no teeth to eat 'em with," answered the old peanut seller, "and didn't like 'em. Once I cared for peanuts; but that's long ago."

"What do you keer for now?" asked the boy. "How do you like to keep Thanksgivin'?"

"I shouldn't care to keep it at all," said the old man. "I used to keep it; but one day is like another now, and that is the best for me. I have nothing to be particularly thankful for now-a-days, and I don't want to think of the old times."

"How were the old times?" asked the other leaning against the lamp-post close by.

"What'd be the use of telling you?" grumbled the old man. "You couldn't help me—nobody could that I know of."

Yet he went on as if it relieved him to tell his troubles even to the small, ragged boy beside him.

"My boy John went out West and was scalped by the Injuns. I knew how it 'd be; it was in Pennsylvany; but it was a small place and half stones, and mortgaged for nearly all it was worth at that; so he would go to make his fortune, as he said. His wife that he left behind till he cleared his claim fit for her to live on, why, in less'n a year after he was dead, she married again, and they took John's boy with 'em to New York. That's the last I heard of little Johnny."

"But didn't you come to New York to look after him?" asked the boy.

"Yes," answered the old man, "of course I did, or I wouldn't be on this Chatham street corner selling peanuts to-day. She promised to write, but she never did, so at last I couldn't stand it any longer and I sold the old place and came to New York. I got partial track of 'em two or three times, but at last I had to give it up. Then my money was about gone and I set up this stand and have sold peanuts ever since—that's five years. No, there's no Thanksgivin' for me unless I find Johnny; and I never shall."

"Mebbe you will," said the boy. "Things turn up sometimes when you ain't looking for 'em, like this ten-cent stamp. I didn't set any hopes on keepin' Thanksgivin'; but a man says to me, as I was a standin' in Fulton market, 'Would you carry this turkey as far as the Third avenue cars?' So I did. But as sure as my name is Johnny Mooney I was cheated after all, unless you take it."

"Is your name Johnny?" asked the old man. "Well, then, you shall keep Thanksgivin' for me, for your name."

He poured a pint of peanuts in Johnny's hat. The boy held out the torn stamp.

"No, no," said the old man, "throw it in the gutter. I might pass it on somebody that'd go hungry on account of it. I don't want to be wicked if I can't be thankful."

"Then here she goes," said Johnny, tossing the stamp into the gutter, "and thank you, Old Peanuts. But what makes the boys call you 'Old Peanuts?'" he added, cracking a nut between his teeth; "or mebbe it's your name?"

"It's as good a name as any other," said the old man. "I haven't seemed to myself to be John Dorfling since that happened. So I'd rather be called Old Peanuts."

Johnny went down Chatham street crunching his peanuts and hopping with glee, and Old Peanuts leaned his wrinkled cheeks in his hands and sighed.

"May be worse things 'll come upon me by my unthankfulness," he said to himself; "but I can't be thankful. But worse could not come. If I had only died long ago!"

Presently another small boy stopped in front of him—ragged, shoeless and hatless—but with a clean, jolly-looking face.

"Five cents' worth of peanuts," he said, briskly.

Old Peanuts poured the peanuts into the boy's pocket, which he held open to receive them.

"And here's a ten," said the boy.

"A torn one again!" said the old man. "It looks like the very same one offered me just now. Where'd you get it?"

"Out of the gutter down the street," said the boy.

"It must have gone floating down," said Old Peanuts. "Well, they say a bad penny always turns up again."

"Give me the five, quick," said the boy. "I want to buy some taffy with the rest."

"Going to keep Thanksgiving, too, I s'pose," said the old man, "though I'd like to know what you can have to be thankful for."

"Lots," said the boy. "Fustly for this luck. I don't pick up ten-cent stamps every day."

"Well, and what else?" asked Old Peanuts.

"'Cause I'm going to get a splendid dinner. But I must give my hair a-pullin out, or they won't let me in," he said laughing and trying to disentangle the mass of brown hair on his head.

"Who won't let you in?" asked Old Peanuts.

"Why, the Mission," answered the boy. "And it's most time to be there."

"The stamp isn't good," said Old Peanuts, handing it back to the boy.

"Why yes, it is," said the boy. "It's only dirty."

"But it's torn," said Old Peanuts. "I told a boy just now to fling it in the gutter.

"He must be a funny boy to fling stamps away," said the boy laughing.

"No," said Old Peanuts; "not so funny as you think; he only went in for being fair. But I gave him a pint of peanuts because his name was Johnny."

"Then you ought to give me a pint," said the boy, laughing again, "for my name's Johnny, too."

"Don't stand there laughing at me and telling lies!" said the old man, impatiently.

"Tain't lies," answered the boy. "My name is Johnny. There! I can prove it." He drew a small thin card out of his jacket pocket and held it up. "Read that," he said, triumphantly.

It was a card of admission to the Mission-House dinner. The old man snatched it and read "John Dorfling."

"You!" he said. His hands shook so that the card slipped out of them. Just then there came a gust of wind, and away went the card and the boy after it. The old man tried to call him back, but he was too much agitated to speak. He shook in every limb, but he started after the boy, running as fast as he could. But the boy ran twice as fast, and he disappeared around the corner. Then the old man raised a feeble cry, "Johnny! Johnny! Stop, Johnny!" He turned the corner, breathless, but the boy was no longer in sight. On went the old man, looking right and left, peering in the open doorways and gazing wildly down the cross streets. But suddenly he thought, "How silly I am! He has found his ticket and gone to the Mission dinner." So, with renewed hope, he turned his steps toward the Mission.

He explained his errand to the door-keeper and was ushered into a large room, where two hundred or more boys and girls sat at long tables, laughing and talking merrily and devouring good things. Up and down the passages Old Peanuts walked, gazing at every brown-haired boy; but he did not see Johnny.

Then the children were appealed to. Silence was called for, and the question asked. "Is John Dorfling here, or does any one know him?" But all the children shook their heads. The superintendent then searched the books and found the name. "John Dorfling," he said, "but no address. He probably did not know it. Many of the children cannot tell where they live."

"But I suppose he will come in again next Sunday," said Old Peanuts.

The superintendent shook his head.

"It is doubtful," said he. "You see a great many come in a week or two before Thanksgiving, because we give them a good dinner. But only those who have been with us three months have tickets to the Christmas festival. Yet he may come next Sunday again. Drop in and see," he added, unwilling to send the old man away without any hope.

"Ah! if I had only staid at my stand," old Peanuts thought, as he hurried along to the Chatham street corner. "He has the ten cents and the peanuts too, but if he is like his father he will come back." So he went to his stand, vaguely expecting to find his grandson there. But the other Johnny stood beside the stand instead.

"You ought not to leave your stand 'thout anybody to look after it," he said. "A lot of fellows war agoin' to make off with your peanuts, but I happened up and hollowed 'Perlice!' and they thought I owned the concern and took to their heels. The perlice didn't come, but I kept guard and sold five pints, too. And there war a boy here as said he owed you five cents, and—"

"Where is he?" cried the old man.

"Why, he left the five and he went away," said the boy. "I don't know which way; I warn't looking."

"It was Johnny," said the old man, wringing his hands. "Now I shall never see him again." In a choked voice he told the story.

"Don't take on," said the boy. "Ef I'd a-knowed it I'd held onter him. Next time I will. I'll know him again."

"Ah!" said Old Peanuts, tears rolling down his cheeks. "I thought I couldn't have more trouble; but to find him only to lose him again, it is more than I can bear. But he is a good honest boy—I knew he was."

"I'll look for him," said the boy. "I was agoing to the Central Park to see the animals; but never mind; and it's an awful ways to walk, so I don't keer much. And here's for the five pints."

"No; keep it for taking care of my stand," said Old Peanuts.

"No," said the boy. "The peanuts you gave me paid for that. I ain't mean. Good-bye. Don't fret. Mebbe I'll fetch him along afore you know it."

The old man sat down by his stand but he could not rest.

"I'll look for him too," he said. "Ah! if I could only find him I would keep Thanksgiving. If God would only help me; but I have been so unthankful to Him I have no right to expect it."

He locked up his stand and went down toward the City Hall, then up Broadway and across Canal Street, then down to Chatham street again, and through the dirty cross-streets and lanes—up and down—up and down, until his feet were so tired that they slipped under him. At last when night came he went back to his stand, unlocked it and sat down on his stool. But he was worn out; and as he leaned his head against the pine boards his eyes closed. Soon he was in dreamland. He was keeping Thanksgiving with his wife, and his son, and little Johnny. They were all at the village church, singing hymns, and then again at the old farm-house, eating their Thanksgiving dinner. Little Johnny climbed on his knee and kissed him, and then pulled his hair in fun.

"Don't pull so hard Johnny," he said. And then he opened his eyes.

"Yes, I must pull it if you don't wake up," said a voice. "We tried ticklin' and everything. You sleep so sound."

Old Peanuts opened his eyes widely and rubbed them, but still he was afraid that he was asleep, for the two Johnnies stood beside him.

"Went to Central Park after all," said the first Johnny, "and found him looking at the animals. Thought mebbe I would"

"Are you my grandpop?" asked Johnny number two. "If you are I'm glad, though you made me lose my dinner."

The old man drew the boy to him and held him closely in his arms as if he were afraid he would lose him again.

"And your mother?" he asked. "Will she let me have you?"

"She died," answered the boy; "died long ago—him too; and I take care of myself helping a junk man."

"And hereafter Grandpap will take care of you," the old man said. "Thank God, I have found you, and now we will eat our Thanksgiving dinner."

So hand in hand, the three walked up the Bowery, and down a side street, to Old Peanuts' lodgings. He bought a cooked turkey and other good things on his way there, and at the door he stopped to ask a neighbor or two to "come up and help them be merry."

What a happy, blessed day they had, after all! How they talked and laughed, and how Old Peanuts leaned back in his chair and almost cried with joy when Johnny sang a pretty song for them that he had learned at the ragged school.

For the first time in years, John Dorfling when he sat down at the table, bowed his head in penitence and grateful prayer. But his thanksgiving did not end with that day, nor for many a day.

In fact he is hale and hearty yet. This very year he and Johnny hope to keep "Thanksgiving" with the other Johnny; and after dinner they all are going to ride in the horse-cars to the Park to see the animals.

News and Notes.

The drought and grasshoppers have done a terrible work in Kansas, and a sad state of destitution exists in the frontier counties. In seventeen counties an aggregate of 158,000 acres planted with corn did not yield a bushel, and other crops suffered almost as badly. From 15,000 to 25,000 people are without food, fuel or clothing, and they must be sustained by charitable contributions until another crop is grown.

About four hundred persons to whom invitations to the Fitch-Sherman wedding were sent failed to receive them, and now it has been discovered that they were stolen by clerks in the Washington post-office.

Several business places in Syracuse, N. Y., were destroyed by fire, Sunday, involving a loss of $130,000.

Miss Constance Mitchell, a younger sister of Maggie, has made her debut at the Opera House, Albany, in "Help," and is well spoken of.

Advices from Spain state that the republican army is massing for active operations in Navarre. The Carlists are concentrating around Estella. The gunboat Prosperidas, with 200 men on board, is supposed to be lost.

The banks of a sewer at Providence caved in upon a workman recently, and as no one saw the accident he would have been killed had not four greyhounds seen the occurrence and begun to dig and howl for help. They were driven away, but returned, and their persistence leading some men to dig at the spot, the man was rescued unharmed.

The official vote of Iowa elects the republican State ticket by 28,202 majority, a republican gain of 5637. The nine Congressmen elect are all republicans.

The official vote of Alabama, gives a majority of 23,190 for Houston, democratic candidate for Governor.

Eight Chinamen voted at the election in British Columbia, and decided the success of the opposition ticket for the House. The election will be contested, although the Chinamen were naturalized British subjects and registered voters.

By a fire in Cronstadt, Russia, 119 houses, a church, two chapels and 128 shops were destroyed and 15,000 people rendered houseless.

A tornado passed over Tuscumbia, Ala., Sunday evening, destroying one-third of the residences, killing twelve persons and injuring many others. A bridge was destroyed, and a train of cars thrown into the creek.

State News.

Lyman Powers, a conductor on the Central Vermont Railroad, met with a fatal accident on Saturday. He was walking on the track between White River Junction and West Lebanon, and while crossing a bridge was struck by a train of cars which passed over him, severing both legs from his body, one below and the other above the knee. Mr. Powers had been employed on the Vermont Central for the past fourteen years.

The body of a dead child from two to three weeks old was put into an entry on Chesnut street, Manchester, on Saturday night, by some unknown party. Exposure and starvation was the probable cause of its death. The body was quite warm when discovered.

A Manchester lady has narrowly escaped having two husbands to care for. She had grown tired of being alone in the world and had accepted the proposal of a steady mechanic to become his wife. The wedding was appointed for Friday evening, friends were invited and a clergyman secured, and the ceremony was about to begin, when the door opened and in walked a former husband of the lady, who years ago disappeared from the knowledge of his young wife, and has since been "sailing the wide seas over" in search of her. The wedding was postponed.

A pair of horses and a wagon annexed, belonging to Elbery Allin of Guildhall, Vt., got into the Connecticut river. By a quick use of the knife, the horses were disengaged, when one went ashore in Vermont and the other swam over to Lancaster.

A certain professor in Dartmouth College, being at Enfield a few days since, suddenly bethought himself of his afternoon recitation, which occurred in an hour. He hired a team, and by great exertion reached the college with one minute to spare, when he saw the boys playing football on the campus, and at once remembered that it was Wednesday afternoon, when there are no recitations.

At Milford on Thursday a valuable horse, the property of Jason T. Burns, ran away, fell on a sidewalk and broke his neck.

The Massachusetts Humane Society has awarded a certificate of bravery to Calvert King Mullen of Durham, for his heroism in rescuing Misses Doyle and Calahan from drowning, last summer. The young ladies were in bathing and got into a deep hole, when young Mullen, who is only ten years old, dashed in to their rescue at the risk of his life.

Walter Boyd, a boy fifteen years old, died in Manchester, Saturday, after a sickness of only four hours. He was out coasting in the forenoon.

An Exeter lawyer wrote to a man in the country. The man read the contents of the letter but could not read the signature. So he answered the letter, cut off the lawyer's signature and pasting it on the envelope forwarded it to Exeter.

The largest trip hammer in the United States has recently been completed at Nashua, at an expense of $75,000. The weight of iron in this mammoth machine is about two hundred tons. The ram weighs twelve tons, its striking force is about one hundred tons, and four large boilers are brought into use to furnish steam to run the six hundred horse-power engine required to successfully operate it. The immense crane, with which the iron that is being manipulated is hoisted into position, is the largest in the country and is rigged with modern mechanism so nicely that two men can easily hoist fifty tons dead weight.

Several of the Dover shoe manufacturers have laid aside their pegging machines, preferring to let them remain idle rather than pay the royalty claimed by the proprietors of the Gallahue patent.

The young ladies at the Robinson Female Seminary at Exeter, are making an effort, by personal contributions, to form a collection for the illustration of the different departments of Natural History, and for the purpose of a general museum.

—Some enterprising autumn wasps started a nest over night in the trousers of a boarder in a St. Paul hotel, and when the gentleman thrust his leg through next morning, the whole town wasn't large enough to hold him.

MY LIFE ON THE PLAINS, By Gen. G. A. Custer, U. S. Army. One of the chief attractions of the Galaxy the past year or two has been the papers contributed by Gen. Custer, entitled "My Life on the Plains," and many will be glad to know that the publishers, Sheldon & Co., have gathered them up and issued them in a substantial book. The book is a graphic account of Gen. Custer's personal experience on the Plains, beginning with the expedition of Major-General Hancock in the spring of 1867, and continuing through the following two years, covering the Washita campaign and his operations in the field in what is known as the Southern and Middle Plains. The General's estimate of the Indian character is not exactly in accordance with that of the peace commissioners, but these pages give evidence of his opportunities for studying it. It is a book which, once commenced, will be pretty certain to be read through. It has several illustrations of Indian chiefs and scenes on the Plains, and a frontispiece representing the author. For sale by J. H. Foster.

LINLEY ROCHFORD, By Justin McCarthy. New York: Sheldon & Co. "Linley Rochford" has appeared as a serial in the Galaxy the past year. The heroine is a young girl, high-minded, truthful, earnest, who marries a man whom she believes to be all that is noble, whom she is proud to call her "master," but who she soon learns is selfish, indolent, purposeless, loving his ease much more than his wife, and who in time becomes both unfaithful to her and the friend of his youth, Roche Valentine, the hero, who can make any sacrifice for friendship's sake. The characters are not numerous, but they are all clearly cut, and although there is not much plot the interest is sustained and culminates satisfactorily. Justin McCarthy's books are never dull, and "Linley Rochford" will take rank with the best of his previous productions. For sale at the book stores.

Letter from Dartmouth.

HANOVER, Nov. 21.

Professor Labaree has finished a course of twenty-four lectures on international law.

The new Episcopal church being built here is progressing rapidly. The intention is to have it ready for worship in July. The building being of stone, it is destined to be one of the attractions of Hanover.

Among other curiosities in the Museum here, there is a set of slabs taken from the ruins of Nineveh. They are in a good state of preservation.

The spirit of mischief seems to be prevalent. The posts at the south end of the campus were burnt a short time ago by some persons who wished to have them replaced by new ones.—Two Professors went into their recitation rooms one morning and found their desks and chairs had been removed by some thoughtful students, consequently there were no recitations that morning.

Dr. E. H. Chapin delivered the fifth lecture of the senior course at the College church on Tuesday night, his subject being "Being and Building."

Friday night, Professor Quimby gave a reception to the junior class at his residence. The rooms were gaily adorned with hot house flowers. The College orchestra and glee club finishing the music.

At the present time the different classes of the different departments are engaged in the examinations of the studies that have been pursued during this term. The examinations are all written and according to the new laws a student in order to pass must answer forty per cent. of the questions correctly.

From Nov. 24 until Dec. 2d there is to be a recess, for the purpose of spending Thanksgiving at home.

The indications are that only a few will go out teaching this fall and winter on account of the scarcity of schools. So far only one is going to teach outside of New England and that one is a senior, who is to teach in Illinois. "BUG."

Remarkable If True.

The Boston Globe is responsible for the publication of the following adventure: About five weeks ago a son of Dr. W. H. Eldridge of this district suddenly disappeared, and was not heard from until Saturday. The boy says that on the evening of October 19, as he was leaving the apothecary store on Bunker Hill street, where he was employed, he was approached by a man who informed him that a fire was raging in the vicinity of Chelsea bridge, and asked him to go down and see it. Arriving at the bridge no fire was to be seen, and when just on the point of returning he was seized around the neck by the man, who choked him until he became unconscious, robbed him, and then threw him over the railing into the waters of the Mystic. The chill which his plunge into the river gave to his system restored him so that he was able to attempt to save himself. The tide was running out, and he, being a skillful swimmer, kept from drowning and floated down the stream until opposite East Boston, where a friendly spar which was floating in the water came near him, and gaining this he floated out to sea. He subsequently became unconscious, and when he rallied again he was out of sight of land, still clinging to the log. After remaining in the water nineteen hours he was rescued by a brig bound for Greenland, and as he did not care to visit that country he was placed on board an English steamer, the name of which he states was the Norman, and carried to Liverpool. He improved the first opportunity to return home in the steamer Smyrna, which arrived at this port last Saturday.

A Triumph Of Chemistry.

Among the numerous health-giving discoveries of pharmaceutical chemistry, none has achieved a more transcendent and lasting success than Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Of course there is a reason for this. It would have been impossible to palm off, for nearly a quarter of a century, upon so shrewd a people as the Americans, a meritless article, or have established by mere advertising such a reputation as the Bitters enjoy, if they did not possess a substantial title to public confidence. The truth of this statement is proved by the fact that bogus nostrums, no matter how extensively puffed, usually enjoy but a transient existence, are then discovered to be worthless, and discarded. Hostetter's Bitters, on the contrary, after a career of twenty years, were never so popular as they are to-day. Soon after their appearance it became manifest that they possessed in a remarkable degree the power of toning and regulating the human system, and to-day they rank as the standard restorative of the age.

Nashua & Rochester R. R.

The Nashua & Rochester Railroad, which was informally opened on Saturday, was projected many years ago, but it must be classed among the many direct routes that form the quick railroad intercommunication of the New England of the present. First talked of and greeted with applause in 1848, the scheme was not carried out until 1874. This Portland & Rochester Railroad received a charter from the State of Maine in 1864, and from New Hampshire July 21, 1866. In this State it was to run over any feasible route from the westerly line of Maine through Strafford, Rockingham and Hillsborough counties to Manchester, or an intermediate point on the Concord & Portsmouth road. Almost a year later—June, 1868—the legislature effected a change of charter, vesting the powers, rights and privileges of two companies—the Nashua & Epping and the Portland & Rochester in New Hampshire—in one, and christening the new line with the name it now bears as completed,—the Nashua & Rochester Railroad.

In 1869 the State had agreed to a bill intended to put a check on railroad speculation, which prohibited any railroad company from taking more than $50,000 stock in another railroad built or projected in the State. As such a law would perhaps have prevented the building of the road under consideration, a bill was passed in the year following, allowing railroad corporations to hold stock in the Nashua & Rochester road to the extent of $200,000.

The first actual work other than surveying was begun early in September, 1872, and the last of the ballasting will be finished ere the close of another week. The road is a model of complete construction. It passes through a rather uninteresting section of the State. Leaving Nashua in the direction of Boston the road crosses the Boston, Lowell & Nashua Railroad. Through several small cuttings over an embankment, Hudson is reached, 2.06 miles from Nashua. Then through a long belt of pines to West Windham, 6.54 miles from the Nashua terminus. Then comes Windham Junction, 10.3 miles, where the track strikes the Manchester & Lawrence branch of the Boston & Maine road. Thence through an uninteresting section of country to Hampstead 26.53 miles. Here there is a long siding. Once more into the woods on leaving Hampstead through a rocky cut, and over a bridge on the Exeter River in Sandown to Sandown station, 18.88 miles.

At the Sandown station there is also a long siding. Then Fremont is reached, 24.4 miles, the half-way station. There is a siding here also, and a small freight house. In this township the Exeter River is once more crossed, this time by a bridge 111 feet long. At Epping Junction, 28.22 miles from Nashua, connection is made with the Concord & Portsmouth, and the tracks cross each other between several side tracks. After leaving Epping the route is through undulating open country to Lee, 33.37 miles. There is a siding and in the town the second conquered difficulty of construction is seen after crossing a bridge over Little River, 111 feet span. Then another bridge is reached over the Malaga River, Barrington, 41.81 miles from Nashua. For four miles from here the road is perfectly straight and passes over a trestle 270 feet long on the Isinglass River, before Gonic is reached. This is the last stopping-place before arriving at Rochester, 46.28 miles from Nashua. Soon the road turns into Rochester-crossing, over the Cocheco river. From here the road, in going into Rochester for a considerable distance runs parallel with the Winnipisaukee branch of the Boston & Maine. This brings the line to Rochester station, the eastern terminus, forty-eight miles from Nashua.

The connections made by the new link are all important, and while the line itself is the chief, being the last section of the short route to New York from Portland, its connections are very valuable. They are these: At Nashua, with the Boston, Lowell and Nashua, the Nashua and Wilton, the Concord, the Nashua, Acton and Boston roads; at Windham, with the Manchester and Lawrence and with the Windham and Lowell road, when built; at Epping, with the Concord and Portsmouth; at Rochester, with the Dover and Winnipisaukee branch of the Boston and Maine and the Portsmouth, Great Falls and Conway branch of the Eastern road; at Woodford's and Morrill's Corner, within two or three miles of Portland, with the Maine Central road; and at Worcester, with the Boston and Albany for New York and the West, and with the Norwich and Worcester and the Providence and Worcester roads for the South. The length from Worcester to Portland is therefore 145 miles, and the time taken in traversing much shorter than by way of Boston. At Portland the connections are of very great importance.

What is the matter?—Your hair looks dry and dead, it breaks off, and is falling out. You dress it with an alcohol and oil mixture or some well advertised Hair Restorer. The hair is poisoned, it is killed. If you would restore it, cast away these things, go buy a bottle of Bearine which can be had of any Druggist, and we will guarantee a change for the better at once! 9

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY!

Great Bargains!

HAVING purchased the stock of STOVES and Housekeeping Goods in the well known "Jones Stove Store," and made large additions thereto, we are prepared to offer to our customers and the public generally the best assortment of the most approved and latest patterns of

COOKING and PARLOR STOVES

To be found in any establishment in the State, among which may be found the WYOMING RANGE, which we believe to be superior to anything in the shape of a cooking arrangement yet invented,—having six boiler holes, a large oven, warming closet, dump grate, shelf, sifter and ash pan,—combining all the conveniences found in others and some advantages to be found only in this; it is a quick and ready baker, splendid looking and beautifully ornamented, and in all its appointments is far ahead of anything of the kind in the market; and another important item is, we can sell it at a Very Reasonable Rate and warrant it to do all we say. Call and see it, and be satisfied that this is THE BEST COOKING STOVE IN THE WORLD.

We have for sale the HUB RANGE, said by those who use it to have no superior.

Also the GRANGER RANGE, a nicely-working stove which we sell at a reasonable price.

For the usual style of Cooking Stoves we have the ELECTRIC COOK Improved, and the NEW MAGNET, which cannot be beaten,—and we are bound to sell them at such bargains as will ensure a ready sale.

Parlor Stoves

Of the most approved kinds, such as the Eldorado, of which hundreds have been sold in this vicinity and which everybody likes,—keeps fire the whole season and is very economical. Also the Gen. Grant, Union Gas Burner, etc., etc.

SOAPSTONE STOVES in great variety: Oven Parlor and Air-Tight Stoves of every style, and to be sold as cheap as the cheapest.

We have a few Cook Stoves, new and in perfect order, which were on hand when we bought the concern, which we are bound to close out at any price.

[21w2mdo13]

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful lifeature; and a collection of pictures the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot but duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is an American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative taste, and, in one, it will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The arts in illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious interspersion of landscapes, marines, figure, and animal subjects, sustain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style or subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment, worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical discussions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

"MAN'S EARLIEST FRIEND"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

How To Put Nervous Babies To Sleep.

A baby is a very tender thing, people say; but most of them are very far from knowing how tender. Imagine how nervous you are in certain states—when recovering from illness, say when the fall of a book or the slam of a door makes you quiver and faint, as if some one gave you a blow. That is the way a young baby feels at its best. A puff of wind will set it gasping, its little breath blown quite away. A noise makes it shiver, a change of summer air makes it turn death-cold. A baby is the most nervous of beings, and the tortures it suffers in going to sleep and being wakened by careless sounds when just "dropping off" are only comparable to the same experience of an older person during an acute nervous headache. Young babies ought to pass the first months of their lives in the country, for its stillness no less than its fresh air. But where silence is not to be commanded baby may be soothed by folding a soft napkin, wet in warmish water, lightly over the top of its head, its eyes and ears. It is the best way to put nervous babies to sleep. I have tried it hundreds of times for a child so irritable that paregoric and soothing syrup only made it wide-awake. A fine towel would be wet and laid over its head; the ends twisted a little till it made a sort of skull cap, and though baby sometimes fought against being blindfolded in this way, five minutes usually sent him off into deep and blissful slumber. The compress cooled the little feverish brain, deadened the sound in his ears, and shut out everything that took his attention, so that sleep took him unaware. Teething babies find this very comfortable, for their heads are always hot, and there is a fevered beating in the arteries each side.

A Washoe Greeting.

[Virginia City (Nev.) Enterprise.]

Yesterday, as we were standing near the corner of C and Union streets, chatting with our old time friend, Bob Howland, a queer, shaggy haired, wild eyed chap, evidently just in from some of the eastward lying desert regions of the State, hove in sight. Now Bob himself is a regular, prospecting critter—a man who has delved and posted his "notices" in about half the camps on the Pacific coast. Bob, indeed, with much justice, may claim to have made Meadow Lake and Aurora and Como what they are. Our wild-eyed stranger had evidently seen Bob somewhere. He tacked back and forth in front of us a few times, scratching his head, hitching his baggy breeches up under his waist belt, and jamming his scrap of dingy-brown wool hat now on this side and now on that side. At last he faced suddenly square about, and, coming up to Bob, said: "Whereabouts in —— have I seed you, stranger?" "I don't know," coolly and in his kindliest tone answered Bob; "what part of —— have you been in, my good friend?" The wild-eyed man smiled a solemn smile, and said something about his camp and a pot of beans on the headwaters of Bitter creek. Instantly he and Bob rushed into each other's arms, and for some moments each was diligently engaged in shedding tears of the largest size upon the shoulders of the other.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1874.

News and Notes.

It is announced that Congressman Austin F. Pike of the second district will decline a re-election on account of continued ill-health. Mr. Pike has hosts of personal and political friends outside the second district, who regret the necessity which occasions his withdrawal and who are not without hope that they may be able at some future time to testify their appreciation of his integrity and merit. The national House has few if any members who have won the respect and esteem of both parties to a higher degree than Hon. Austin F. Pike.

The Argentine rebellion has been crushed.

An army officer who has returned from the South states that in all the Southern States persons who suffered loss by reason of the war are occupied in gathering evidence in support of their claims. The democratic successes have stimulated this activity. The persons engaged are not only collecting information as to slave property, but concerning every kind of property which was lost through the operations of Union armies. This army officer himself at several different places was closely questioned by persons engaged in this business, as to the location of different divisions of the army in which he was engaged and the special line of its march. There was no concealment of the fact that the purpose of these inquiries was that the information might be used as evidence in the case of democratic victories in 1876.

Supervising Architect Mullett has resigned.

Only one-fourteenth of the men recently enlisted in the army were an addition to it, the remainder being worthless in constitution and character, and the majority either proving to be deserters or being discharged as worthless. Recruiting officers are cautioned to be more careful in the future.

An analysis of the official figures of the relative positions occupied by the leading Atlantic ports of the country in our foreign trade for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1872 and 1874, shows a decrease in the entire imports of the country in 1874, compared with 1872, of nearly 9 per cent. The imports at New York fell off about 6 7-8 per cent., at Boston over 28 per cent., while at Philadelphia there was an increase of over 23 1-2 per cent., and the trade of Baltimore remained stationary. The figures for the same years show that there was an increase in the entire exports of the country in the years 1873-74, compared with 1871-72, of 22 7 per cent., all the ports showing an increase, namely: New York 20 per cent., Philadelphia nearly 50 per cent., Baltimore nearly 54 per cent., Boston nearly 38.45 per cent., and New Orleans a little over 3.16 per cent.

All incoming vessels report meeting with very rough weather on the Atlantic. In fact, the storm has done great harm to the shipping interests, and no doubt reports of disasters will come in thick and fast. Sailors say they have not experienced such bad weather in some time.

State News.

A year and a half ago, the young ladies of Plymouth organized a society, and gave a series of entertainments to secure funds for a Public Library. By these funds, and the direct contributions of the citizens, they were enabled in less than a year, to open the Library with over four hundred volumes, to which an addition of fifty volumes has just been made.

About a year ago a young man from Seabrook was sent to the county farm for drunkenness. The next day it was discovered that he had committed a burglary, and an officer was sent to the county farm at Brentwood to arrest him on the latter charge but he had disappeared. One day last week a team was stolen at Newburyport, and on Thursday night State Constable Hale arrested the thief in a secluded place on Cape Ann, and it is stated that he is the same Seabrook young man, who is wanted there for burglary.

On Wednesday of last week a seven year old son of Mr. John Worcester, who lives below Gonic, went into the woods with a hired man, who was chopping trees. A tree falling in an opposite direction from what it was supposed it would, hit the boy, badly breaking one of his legs in two places above the knee.

Mount Washington has put on a mid-winter appearance. The frost work covers the mountain in very beautiful formations.

The milk business of Atkinson is no inconsiderable item, and, in proportion to the size of its population, is greater than in any town in Rockingham county. Four teams carry milk into Haverhill daily, and these persons average together 750 quarts per day, making 273,750 quarts per year; 800 quarts are also sent to Boston daily, from Atkinson Depot, or 292,000 yearly. Of this quantity fully one-half is obtained in Atkinson, the remainder coming from the towns of Plaistow and Hampstead.

A prominent republican farmer in the outskirts of Keene, recently stated in public that he would vote for the re-election of the present popular democratic Mayor if the latter would kill a fox in his neighborhood before the election in December. The next day Mayor Colony knocked at the farmer's door with Reynard's brush hanging out of his pocket.

At the time Priest, who has just been sent to the State Prison by the Court at Lancaster, was arrested in Colebrook, he made his confession and it appeared that he had stolen something from all classes and conditions of men with the single exception of the lawyers. Upon being questioned as to his reason for not taking anything from this class, he said that he pursued his calling on the theory "that there should be honor even among thieves."

While Mr. Hartigan, of Rochester, was taking out the brick from an old well, in the rear of his store, some of the earth caved in and buried him in the rubbish up to his chin. He was gotten out none too soon, as the top caved in a few minutes after he was extricated from his perilous position.

Mr. A. W. Stevens of Rumney recently met with a painful accident. While lifting on a stone, another stone canted over and caught him between the ankle and knee. No bones were broken, but the leg was fearfully bruised and sprained, so much so that it will take longer to heal than it would had his leg been broken.

Some parties in the vicinity of Enfield who have been replenishing their wood pile from the railroad wood yard at Shaker Hill crossing, were called down to East Canaan on Wednesday afternoon to answer to a charge of stealing. Justice Doten let them off for a fine and costs, amounting to about $20 each, with promise to do so no more.

Work is commenced on the carriage road from Crawford House to the summit of Mt. Washington, under the auspices of Messrs. Barron and the Eastern Railroad. The road will be completed in season for summer travel the ensuing year.

The Next Presidential Battle.

[Albany Journal.]

We are not much in the habit of making prophecies or of publishing political "estimates." But if any faint-hearted republican fancies that, because of the recent elections, our party is prostrate and unable to make a most vigorous and hopeful fight in 1876, we ask him to look at the figures we present below.

The only question relates to '76. It is not in the nature of things at present that the democratic party can long retain power. The great questions before the country are not such as that party can satisfactorily handle. To say nothing of the Southern problem, its character and composition and tendencies preclude the hope that it can deal successfully with the intricate financia question. Even if we conceive it as carrying the presidential election two years hence, it would, with these difficulties pressing upon it, be speedily and inevitably driven to the wall. Thus, the future, after '76, will take care of itself and need give us no concern. And so the only doubt touches the approaching presidential battle.

The following table gives the electoral vote and divides the States into the three classes of republican, democratic, and doubtful. In classifying them we put none in the republican column that are not reasonably certain to go republican, while we concede one or two to the democrats which ought fairly to be classed as doubtful, and place in the column of doubtful three or four—like New Hampshire or Connecticut—which the republicans are pretty sure to carry.

Whole number of electoral votes,	366
Necessary to a choice,	184

REPUBLICAN.		DEMOCRATIC.
Maine	7	New Jersey	9
Vermont	5	Delaware	3
Massachusetts	13	Maryland	8
Rhode Island	4	Virginia	11
Pennsylvania	29	North Carolina	10
Ohio	22	Georgia	11
Illinois	21	Louisiana	8
Michigan	11	Texas	8
Wisconsin	10	Tennessee	12
Iowa	11	Kentucky	12
Minnesota	5	Arkansas	6
Kansas	5	Indiana	15
Nebraska	3	Missouri	15
Nevada	3
South Carolina	7	Total	128
Florida	4
Mississippi	8
Total	168

DOUBTFUL.
New Hampshire	5
Connecticut	6
New York	35
California	6
Oregon	3
West Virginia	5
Alabama	10
Total	70

We believe that every intelligent and candid observer will admit that this table is not unduly and unwarrantably favorable to the republican side. We have put Pennsylvania in the republican column because, though the State for the first time in many years has given a small democratic majority, everybody knows that in a real contest it is reliably republican. So we have classed Ohio on the same side because, while it has shifted in other years, it is always found right in the Presidential battles. Beyond these States there is not one in the republican column which even our least candid opponents would pretend to regard as in any sense doubtful. On the other hand, we have conceded Indiana to the democracy, though it should, perhaps, be more fairly classed as doubtful, and so of Louisiana, which in an honest and square fight is more likely to be republican than democratic. All the rest of the South, too, except South Carolina, Florida and Mississippi, which are strongly republican, and Alabama, which in a fair fight is at worst doubtful, we have given to the democracy.

New York we have classed as doubtful, and, considering how readily the State shifts from one side to the other, it must be so regarded. Which way it is likely to go depends very much upon the nominations, the character of the issues, and the course of events between now and '76. Its thirty-five electoral votes constitute, perhaps, the most important, as they are the largest, factor in the problem, and both parties will doubtless play their best for it. If it be added to the States we have assigned the democracy, it would give them 163 electoral votes, requiring them still to gain 21 from other doubtful States, in order to elect the President. If, on the other hand, the republicans should carry New York, in addition to the States set down in their column, they would elect the President and have nineteen votes to spare. Or they could lose New York and still hold the Presidency, by carrying New Hampshire, Connecticut and California, or either one of these States and Alabama. It will thus be seen that, even as matters now stand, the odds are decidedly in favor of the republicans electing the President.

If there are any republicans who feel discouraged or faint-hearted, we commend them to an examination of these figures.

Newspaper Libel Suit.

[Printer's Circular.]

"The law is open to every one, pompously said a man of the Podsnap school to Theodore Hook.

"So is the tavern," made answer the wit. The present is an unusually good year for libel suits against journals and journalists. The courts are wide open to all who choose to fancy themselves aggrieved; and the prosecutors in these cases have the privilege of fixing the amount of damages they are desirous of recovering, and in deciding the sums—a few ten thousands of dollars, one way or the other, does not seem to be of the slightest consequence.

Not for a moment would we pull down a single barrier guarding individual reputations from public assault; defamation is not criticism; the gratification of individual malice is not conducive to the public weal. It is just and proper that journalists should be held responsible for their utterances, but it is of more vital importance that the freedom of the press should be guarded with the utmost care by the people themselves. Once shackle the newspapers, and there is an end to freedom, even in this free land. Does this seem like professional hyperbole? Look abroad, and be convinced of its literal truth. The only country in Europe blessed with a free press is England, and England has well been called a Republic in disguise.

Vexatious libel suits, if not frowned down sternly by a fearless judiciary, must in time lead to an overcautiousness on the part of publishers—a morbid prudence that will end in connivance at evil doings in high places, socially and politically.

An independent, outspoken newspaper may at times give offence; but how much more precious its bluff sincerity than the oily sentences, the rose-water paragraphs, the ambiguous strictures of a journal in mortal dread of libel suits, and ready to gloss over a dangerous truth rather than lift up its voice in the denunciation of influential wrong-doers!

A Subterranean Fire.

[Chicago Tribune.]

A subterranean fire is raging in the portion of Pittsburg known as Herron's Hill, which threatens serious consequences to about five hundred acres of improved property. In digging out for Thirty-third street against the bank, some three or four months ago, the workmen discovered a stratum of the coal which is so plenty in that city. In order to warm coffee for their lunches, they discovered this to be just the place, and accordingly lit fires at the mouth. Gradually this slight blaze has developed itself till now it is a perfect volcano, whose ominous roaring can easily be heard by persons travelling over the surface. No efforts have been made to extinguish this blaze, and now it is spreading fearfully fast, endangering life and property. Herron's Hill is the highest point in Alleghany County, and on its summit is located one of the water reservoirs, which has been but lately erected. Water was recently put in it, but it leaked out. Lately, however, it was found that this water did not pass out altogether from leaks, but that a portion has evaporated in steam, caused by the immense fire raging below. There is danger of this work caving in, and should it go, the flames will receive additional draught, and will thus be harder to subdue, and have a tendency of spreading the fire still further. The ultimate result of this subterranean fire can hardly be told at present. Millions of improved property lie on the hill, and in close proximity to these burning mines, and should any settling of earth occur at any point, the result would be most disastrous. Efforts will be made to conquer the flames by sapping and mining, but it will take months and perhaps years, to extinguish this mass of burning coal, much of which is burning hundreds of feet below the surface.

—The Oregon legislature has passed a bill enabling any person who loses money at a gambling game to recover double the amount so lost, and the result is that professional poker players deal the worst possible hands to themselves and four aces to their verdant opponents.

—The tyrant man has treated contemptuously the woman suffrage proposition in Michigan, and Susan swears that if any voter ever lets her sit in his lap again she'll pinch him, so help her gracious!

—It is predicted that within a quarter of a century Virginia will be as distinctively a northern State as New York.

Clara Morris Replies To Talmage.

In the New York Herald of Friday, Miss Clara Morris, the famous emotional actress of the metropolis, makes a sharp and ingenious reply to Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage's recent bitter attack upon the stage. She says that the reverend gentleman "stated on Sunday last that he knew 'a young man who attended the play of "Macbeth" for thirty nights, and who gave up church attendance, his Bible and prayer.' What I wish to know is when and where did 'Macbeth' have a run of thirty nights, also the 'young man's' name and address? His opinion of that play and the characters therein would be valuable. Having asked these questions, I would like to add a few words about the quality of the 'fruit' our professional tree is bearing. During our civil war, when many of our actors were fighting valiantly for the Union, and many an actress deprived herself of everything but the bare necessaries of life, that she might send wines, fruits and food to the commissary departments, and when every spare hour was given to the knitting of stockings, scraping of lint and making of bandages, I thought our tree was bearing good 'fruit.' When Chicago stood shivering and homeless, and we placed in her outstretched hands many a hard-earned 'hundred,' not a dollar but carried with it twice its value in sympathy, and when, last winter, we gave thousands to the suffering poor of New York, I thought our tree was bearing good fruit. When I have seen a hard-worked actress mother, with the inevitable satchel on her arm and 'part' for the evening in her hand, call the little night-gowned babies and hear them say, 'Now I lay me down to sleep,' etc., with lips as pure and sweet as though they were a minister's flock and not an actor's, I felt sure our tree was bearing good fruit and fair to look at, too. I do not say we are angels—far from it. We have some very dark complexioned sheep among us, but Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage's profession can furnish a 'Roland for an Oliver' every time. We are a law-abiding, God-fearing, self-sustaining people, and our wives and mothers will bear comparison with those of any class of people in the world. There is hardly an actress on the stage but has some one to support—father, mother, sister or child, some one—and I never knew one to do her duty unwillingly."

Taking up the minister's charge of the impurity of the stage, the actress says: "As to our influence being so terrible, I deny it. How on earth is virtue to triumph if there is no sin to triumph over? Did the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage ever preach a sermon where sin of some kind was not mentioned, aye, and made much of? Has he not spent ten minutes in picturing some successful speculator, and has he not used odds and ends of popular slang to bring his picture more vividly before the eyes of his congregation, and have not his efforts in that line been rewarded with a ripple of laughter, and has he not thereupon dragged in his moral by the 'hair of the head' and dismissed it in three minutes, so that his hearers retained the amusing picture of that wicked money-getter, and lost all sight of the moral! Has not then the reverend gentleman made vice more attractive than virtue?"

Good Boy.

Iowa has a case of amicable family accommodation of the most compromising spirit. Thirteen years ago a young couple were married in Davenport, with the reservation that the husband depart immediately after the ceremony, go away, get rich, come home and make his wife happy. He went to California, and she stayed in her father's house. In the meantime the two were to correspond like lovers. In a year his letters ceased, and in another six months she heard that he was dead. Thus that spiritual union was broken, and soon another man, and one of property and station, came wooing the widow. For some reason she never told him she was a widow, and he married her ignorant of the fact that there had been a marriage and a death in her heart. The new couple went to farming, and raised a family in Scott county. Recently the first husband came home to Davenport and was told about the doings in Scott county. He went out there—saw his wife—said he was rich, and wanted her. The father of the family was not at home. She reasoned the case with No. 1, showed him the results of her married life, and implored him to be merciful. Explanations were made on both sides, and that couple parted forever. Another explanation became necessary, and that was all right. The lady applied for a divorce from her first husband on the ground of desertion; he was notified and accepted service, and that day started for Europe with his hoarded wealth. The defendant will not be there when his name is called in court, and a divorce will be granted by default. There will have to be another wedding.

—Mrs. Thompson, of Mohawk, New York, loves chivalrous men. She wanted one for a son-in-law. She had some doubts about the young man who was engaged to her daughter, so she dressed in men's clothes and picked a quarrel with him. The prospective son-in-law took off his coat, jammed the old lady's plug hat down over her eyes, tore her collar off, broke her nose and was about to make carpet rags of her pantaloons, when he discovered that he was fighting a woman. Mrs. Thompson thinks he will do.

—The dramatization of Jules Verne's "Journey Round the World" is to be a magnificent affair, and promises to be an American no less than a Pagan sensation. Its scenic effects comprise a Hindoo suttee, a grotto of serpents, a train on the Pacific Railroad attacked by Indians, a grand ballet and other telling features.

—A paper has this advertisement: "Two sisters want washing." It is feared that millions of brothers are in the same predicament.

—It may be "fatal to be free," in the language of the sensation writer, but one inclines to Patrick's opinion in the main, that a lad is a dale happier a doin' what he don' want ter, jest acos he wants ter do it, than he would be ef he had ter do jest what he wanted ter, jest acos some pesky body wanted to make him.

—A new Copernican system is that of Advocate Koupernip of the Moscow bar. He revolves so steadily around the central sun of truth, that, on discovering the guilt of two murderers who were clients, he turned about and with eloquent denunciation surrendered them to justice.

A Triumph of Chemistry.

Among the numerous health-giving discoveries of pharmaceutical chemistry, none has achieved a more transcendent and lasting success than Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Of course there is a reason for this. It would have been impossible to palm off, for nearly a quarter of a century, upon so shrewd a people as the Americans, a meritless article, or have established by mere advertising such a reputation as the Bitters enjoy, if they did not possess a substantial title to public confidence. The truth of this statement is proved by the fact that bogus nostrums, no matter how extensively puffed, usually enjoy but a transient existence, are then discovered to be worthless, and discarded. Hostetter's Bitters, on the contrary, after a career of twenty years, were never so popular as they are to-day. Soon after their appearance it became manifest that they possessed in a remarkable degree the power of toning and regulating the human system, and to-day they rank as the standard restorative of the age.

A Monument

As big as the grand Pyramid might be built of the teeth that have been ruined by neglect. Shall this thing go in face of the great fact that SOZODONT is a certain preventative of dental decay?

Played Out Nostrums.

Will codfish oil cure a consumptive cough? No! Will opiates? No!! Will inhalation? No!!! Can such a cough be cured at all? Yes, it can. Reject all these nostrums; they have been weighed in the balance and found wanting. Try HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR. Thousands upon thousands are using it. Millions have tried it. So far it has never disappointed any man or woman who took it for a cough or cold, however violent.

☞ To the Holders of Tickets to the Grand Gift Concert of the Masonic Relief Association of Norfolk, Va.:—

OFFICE OF THE MASONIC RELIEF ASSOCIATION OF NORFOLK, VA., NORFOLK, November 18, 1874.

The Board of Directors of this Association, feeling assured that the patrons of their enterprise and the public generally are satisfied that in its management the interests of all concerned will be strictly guarded, with honesty and fairness; and relying upon the belief that all who have aided us in our effort to complete the Masonic Temple in this city, are willing to rely upon our judgment as to the expediency of another postponement for a few days, notwithstanding our announcement that the Concert would positively be given on the 19th inst., have decided that a short delay will be more satisfactory to all holders of tickets than to have a partial drawing on Thanksgiving next.

The following reasons have induced us to this action:—

First—While our receipts have been large, they have not been of sufficient amount to enable us to give a full drawing

Second—A drawing on the 19th inst. would not yield enough to accomplish the object for which our Association was organized and chartered; and

Third—The encouragement which we have received convinces us that in forty days more we shall, without any failure, give a drawing which in its results will be acceptable to all our friends.

We have therefore fixed upon

Tuesday, December 29,

As the day when the Concert and distribution will take place, whether all the tickets are sold or not, or the money will be refunded upon applicant on and presentation of the tickets at the Agency where purchased.

By order of the Board of Directors:

HENRY V. MOORE, Secretary.

We have received a copy of a work entitled "Questions for Written Examinations," prepared by Joseph G. Edgerly, Superintendent of Schools in Manchester, and from a hasty glance we should judge it to be an invaluable aid to teachers and committees in conducting examinations. It is a book that is well calculated to save time and secure accuracy and method where the details of school work are so exhaustive of time and skill. We hope it will have a wide circulation.

The Hyers Sisters

Will sing this evening at the Temple. The voice of Miss Anna is beautifully pure and liquid in its higher range, and she sings notes far above the staff with the utmost ease. Mr. King possesses that great rarity, a real tenor voice, pure and sweet and of great compass. But the charm of the concert consists not so much in individual excellences as in the combination of the voices in some wonderfully fine four part singing.

Sam's Sensible Suggestion.

NEW YORK, November 22.

Dear Chronicle: The articles in Harper's for October, on Portsmouth by Aldrich, and "the Shoals" by Chadwick, so charmingly written and illustrated, cover together over thirty pages, and with some other rhythmic or prose selections of kindred topics would make an attractive little volume and a companion to Gardner's "Return of 1873," which is, (in cloth), an ornament to anyone's table.

The added selections might include Longfellow's poem on Gov. Wentworth. Aldrich's "Piscataqua," Laighton's "My Native River," some of Mrs. Thaxter's Shoals lyrics, and others. Such a volume of 100 pages would be purchased by nearly every Son and Daughter of Portsmouth abroad, by many at home, and by very many of the multitude of sojourners native to other latitudes, who have passed delightful summer vacations at the Shoals, and in the vicinity of the "old town by the sea." Will not some of our literary friends take the matter in hand, and give us one more souvenir of the familiar places we love so well and see so seldom. S. J. N.

Ring Promptly or Quit.

[Times.]

Punctuality is one of the lost arts with the man that rings the North bell. In olden times, when men like Webster, Paul, and the exact Rufus, attended to this duty, the first stroke of the clock was followed by a turn of the bell wheel. All over town dinners would be served and soup begin and end with the stroke of the never-varying one o'clock bell. But we live in degenerate times. Anywhere from one to eight minutes behind time will answer now. Watches and clocks in the same household have different time. Workmen linger over their pipes and wait for the bell after the clock strikes one, and the well-ordered household postpone the time of retirement, all because the bell is late. If the custom of ringing the bell is to be kept up, let us have it rung punctually. Why not? It is just as easy to ring on the dot, as to wait till the striking clock admonishes the ringer, and then in his journey to the church he may be five or eight minutes behind time. The bell was once the signal for many important daily duties, but now from its unpunctual habit has fallen into disrespect. Let us have a reform here or abolish the custom.

Old Time Chronicles, No. 118.

BY UNCLE JOSEPH.

Sandown was originally a part of Kingston and was incorporated in 1756. The first census was taken eleven years later, and the population was 509, of which one was a slave. The population at that time, 1767, was thirteen more than at the last census in 1870. The greatest population was in 1850 when it was 566.

A Congregational church was formed in 1758 and Rev. Josiah Cotton settled as pastor. He was of the large Cotton family of ministers, and a descendant of the worthy Rev. John Cotton, pastor of the first church in Boston.

Mr. Cotton's ministry here was about twenty-one years. In May, 1730, he died. Ministers were then settled and and paid by the towns, and it was customary when they died for the town to pay the expenses of their funerals. Accordingly on Mr. Cotton's death, a town meeting was called on very short notice, to see if the town would provide for the funeral of Mr. Cotton and to see if it would choose a committee to provide things necessary. The time for the meeting was singular. It was Sabbath, May 20, at six o'clock in the morning.

How fully the meeting was attended cannot be known now. But with the zeal of people in religious matters then, we may suppose that the voters on the hills and in the vallies were astir and on their way, on horseback and afoot, before breakfast, on their way to the large meeting house still standing on a lofty eminence. Ensign Reuben Clough was chosen moderator. "Voted to provide for Rev. Mr. Cotton's funeral." "Voted to procure a coffin and dig a grave for Rev. Mr. Cotton." Chose as bearers the following, probably all of them ministers: Rev. Mr. Flagg, (he was of Chester,) Mr. Trow, (this was Mr. True of Hampstead,) Mr. Page, Mr. Peabody, (he was of Atkinson,) Mr. Stevens, Mr. Thair, (this was Rev. Dr. Thayer of Kingston.)

On committees chosen at this meeting are found the names of Clough, Hunkins, Sanborn, French, Davis, and Pillsbury, names found in town within a few years, most of them now, and probably have been in town through most of its history.

—Captain Acklon of London is credited with the latest invention for keeping meat in traversing long distances. It is very simple. He uses a car in outward appearance like an ordinary baggage car. A near inspection of it shows, however, that its works are not of wood or of any more solid nature than stout layers of felt, running from top to bottom of the sides between a sort of net work of galvanized wire. The outer of these layers is kept constantly wet by means of a continuous supply of water from a cistern above. As the water passes down through the felt, it is evaporated by the heat of the air, and thus cools the interior of the car, which is separated from the wet felt by a double layer of dry felt interposed. If the air outside is hot, the evaporation is so much the quicker.

—Henry Ward Beecher, at a recent Friday evening meeting at Plymouth church, in answer to the question, "When you received chastisement did you have the same affection for your parent as before he struck you?" said: "When my father punished me I knew I deserved it; I used to think better of him than before; but when I was punished, as I thought, unjustly—when I got a cuff on the ear or a thump with a thimble on the head (and it is an abominable practice) I didn't swear, but I thought swear. My mother has exploded more oaths inside of me than I can count. I do think it is the wickedest thing in the world to thump a child on the head with a thimble."

—There are more kid gloves sold in New York than in any city in the world. The annual receipts at that port are about 250,000 dozens of what are called first-class gloves. Including an inferior article, the number reaches 800,000 dozens a year, making $10,500,000 paid annually by New York merchants for this one article.

—Miss Susan B. Anthony made her triumphal march through Michigan in a bonnet so constructed and bedecked as to suggest a revival of some of the lost arts. Her chief mortification was experienced at Kalamazoo, where she was mistaken by the principal part of the population for a Swiss bell-ringer.

—A trunk checked for Chicago at the depot recently had the following inscription pasted on it, written in a delicate hand: "For heaven's sake, play light on this trunk. All I've got is in it, and every cent in my pocket I will have to spend to get a divorce from a worthless husband."

—French ladies have a knack of packing summer dresses which prevents their becoming crushed and wrinkled. They are never folded, but rolled in wrapping paper, and by this means their fresh and stiff appearance is preserved.

—"Everything goes wrong," said an Illinois farmer, wiping his eyes. "The grasshoppers cum, the hired man broke his leg, wife died, the barn burned, and I've rid for three days, and can't find a woman who wants to marry."

—The average female is just now crazy over hats. If she hasn't got a soft felt, with a rakish crown and a thievish-looking brim, she is crazy to get one, and if she has got one she is mad because she didn't get the other pattern.

—Eight hundred and thirty young girls applied at the Grand Opera House, New York, in answer to an advertisement for 100 young ladies to dance in the ballet.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE, in a unique and original conception—alone and in approached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot claim to estimate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo.

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a refined and appreciative taste, and to that will not eliminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The arts in illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious employment of landscape, animal figure, and material subjects, sustain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist to close study of a single style of subject. The liberal care of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment, worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical discussions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $6,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the Larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

He is no novice or humbug to beg, borrow or buy bolsters to uphold him in an art he does not fully understand in every phase of its beauty; but would respectfully point to the best of references, WORKS, and ability to discover, develope and train inherent talent to accomplish splendid results. His pupils are shining in private and public, here and elsewhere. His many Musical Exhibitions—such as others seldom or never present to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from fawning favoritism where true merit is too often absent. Terms, $12 for twelve weeks (twenty-four lessons) at his Music Room, or $15 at the pupil's residence, for Piano or Scientific Vocalization, separately or together. TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and a very reasonable charge. Daily Chronicle.

The Condition of Europe.

[Courier-Journal.

Could the elder Napoleon, Alexander of Russia, and Frederick of Prussia rise from their graves and look upon the Europe they left half a century ago they would think themselves risen on a new world. Of no nation in Europe can changes more rapid and transforming be predicated than of France. Scarcely four years ago she was in the throes of a mortal conflict. The empire had fallen and the great Teutonic wave which swept over her like a deluge left her naked, bleeding and dismembered. Setting herself to the work of regeneration with a will indomitable and an energy which shrank from no obstacles, she has within the last four years effected a transformation little short of marvelous. The immense indemnity sits easy upon her shoulders. While no new sources of wealth have been opened, the old have been increased and developed beyond all precedent. Never was the truth of the maxim, "Heaven helps those who help themselves," more conspicuously illustrated. Though political turmoil has been rife, the material prosperity of the country has gone on unchecked. Party warfare has not interfered with the accumulation of wealth, the collection of revenue and the reparation of individual and national loss.

News and Notes.

The total vote cast in Kansas was 85,000, nearly 15,000 less that two years ago. Osborne, republican, for Governor, has 13,447 majority. The average majority for the rest of the State ticket is about 19-000. The opposition vote is about 1700 and the republican vote about 14,000 less than two years ago. The legislature is two-thirds republican.

The congressional contest in the second congressional district of Virginia has been decided in favor of Goode; which makes the Virginia delegation to Congress stand 8 democrats to 1 republican.

A Portland dispatch says the schooner Water City, lumber laden, from St. George for Boston, failing to make Wood Island harbor or Richmond Island, got in behind Shooting Rock, near Prout's Neck, in the storm of Monday and anchored at five P. M. The waves washing over her, the crew left her in a boat, which was capsized, and the captain, with two of the crew named McVickers and McLoud were drowned. The captain leaves a wife and four children in St. George.

The official vote of Minnesota elects Dunnell, republican, in the first congressional district by 2955; Strait, republican, in the second district by 221, and King, republican, in the third district by 2348.

The disk of the wheel that carries Nos. 2 and 3, York mills, Biddeford, broke Tuesday, causing the mills to shut down and throwing 300 persons out of employment. It will take until January to repair the damages. The other mills of the corporation have therefore begun running on full time.

Orders have been received at the Charlestown navy yard to reduce the force of the engineer and construction departments sixty per cent.

It is stated that the Spanish government expressed willingness to pay indemnity in the Virginius case to the United States on the same basis as that with which Great Britain was satisfied for the outrage perpetrated on her subjects.

The republican majority on joint ballot in the Michigan legislature is estimated at twenty-two.

Two gunpowder episodes are reported from Maine. Mrs. Sylvester Lord, of Denmark, swept up some supposed dirt, and put it into the stove. Immediately the covers were blown off and the flames burst out into the room, singeing off Mr. Lord's whiskers, burning Mrs. Lord's face and arms badly, and her daughter's face so that she cannot open her eyes. Mr. Lord had spilled some gunpowder on the floor. At North Waldoborough a son of Benjamin A. Engley put a half pound of blasting powder into an old teapot, which his mother mistook for the one in use, and innocently set it upon the stove. In a few minutes a terrific explosion took place, demolishing the stove and shattering thirty-five panes of glass in the windows of the room. Luckily no one was injured.

The Nevada republicans have a large majority in both branches of the legislature.

In a New York letter to the Baltimore American Jennie June says: "It's pretty well understood that Hon. Fernando Wood is laying his wires for the difficult and dangerous honors of the Speakership, and it is considered that he will be a formidable, and, very likely, a successful candidate. He is experienced, very rich (an admirable qualification) and has a handsome wife; lastly, he is one of the few men who have survived the Mayoralty. An Ex-Mayor, like an Ex-President, is usually employed for nothing but funeral processions."

Sam Lee, colored, was not elected to Congress on the democratic ticket from South Carolina after all. The truth is that Lee was defeated by Rainey, the present incumbent, by nearly 800 majority.

State News.

Hon. Austin F. Pike denies the statement that he will decline a re-election from the second district. He says, however, that if any one else who is a thorough republican, can make a stronger canvass, he is entirely willing to waive precedent and join heartily in his support.

A meeting of the republican State Central committee is called for December 1st, at the Eagle Hotel, in Concord. It is the determination of the republican leaders to inaugurate a campaign that cannot fail to rescue the State from the hands of the democracy, assurances from all parts of the State being to the effect that the republicans are earnest and united, and determined to oust the democrats from power next March.

The investigation of the accounts of the Milford Savings Bank is concluded and results in cutting down the accounts of depositors ten per cent. The bank has estimated the loss at only four and a half per cent. The Commissioners, however, find that some of the securities were estimated above their market value, and think the actual loss is about eight per cent. The reduction of ten per cent. has been made to cover all contingencies and to prevent the last depositors who call for their money from being left in the lurch.

The Recent Storm.

The following is a detailed account of the tornado at Tuscumbia, Alabama: On Sunday evening, shortly after sundown, a windstorm of unprecedented violence struck Tuscumbia, and in two minutes destroyed upward of one hundred buildings, killing eleven persons outright, and wounding not less than thirty others. All day the weather was exceedingly warm, and toward evening a soft, warm wind began to blow from the southwest, and a thick bank of dark clouds was seen to form in that direction. At sundown rain began to fall, and shortly after dark a sound like rushing thunder was heard in the streets, and before the inhabitants were fully aware of the danger that threatened them the storm had passed over. The people whose houses were uninjured immediately rushed into the streets. They found men, women and children flying in all directions, their cries of alarm mingling with the moaning of dying animals. Houses were blown down in many places, and the streets and roads everywhere filled with crumbling walls and shattered timbers.

A few citizens hastily formed an organized body, appointed a leader, and set about ascertaining the nature of the damage done. They were met by a little girl named Lillie Elliott, who told them that her aunt's house was completely blown down, and she feared every one in it was killed. After fifteen minutes' hard work they were rewarded by finding two little girls, one five and the other eight years of age. One of the children was entirely unhurt and easily removed. The other had an arm firmly wedged in between two beams; but with a courage which was marvellous, called out, "Get my mother out. Get my mother out. Never mind me." At last the beams were cut away and the little one released. Digging further into the rubbish, a terrible sight met the eyes of the workmen. On a broken bed lay the body of a dead woman, two massive cross timbers resting on her neck. Under her were two little children locked in each other's arms, both dead and crushed out of all shape. The lady was the wife of State Senator Moore, recently elected. Both of the youngest children were undressed when found, and the little girls rescued said that their mother was just putting them to bed when the house was blown down. Little Lillie Elliott, who gave the alarm when the storm came on, says she felt the house falling about her, but she was unharmed.

When the first shock of the tornado had passed, John Hodgkins, a young man, crawled into the hall of the Tuscumbia Hotel and stated that he had been thrown out of the second story window of his house by the force of the storm; that the house was entirely blown down, and his brother's family buried beneath the ruins. A party at once formed, and headed by Mr. James Halsey, a traveller for a New York house, proceeded to the residence of Mr. Hodgkins. They found the building levelled with the ground. Through an opening which had been formed by the falling timbers, Halsey crawled under the house and discovered Mr. Hodgkins and his wife lying upon a bed apparently dead. The side of the fallen roof was cut through and in twenty minutes the bodies reached. At the foot of the bed, lying across it, was Mr. Hodgkins, beside him his wife, and under them their three children. The six were quite dead. The mother held her youngest child in her arms and the father was lying as if he had died in an effort to protect the other children. The bodies were fully dressed and not at all mangled. They had evidently died of suffocation.

Soon after the storm had blown over it was discovered that the iron railroad bridge over Spring Creek, about half a mile from town, had been completely destroyed at the same moment. It was remembered that the train from Memphis was expected to arrive in a few minutes, and soon after the whistle of the approaching train was heard, and the next moment the head-light flashed through the darkness. An attempt was made to signal the train to stop, but without avail, and before any warning could be conveyed to the engineer, the engine, baggage car and one of the passenger coaches went over the embankment 50 feet down into the creek. The rear passenger cars did not go off the track, it being blocked up by the wreck of the foremost ones. The engineer, fireman and baggage master of the train went over with it. They were cut out of the ruins after two hours' hard work, very dangerously burned and bruised, but are expected to recover. Several of the passengers were slightly injured, but none were prevented from proceeding on their journey.

There were many remarkable circumstances connected with the storm. It passed through the town from the southwest, and making for itself a path varying from 300 to 400 feet in width. In some places the strongest and most carefully constructed buildings were lifted completely from their foundations and laid level with the ground. Not far from these old and dilapidated buildings were left standing, apparently unharmed. The Baptist, Methodist and two other Protestant churches were all situated within a block of the Catholic church, which was recently erected, and none of them were injured in the least, while the house of the Catholic congregation was torn to pieces. Parts of the tin roof, which covered it, were blown a half a mile into the country. Near the church the high-school building was situated. It was completely destroyed, causing a loss of $20,000. After the storm the homeless families were taken to the residences of the more fortunate friends. About 300 were deprived of homes, and it is estimated that the total loss to the town and private individuals will reach $500,000. The Memphis and Charlestown Railroad Company lose $20,000. Half of the town of Montevallo, Ala., is reported destroyed, and two persons killed and twenty injured. Considerable damage to property is reported at other points.

Tragedy at Sea.

The whaling barque Florence, which arrived at San Francisco, November 12, from the Ochotsk Sea, had a terrible experience. Having put into a harbor at Pleasant Island, a number of the natives were allowed to come on deck. Soon after the vessel again sailed one of these natives was found concealed on board, and as he expressed a desire to be employed as a sailor he was set to work. He was found to be very eccentric, but little attention was paid to him. One warm day, while a number of the men were lying in the top-gallant forecastle, "Jim," as the savage had been named, suddenly, and without the slightest warning or provocation, drew a knife that hung in one of the men's sheath and stabbed him in the abdomen, inflicting a fatal wound. He then sprang at another member of the crew and made a violent plunge at him, but the assailed seaman leaped aside and escaped with a six inch rent in his shirt. A third man was next attacked, and he soon fell to the deck dead, with seven terrible stabs in the breast, face and thighs. After this the native sprang into the forecastle, where he imagined himself secure from harm. He fought like a tiger when assailed, but was at last stabbed to the heart by one of the crew.

New Hampshire Republicanism.

[Nashua Telegraph.]

In spite of a four years' civil war, during which more than thirty thousand citizens of this State were withdrawn from productive labor, the decade from 1860 to 1870 was the most prosperous in the history of New Hampshire. This statement is contrary to the general impression, and in flat contradiction to the averments so often made by democratic papers that New Hampshire has become poor and mean and retrogressive under republican rule, both State and National. This slander, false and vicious as it is in every particular, has gone unchallenged too long, and we propose, in a short series of articles, to prove beyond cavil or doubt that New Hampshire has made more material progress under the rule of the much-maligned republican party than under the rule of any other party that has ever governed it.

The evidences of prosperity must be looked for in the condition of agriculture, manufactures, education, and those appliances that accompany the march of civilization. If these show a steady, healthy growth and diffusion, we need look no further to find a progressive and prosperous State. In 1860, just before the democratic party stepped down and out in the nation, the value of the farms in this State was $69,689,761. The value of farm implements and machinery was $2,683,012. In 1870, we find the value of the farms to be $80,589,313 and the value of farm implements to be $3,459,943. Here we have an increase of $10,899,552 in the value of the farms of New Hampshire, or above 14 per cent. The increase in the value of implements and machinery, those appliances that add so vastly to the ease and amount of production, is $876,931, or upwards of 30 per cent.

While these figures are subject to some modifications on account of a difference in the value of the currency in 1870 and 1860, there still remains a large balance in favor of 1870, which is further evident from the difference in the value of the farm productions of the two periods named. Take, for instance, the comparative value of orchard products, one of the best indices of the growth of the agriculture of the State. In 1860, the orchard product was valued at $557,934; in 1870, at $744,552, a difference in favor of 1870 of $185,618. Take the comparative value of livestock, a very important index of the growth or decadence of the agriculture of a State. In 1860 the value of all live stock was $10,924,627; in 1870, $15,246,545—an increase of 50 per cent. This improvement is wholly in the improved character of the stock, for the number of head is actually less now than it was in 1860.

Of course the agriculture of our State is in a transition state, owing to the rapid growth of manufactures and the changes wrought by the railroads superseding the old turnpikes as means of communication and transportation. There is a falling off in all the cereals except buckwheat. Hay, one year with another, holds its own; potatoes show a considerable increase; other field crops a slight falling off in quantity, but more than made up in enhanced prices. Garden products show a large increase. The production and sale of milk has increased, largely, but the production of butter and cheese has proportionally diminished.

All these facts, taken with the increase in the value of farm machinery, show conclusively that farming in New Hampshire pays better and requires less labor than at any other period in its history. This is further evident from the aggregate value of farm productions, aggregating in 1870 $22,473,547, an average of $482.54 to each person above ten years of age engaged in farming—a much larger sum than was ever before realized in this State, and unsurpassed by any State east of the Alleghanies.

Down in Alabama.

[Cor. N. Y. Times.]

In Charleston, S. C., and in New Orleans, La., I have visited the houses of negroes who had contrived to make their children masters of many polite accomplishments. They were themselves men of education and refinement, and spoke with sense and understanding upon every question of the day. In Alabama I have been unable to find any representative of this class of colored men. The negroes here are in a condition of ignorance which is almost beyond belief. They are most shockingly immoral, have no idea of the sanctity of the marriage relation, and in most cases cannot be convinced that stealing is a crime. Their cabins are little better than pig-pens, and their children and swine wallow together in the same pool. An evening or two since I visited the homes of several plantation hands. They were all so much alike that a description of one will convey an accurate idea of the others. The house, so-called, was constructed of rough logs, and consisted of one large room. There were two windows at either end, and a large door was in the middle. In front of the door a little pond of stagnant water had collected. This was filled with scraps of decaying and rotten ears of corn. At the back of the shanty a garden of some two acres had once been enclosed. I found the fences broken down and falling to pieces. The little plot of ground, which might have been made to produce vegetables enough for a New York hotel, had been planted in cotton. This was not properly cultivated, however, and it was evident that no crop had been harvested. Here and there a few stunted plants were seen withering in the sun, trying hard to live among the weeds, which grew in rank profusion. Entering the open door, I found the cabin occupied by a man and woman and three small children. In one corner a huge bed was standing. This was covered with a white linen spread, through the holes in which a filthy woolen blanket could be seen. On the greasy floor, under the bed, a sow covered with vermin was grunting undisturbed. A broken table, a stool, and three chairs completed the furniture of the squalid apartment. When I entered the room the man and woman were just finishing their supper of corn-bread, bacon, and fresh fish, caught in the Alabama. The woman, a bad-tempered looking creature, was dressed in a torn calico gown, over which a greasy but expensive woolen shawl was pinned. She had no shoes or stockings on her feet, but her head was decorated with a bunch of many-colored ribbons. The man was a good-natured fellow who had been introduced to me by the owner of the plantation as an honest and faithful workman. When he saw me he stood up from the table, and asked if there was anything he could do for me. I told him that I wanted to ask him a few questions about how the colored people lived, and he at once put on his torn hat and came to the door. "You did not raise much cotton this year," said I, pointing to the ground behind the house. "No, Sah," said he, laughing in a childish way, "cotton wants 'tention, and niggers is powerful lazy persons."

"Mr. Sehr tells me that you, on the contrary, are a very hard-working man."

"Dat's so; to be sure I works hard 'nough when Mr. Sehr done gone watch me all day, but lor! no nigger don't work when he ain't watched. 'Tain't in niggers, and dey can't do it. When we gets 'nough to eat we don't care for nuffin but sleepin', and dat's God's trufe." After this candid confession Jake laughed again, and I asked him if the women were as lazy as the men. "Sure," said he, "afore the war dey did powerful work, but since freedom nigger gais is done gone crazy, and just like the white ladies, dey don't do nuffen." "Is that the case with your wife as well as the rest?" "My wife!" exclaimed Jake; "I ain't got no wife." "Is the woman in the cabin your sister?" I asked. "No, Sah," said he, "I lives wid her dese three years now; her old man done gone left, and went to Mississippi." "And you are not married to her!" I exclaimed. "Oh, no, Sah," said he, "dat don't make no difference 'round here." Subsequently I learned that what Jake told me was true in every particular. Black men and women on Alabama plantations live together and separate very much as it suits their inclination or convenience.

—There is a curious case in Detroit. A colored man having lately been married a second time, no funeral having intervened since his first, is accused of bigamy. His defence is that the first wife, so-called, was a white woman; that it was illegal for a negro to marry a white, when he did so, and therefore that he has now at last only secured his first legal partner. The Judge has laid the case over for meditation.

The postponement of the Gift Concert of the Kentucky Public Library to November 30th, 1874, was resolved upon to make a full drawing a certainty. There will positively be no further postponement, and the great prize will be the marvellous sum of $250,000. Who will get it? What a pestered man Gov. Don't Hazard Your Life!
A lighted lucifer in a powder mill is scarcely more dangerous than a deep-seated cough or cold. It is an inexcusable error too; for HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR will cure any irritation of the lungs or throat with a despatch and thoroughness which precludes all necessity for apprehension. Phlebotomy.
When Dr. Sangrado found his patients weak he gave them water gruel. When they got weaker he bled them and dosed them with calomel and jalap. Gil Blas tells us they almost invariably died. A good many people are killed that way yet. The world in general, however, has found out that, in cases of debility and premature decay, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the true invigorating cordial. This tonic is a powerful and perfectly harmless restorative. But it does more than invigorate. It regulates and purifies. While it builds up the strength and infuses vitality into the blood, it brings all the secretions into harmony with the laws of health. The feebler sex find it invaluable in the various physical difficulties to which their organization renders them subject. In all hysterical and hypothondriacal cases its effect is magical. By it the strength is increased, the appetite preserved, and firmness and elasticity given to the system.

The Green Grass Grows in the meadow, go spread over it a thin layer of Bearine, and the tiny blades will shoot upwards, and grow far more luxuriantly than before. Try the same experiment upon your hair and the effect is still more marked; the hair grows vigorous and seems to find in Bearine all the ingredients to support its life. 10

At The Temple,
THURSDAY EVENING, NOV. 26th.

The famous California Colored Vocalists, the

HYERS SISTERS,

ANNA MADAH HYERS and EMMA LOUISE HYERS, whose appearance at the National Peace Jubilee, and in concerts at Steinway Hall, New York, and Tremont Temple, Boston, created such a marked sensation in the musical circles of both cities, respectfully announce that they will have the honor of appearing in this city in a grand

OPERATIC CONCERT,

Assisted by the following first-class Artists:
Mr. Wallace King, the popular Lyric Tenor;
Mr. John M. Luca, the gifted Baritone; and
Mr. A. C. Taylor, the accomplished Pianist.

We believe the programme to be presented will meet the requirements of the most fastidious, including as it will some of the most popular songs of the South, as also sacred and operatic selections.

Admission 35 cents; reserved seats 50 cents; Tickets for sale at Preston's.

Local Matters.

Laconics.

Poultry was very scarce in our market on Tuesday, the price advancing from 20 to 28 cents per pound, and although there was a larger supply on Wednesday turkeys sold readily at 28 cents, some extra ones bringing as high as 30 cents per lb. Last year at this time the price was from 17 to 20 cents per lb.

At the next meeting of the Portsmouth Grange, Mr. Charles H. Hayes, will read an original essay upon "the culture of Potatoes."

Peter Williams, colored, has taken the elopement fever, and gone east with another colored individual's wife, much to the latter gentleman's disgust.

The New Orleans Times says: Sheridan, Mack & Day's Variety and Pantomime Troupe are a well-balanced company of first-class artists, nearly all new to a New Orleans audience, and about as good a combination as New Orleans ever had of its class; many of the members are much better, and present a more refined style of performance than it has been accustomed to. Miss Alecia Jourdan may be classed as the best in her line on the stage. Lester and Allen as gymnastic, song and dance men are wonderful. Sheridan and Mack still retain their popularity, and greatly deserve it. The Stuart sisters are a pair of pert, lively blondes, with sketches and dances new, done in so gentle a manner as to demand commendation. The entertainment concludes with a lively pantomime by Constantine, Funice, Devere and Mlle. Eveline appear.

The post office will be open to-day from 8 to 12 A. M., and from 5 to 6 P. M.

Total depravity seems to have struck deep into the colored race. On the night of the democratic celebration two colored "gemmen" carried in the democratic procession, a banner with the strange device, "We are satisfied!" Yet in less than two weeks after, these two democratic banner-bearers ran off with two other men's wives.

The Wolfe Tone club had a Thanksgiving ball last night at Congress Hall.

The Hyers Sisters will sing again at the Temple to-night. The concert of last evening was not attended by as large an audience as the performance merited. The voices of the company are very good and blend melodiously, the tenor and soprano being exceptionally fine. The company will sing at the Baptist church this morning. Tickets for the concert may be had at Preston's at 35 and 50 cents each.

No paper to-morrow.

There is talk of securing Rev. William H. Wilburn, the blind orator, to deliver a lecture here. Why not—before the lyceum course, as a special entertainment? The Louisville Courier-Journal says: For refined beauty of language, genuine wit, noble thoughts, and oftentimes a deep pathos, we have not known his equal. With personal conviction we now pronounce him to be most truly "The Blind Man Eloquent."

Kate Reignolds will give the next lyceum entertainment as advertised, Dec. 8th. Rev. E. H. Chapin will be unable to meet his engagement until January 15th.

Prof. E. D. Sanborn of Dartmouth College will lecture in the Methodist church on Friday evening. Prof. Sanborn is one of our most distinguished scholars and teachers, and a most graceful and eloquent speaker. We understand there is quite a talk in the third District with the democrats of nominating him for Congress. They could not do better.

The Eastern Railroad runs a Pullman car to Portland on the train leaving here at 5.45 P. M.

Thefts.

The police had a few jobs, Wednesday. James Gilchrist, notoriously known as "Scotty," who has been "sent up" from time immemorial for divers offences, raided the butcher's wagon of Mr. Benning Morrill, Tuesday evening, and walked off with a leg of beef, showing good judgment in selection but poor judgment in execution. The police nabbed "Scotty" and the beef, and the thief thanksgives on crackers and cheese in the lock-up.

Jeremiah Cronin abstracted two turkeys from the wagon of a Mr. Moody, of York, one of the gobblers weighing twenty-two pounds. But this did not satisfy Jerry, and he lugged off a box of tobacco from the wagon of a Mr. Armstrong, also of York, showing due appreciation of the tastes of Maine farmers. The wagon was standing near the store of J. Rider & Son on Penhallow street, and the thief was seen by a man who did not know him. A search warrant was secured, and the turkeys and tobacco were recovered, and Cronin was captured in the evening.

Cruel.

Two old worn-out horses have been exposed to the storms and severe weather of the past few days and nights tied, together in the woods, a short distance from town. As soon as the fact was discovered, City Marshal Marden and an officer of the S. P. C. A. went in search of the poor creatures. When found, one of them was in such a pitiable condition that his days were mercifully ended.

Dover All Right!

The Democracy Beaten.

A REPUBLICAN MAYOR AND CITY COUNCIL.

The first election in Dover since it was gerrymandered by the democrats came off on Tuesday. The republicans carried two wards and the democrats two. The republicans elected four Aldermen and nine Councilmen; the democrats elected four Aldermen and seven Councilmen. For Mayor, Hodsdon, republican, had 45 plurality and was elected. The vote was as follows: Edward P. Hodsdon, republican, 820 votes; George W. Tash, democrat, 775; Joseph S. Abbott, prohibition, 46. Mr. Hodsdon is one of the Railway Commissioners and is a life insurance agent. The friends of Josh Foster came out first best in the democratic ranks, the "buckram men," under the lead of Dr. Stackpole, being completely worsted.

The Lyceum Concert

By the Naval Band and Master Willie Nowell, Tuesday evening, was what the well-earned reputation of the performers had led the audience to confidently expect.—a most enjoyable entertainment. The Naval Band is as good in a hall concert as on a street march, and fully maintained its credit on this occasion; Mr. John F. Shillaber was deservedly complimented for his clarionet obligato, and Mr. Burnham's cornet solo in Schubert's serenade, and his glocken spiel solo (arranged by Mr. Henry L. Harlow) in the selection from Herve's opera, gave every lover of good music a treat. Master Willie Nowell was obstinately encored for each of his programme pieces, and each time gracefully yielded to the demand for "some more,"—his violin-playing, and the piano accompaniment of his younger brother, giving another evidence of their unusual musical ability and reflecting great credit on their instructors. The universal verdict of the audience, so far as we heard, was that the concert was "good enough for anybody."

Declining an Invitation.

"Ed." somebody sends the following:

Imagination saw a goose laid out upon a platter, that used to quack about your door, and fatter grow and fatter. Deluded goose, he little thought while picking up his living, that he must die, be dressed and stuffed and served up on Thanksgiving. How nice he looks as he lies there, all dripping o'er with batter, and browned so nicely to a crisp, feet upward on the platter. 'Tis said "distance enchantment lends" to mortal beings' view; but draw me nearer turkey, roast goose and chickens, too. Their nearness more enchanting, proves that proverb is not right; for nearness to such objects gives more pleasure far than sight. Alas, that goose I would have ate is many miles away, and here I sit and mourn such fate on this Thanksgiving day. A turkey for my dinner waits, a slice is meant for me; there's cranberry sauce and puddings hot, and a savory cup of tea. But what is that if there's no fun, no jokes, no laughter free? in silence ate, all tasteless seems without such jollity. A boarding house is not the place Thanksgiving fare to try; we often find to our disgust, queer objects in our pie. Oh, give to me a farmer's fare, fresh fowl just from the spider, cakes, puddings, sauce, preserves and pie, and lots of apple cider. No turkey tastes one-half as well, or goose or chicken pie; plum puddings, cakes and all things nice—without home friends are nigh. So ask me to your table, Jen., on next Thanksgiving day, where acting will not prove a task but most delicious play.

Let us hope that "Ed's" spirit is now at rest.

COOKING and PARLOR STOVES

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great native artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt to establish such a journal, did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or transitory interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound, at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception, and has no competitor, nor can it strictly without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the gem-like beauty of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times the cost, and then, there is the chromo, besides.

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in a narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the representation of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the gifted native American artists, attention will always be given to the finest from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from a view of foreign sources.

The aim is illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the artistic treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure, and animal subjects, sustain an unbroken interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a fitting and graceful accompaniment, worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Faithful Friend"

Will be welcome in every house. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMANS PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

Driven to Death.

"Why sit here?"

"Because it's high and pleasant."

"But it goes so deep down, it makes me quite giddy; and the sun shines so dazzling on the water; let's go a little farther."

"No—not any farther."

"Just back, then, as far as that green enclosure—it was so pleasant there."

"No—I say—not there, either;" and he flung himself down, as if he either could not, or would not, go farther.

She remained standing, with her eyes intently fixed upon him.

"Aasta," then he said, "now you must explain to me why it was you were so much afraid of that foreign skipper who came in just in the dusk of the evening."

"Didn't I think that was it?" she whispered, and seemed to wish to avoid the matter.

"Yes, you must tell me before you go, else I shall never come again."

"Botolf!" she exclaimed; and she turned but still remained standing.

"It's true," he continued. "I promised you I wouldn't ask any questions, and I'll still keep my word if you like; but then things must come to an end between us."

She burst into tears, and came over to him, with the sun shining full upon her slender little figure, small hands, and soft golden hair, wherefrom the kerchief had fallen.

He sprang up.

"Yes!" he exclaimed, "you know very well when you come looking like that at me, I always give in to you. But I know, too, that the longer this thing goes on, the worse it gets. Can't you understand that, though I may promise you a hundred times not to wish to know about your bygone life, I never have any peace? I can bear it no more." His face, too, did indeed bear a look of long-continued suffering.

"Yes, Botolf, you did indeed promise me to let that thing rest—that which I can never, never tell you about. You promised me, solemnly; you said you didn't care about it, if you could but have me. Botolf!" she exclaimed again, sinking to her knees before him upon the heather; and she wept as though her very life were in peril, and so looked at him through her fast-falling tears that she seemed at once the loveliest and most miserable creature he had ever seen in all his days.

"Oh, dear me!" he exclaimed, rising, but then directly sitting down again, "if you did but love me well enough to have confidence in me, how happy we two might be!"

"If you, rather, could but have a little confidence in me!" she implored, coming nearer him, still upon her knees, and looking yearningly into his face. "Love you! Why, that very night when your ship had run into ours, when I came up on the deck and you stood there in command, I thought I had never seen anybody so brave and manly; and I loved you from that moment. And then when you carried me over into the boat when the ships were sinking, I once more felt, when I thought I never should feel again, a wish to live." She wept in silence, with her hands clasped together, resting upon his knee. "Botolf!" then she exclaimed, "be good and noble; be as you were when you first took me! Botolf!"

"Why do you urge me so?" he replied, almost harshly. "You know very well it can't be. One must have a woman's whole soul; though for a little while at first, perhaps one is content without."

She drew back, and said hopelessly:

"Ah, well, then, my life can never come right again! O God!" And once more she began to weep.

"Trust me with the whole of your life, and not merely a part of it, and it will come right so far as I am concerned."

He spoke cheerfully, as though to encourage her.

She did not answer; but he saw she was struggling with herself.

"Master yourself," he urged; "run the risk of doing as I wish. Things can't be worse than they are now, at any rate."

"You'll drive me to the very worst," she said piteously.

He misunderstood her and continued:

"Even if you have to confess the greatest crime to me, I'll try to bear up; but this I can't bear."

"No: and neither can I!" she exclaimed; and she rose.

"I'll help you," he said rising also; "day by day I'll help you, when I only know what this thing is. But I'm quite too proud to be with a woman I don't fully know about; and who perhaps belongs to somebody else."

A bright flush came over her face.

"For shame! if you talk of pride, I'm a good deal prouder than you are; and I won't have you say such things. So stop!"

"If you're so very proud, then, why do you leave room for my suspicions?"

"God help me! I can bear this no longer."

"No, nor I either; I've made a vow it shall come to an end this day."

"How cruel it is," she wailed out, "to go on worrying and tormenting a woman who has trusted herself so fully to you, and has begged and prayed of you as I have been doing." She was near again beginning to weep, but with a sudden change of feeling, she exclaimed, "Yes, I see how it is; you think by provoking and exciting me, you'll get things out of me!" She looked at him indignantly, and turned aside.

Then she heard him say slowly, word by word:

"Will you or will you not?"

"I will not," replied she, stretching out her hand; "no, not if you gave me all we can see from here!" She went from him; her bosom heaved, and her eyes wandered to and fro, but mostly looked toward him, now sternly, next sorrowfully, then sternly again. She leaned against a tree and wept; then ceased weeping, and returned to her former mood.

"Ah, I very well know you don't love me," she heard next, and in a moment she was the most humble and penitent of creatures.

Twice she tried to answer, but, instead, she flung herself down upon the heather, and hid her face in her hands.

Botolf came forward and stood over her. She knew he was there, and she waited for him to speak, and tried to prepare herself for whatever he might say; but not a word came, and she grew yet more disturbed, and felt obliged to look up. She sprang to her feet instantly; Botolf's long, weather-beaten face seemed to have become sunken and hollow, his deeply-set eyes staringly prominent, and his whole figure monstrous; and it stood over her with some strange influence that suddenly made her see him once more upon the ship just as she saw him on the night of the wreck: but now his strength was boundless, and it was all turned against her.

"You have been untruthful with me, Aasta."

She turned away, but he followed her, and continued:

"And you have made me untruthful, too; there hasn't been perfect truthfulness between us a single day ever since we have been together."

He stood so near that she could feel his hot breath; he looked straight into her eyes till she felt quite giddy; she knew not what he might the next moment say or do; and so she closed her eyes. She stood as though she must either fall or rush away; the crisis was coming.

In its prelude of deep silence, Botolf himself became afraid. Still, once more he began in his former strain:

"Make everything clear; make an end of all this miserable trickery and concealment—do it here—now."

"Yes," she answered, but quite unconsciously—"so I say—do it here—now!"

He gave a loud cry, for she rushed past him, and flung herself over the steep. He caught a glimpse of her golden hair, her uplifted hands, and the kerchief, which spread out, slipped off, and floated slowly down after her by itself. He heard no shriek, and he heard no fall into the water below; for it was very far down. Indeed, he was not listening; for he had sunk to the earth.

Out from the sea she had come to him that night at first; into the sea she had now passed away again, and with her, the story of her life. In the midnight darkness of that silent deep, lay all that was dear to him: should he not follow? He had come to that place with a firm determination to make an end of the thing that tormented him: this was not the end; and now it could never come; the trouble was, indeed, only now in reality beginning. Aasta's deed cried out to him that he had made a terrible mistake, and had killed her. Even if his misery should become ten times greater, he must live on to find out how all had happened. She, who was almost the only one saved on that fearful night, had been saved only to be killed by him who had saved her. He, who had gone voyaging and trafficking about as if the whole world were nothing but sea and mart, had all at once become the victim of a love which had killed the woman of his choice, and must now kill him. Was he a bad man? He had never heard any one say so, neither had he ever felt it himself. But what if, after all, it were so? He rose; not, however, to cast himself over the steep, but to return to the valley: no man kills himself just when he has found a great enigma which he wishes to solve.

But the enigma of Aasta's life could never be solved now. She had lived in America ever since she had been grown up; and she was coming from there when the ships ran into each other. In what part of America should his quest begin? From what part of Norway she had at first come, he did not positively know; and he was uncertain even whether her family name had not been changed since then. And that foreign skipper? Who could he be? Did he know Aasta, or was it only she who knew something of him? To question thus was like questioning the very sea; and to journey forth to investigate was like plunging into its depths.

Surely he had made a terrible mistake. A woman penitent on account of some guilty thing would have found relief in confessing it to her husband; and one still impenitent would have sought refuge in some evasion or other. But Aasta had neither confessed anything, nor had recourse to any evasion, but had sought refuge in death when he had so tormented her. Such conduct showed no sign of guilt. But why not? Some folks had a great dread of confessing anything. Aasta, however had no such dread; for she had already confessed there was something about her life which she could never tell him. Perhaps, then, the greatness of her guilt made confession impossible! But she could not have had the burden of any great guilt upon her; for she was often joyous—nay, even full of fun. She was hasty and impetuous, it is true; but she was also very full of tender feeling and kindliness. Perhaps the guilt was some other person's, and not hers at all Why then had she never told him so? If she had only done this, all would have come right. But supposing there was no guilt, either on her side, or that of anybody else, how then? But she herself had said there was something she could never tell him. And then how about that foreign skipper she was so afraid of? How was it? In the name of goodness, how was it? Ah, had she been still alive, he would still have tormented her! This thought moved him deeply, and made him reproach and despise himself beyond measure.

Still he began again: perhaps she was not so guilty as she herself believed; or perhaps not so guilty as others might have thought? How often did we do wrong quite innocently, and only through ignorance, though so few could understand that! Thus Aasta had thought that he, who was always full of suspicion, would not understand it. Out of one clear, simple answer, he would have found matter for a hundred suspicious questions; and so she had chosen to confide herself to death rather than to him. Why could he never leave her in peace? She had fled from the things of her past life, and sought refuge with him, and then he, forsooth, must constantly drag them forward and fling them in her face! She was truly attached to him, and showed him all love and tenderness; what right had he, then, to concern himself about her past? And if he had any such right, why did he not say so in the beginning? Whereas, the more her affection had grown the more his disquiet had grown likewise—when she, not merely through admiration and gratitude, but also through love had become wholly his own, then, forsooth, he must begin to wish to know all about what she had done and been in days gone by. The more, too, she had pleaded for herself, the worse he had thought of her, and the more he had insisted that there was something he ought to be told.

Then, for the first time, arose the question had he told her everything? Would it really be right for husband and wife to tell each other everything? Would all be understood if it were told! Most certainly not.

He heard two children playing, and he looked around. He was sitting in the green enclosure Aasta had spoken of a little while ago, but he had not been aware of it till now. Five hours had passed: he thought it was a few minutes. The children had most likely been playing there for long; but he heard them now for the first time.

What! was not one of them Agnes, the clergyman's little daughter of eight years, whom Aasta had loved even to idolatry, and who was so like her! Good Heavens! how like she was!

Agnes had just set her little brother upon a great stone, where he had to be in school, while she was schoolmaster.

"Say now just what I say," she commanded: "'Our Father.'"

"Ou' Farver."

"'Who art in heaven.'"

"'Eb'm."

"'Hallowed be thy name.'"

"'Arvid be name."

"'Thy kingdom come."

"No!"

"'Thy will be done.'"

"No; s'ant."

Botolf crept away; not, however, because the prayer had touched him; indeed, he had not marked that it was a prayer; but while he looked at and listened to the children, he became, in his own eyes, a horrible wild beast, until to come near either God or man. He dragged himself behind some bushes, so that the children might not discover him: he was more afraid of them than he had ever been of any one in his life. He slunk off into the forest, far away from the high road.

Where should he go? To the now empty house he had bought and furnished for Aasta? Or should he go somewhere farther away? It mattered nothing; for wherever he thought of going, he saw Aasta standing there. It is said that when folks are dying, the last object they see is pictured upon their eyes; so, too, when a man awakes to consciousness after doing a wicked deed, the first object he sees is pictured upon his eyes, and he can never get rid of it. Thus when Botolf now saw Aasta, she no longer appeared to him as she had upon the mountain-slope so short a time before, but she seemed to be a little innocent girl—in fact, to be Agnes. Even the picture he retained of her figure while she was sinking down the steep was that of Agnes, with her little hands uplifted. In whatever direction he turned his thoughts and remembrances of the suffering woman whom he had suspected, they were met by this innocent child, whom he had just heard repeating the Lord's Prayer. In every scene of his life with Aasta—from the night of the shipwreck to this Sunday morning—the child's face appeared. The thought of this mysterious transformation so preyed upon him, in both mind and body, that in the course of a few days he became unable to take his necessary food, and a little while after was compelled to take his bed.

Soon every one could see he was approaching death. He whose mind is burdened by some great fire-enigma acquires a peculiar manner, through which he himself becomes an enigma to others. Even from the day Botolf and Aasta first came to live in that parish, and his gloomy taciturnity, her beauty, and the loneliness of the life of both, had been the subject of frequent gossip among the neighbors; and now, when Aasta all at once disappeared the talk increased until the most incredible things said were the best believed. Nobody could throw any light upon the matter; for none of those who lived upon the mountain-ridge or the shore beneath, or who were accustomed to go there, had happened to be looking toward the steep just when Aasta flung herself over. Neither did her corpse ever drift to land, itself to give evidence.

Even while Botolf was yet alive, therefore, no end of strange spiritualistic stories were told about him. He became dreadful to see, as he lay there with long, sunken face, red beard and unkept red hair growing tangled together, and large eyes looking up like some dark tarn in a deep mountain-hollow. He seemed to have no wish either to live or to die; and so the folks said there was a fight for his soul going on between God and the devil. Some said they had even seen the evil one, surrounded by flames, climb up to the windows of the dying man's chamber to call to him. They had seen the evil one, too, they said, in the form of a black dog, go sniffling round the house. Others, who had rowed past, had seen the whole place on fire; while others, again, had heard a company of devils, shouting, barking, and laughing, come from the sea, pass slowly toward the house, enter through the closed doors, run furiously through all the rooms, and then go down once more beneath the waves, with the same awful roar as they made in coming out. Botolf's servants, men as well as women, left immediately, and told all these tales to everybody. Hardly any one dared even go near the place; and if an old peasant and his wife, to whom the sick man had shown some kindness, had not taken care of him, he would have lain utterly untended. Even this old woman herself was in terror when she was with him, and she used to burn straw under his bed to keep off the evil one; but though the sick man was nearly scorched up, he still kept alive.

He lay in terrible suffering; and the old woman thought at last he must be waiting to see some one. So she asked him whether she should send for the clergyman. He shook his head. Was there any one else he would like to see? To that he made no answer. The next day, while he was lying as usual, he distinctly pronounced the name "Agnes." Certainly, this was not in reply to the old woman's question of the day before; but she fancied it was, and she rose gladly, went out to her husband, and bade him harness the horses with all speed, and drive over to the parsonage to fetch Agnes.

When he reached there, everybody thought there must be some mistake, and that it was the clergyman who was sent for; but the old man insisted it was the little girl. She herself was indoors, and heard the message, which frightened her greatly; for she, among the rest, had heard the tales about the devil, and about the company of devils rushing up out of the sea. But she had also heard that there was some one whom the sick man was waiting to see, and must see before he could die; and she did not think it any wise strange that one should turn out to be herself, whom his wife had so often fetched over to the house before. Agnes' sisters told her, too, that one must always try to do what dying folks wish; and that if she prayed nicely to God, nothing could do her any harm. She believed this, and let them dress her to go.

It was a cold, clear evening, wherein she could see long dark shadows following, and hear echoes of the harness-bells sounding far off in the forest; on the whole, she felt it was rather dreadful, and she sat saying her prayers, with her hands folded together inside her muff. She did not see the devil anywhere, neither did she hear any company of devils rushing up out of the sea while she rode along the shore, but she saw many stars above her, and light shining straight before her upon the mountain-peak. Up around Botolf's house, all seemed dismally quiet; but the old peasant woman came out at once, and carried Agnes indoors, took off her travelling dress, and let her warm herself at the fire. Meanwhile, the old woman told her she need not be anywise afraid of the sick man, but must just go in to him with good courage, and say the Lord's Prayer to him. Then, when Agnes got warm, the old woman took her hand, and led her into the sick room. Botolf lay there with long beard and hollow eyes, and he gazed at her intently; but she did not think he looked dreadful, and she was not afraid.

"Do you forgive me?" he whispered.

She supposed she ought to say "yes," and she said "yes," accordingly.

Then he smiled, and tried to raise himself in the bed, but his strength failed, and he remained lying.

She began at once to say the Lord's Prayer; but he made a movement as though to bid her pause, and pointed to his breast. So she laid both her hands there; for this was what she thought he intended her to do; and he directly laid one of his clammy, ice-cold, bony hands upon her warm ones, and then closed his eyes. When she found he did not say anything after she had finished the prayer, she did not venture to remove her hands, but just began to say it again.

When she had said it for the third time, the old woman came in, looked, and said:

"You can leave off now, my dear—he's gone!"

—Gail Hamilton, despairing of nothing, now tenders her advice to the Indians.

Daily Chronicle.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1874.

News and Notes.

Says the Nashua Telegraph: The present is a crisis when the young men of the party should be encouraged to come to the front and take a leading interest in its management. In our opinion there never was a time when the path of duty and success seemed so plain as now. Upon the young men of the republican party devolves the task of redeeming New Hampshire and starting it again on a prosperous and progressive career, such as it enjoyed in unexampled measure from 1860 to 1873. We hope that the meeting to be held next week and the conventions that follow will be pervaded with the vigor and enthusiasm that comes from a liberal infusion of young blood.

Thomas L. Jones, democratic candidate for the office of Clerk of the Kentucky Court of Appeals, elected last August by 50,000 majority over Cochrane, his opponent, has been declared incapable of holding the office in consequence of having accepted a challenge to fight a duel five years ago. The State Constitution prescribes that the person accepting such a challenge shall be ineligible thereafter to public office. The State Contesting Board, after a four weeks' investigation, has declared the office vacant.

A rum old party—the democratic.

A Memphis dispatch says that Andrew Johnson made a speech at a democratic jubilation in his own town of Greenville, during which he was so violent in manner and used language so grossly inappropriate to the occasion and insulting to the audience, as well as to those on the stand, that when he finished the audience dispersed without hearing the other speakers, expressing general dissatisfaction at Johnson's remarks. The dispatch adds that he has lost all hope of being elected to the United States Senate.

Political timber too crooked to lay on the ground to be measured—the prohibition party.

Fifty-two liquor dealers of Biddeford have gone out of business since the first of last January. Of this number sixteen have left the city and others have found other employment. In the whole county seventy persons have quit the rum business. This is in consequence of the enforcement of the law by the sheriff in connection with the temperance reform movement which has been so successfully carried forward of late.

Wesley Underwood, who was to have been executed at Palmyra, Mo., on Friday next, committed suicide, Wednesday night, by hanging himself. The Governor had refused to pardon him, and preparations for his execution had begun.

Col. John W. Forney has sold a controlling interest in the Philadelphia Press to Col. Alex. McClure, a "Greeley liberal."

John W. Keeley of Philadelphia has invented a process by which, with two gallons of water and without the use of chemicals or electricity, he expects to generate force enough to draw a train of cars from Philadelphia to San Francisco and back again.

And the democracy has Florida also; three majority on joint ballot in the legislature. Senator Gilbert will prepare to move.

On Thanksgiving eve, a man named John Sugden jumped off an Eastern Railroad train at Saugus, Mass., and striking the platform, mutilated the lower part of his body in a shocking manner.

There are now five females in the Vermont State prison.

Initiatory steps have been taken for the formation of a new party at Indianapolis, favoring the abolition of national banks and the substitution of legal tender and introconvertible notes. At the first meeting, Hon. James Buchanan (we have heard that name somewhere before) was chosen chairman.

The democrats have not elected a United States Senator in New York since 1844, when John A. Dix was chosen.

The new chief of the New England Secret Service has disturbed the quiet of a party of nickel counterfeiters in Massachusetts who have been making and uttering five cent pieces. Dennis and Mary Ann Quilty were arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Hallett, on the 24th, and committed to jail to await action by the grand jury.

At the democratic rejoicing in Lynchburg, Va., over the election returns the festivities were closed by Jubal Early (Gen. Sheridan's rapid friend), who called for "One more good old Confederate yell," which was given with a will.

Schooner Broadfield, of Boston, from St. Andrews, N. B., for Boston, was totally lost on the 23d inst., while trying to make this harbor during the gale. She struck on a ledge at Sea Point, Kittery, and went to pieces. The vessel belonged to the master and others and was not insured.

The Portland Press, which is a paper of that sort which enjoys giving aid and comfort to the enemy by pressing its spinal deformities into full view to disgust well meaning republicans, now defends Dawes, and wishes there were a hundred such political hypocrites in Congress. Merciful heav-ings!

State News.

There are more than two hundred inmates at the county house at Brentwood, the largest number ever there.

Frank H. Hammond of Bow was fatally injured while leading a horse to water from the barn.

The Overseer of the Poor at Great Falls reports unusual destitution, especially among the Canadian French out of employment.

Winslow T. Perkins of Dover has been appointed station agent of the Portsmouth and Dover railroad in that city.

The Dover Election.

At the Dover municipal election the average republican majority on Aldermen, Selectmen, Councilmen and Assessors in the city was about 160, a republican gain of 100 from the spring election. The Enquirer says the democrats were out to the last man, while some one hundred republicans did not vote. The Irish ward Two went democratic by about seventy majority, but three of the six Irish candidates on the democratic ticket were defeated, the other three narrowly escaping, the democrats being content to use the Irish vote to elect their other candidates. The vote of the various wards for Mayor was as follows:

	1	2	3	4	Total
Hodsdon	136	293	358	28	815
Trafton	87	406	179	81	753
Abbott	10	21	35		67
	233	720	572	109	1634

Republican plurality, 62. The republicans chose a Councilman in the second ward by a vote of 326 to 325, giving them a majority in the Council.

The democratic mayoralty caucus, on the night before election, was such a disgraceful affair that Col. Joe Cushing of circus fame declared it to be "a menagerie with too many clowns." Three of the "buckram men" undertook to telescope Foster, whose other name is Joshua. But Joshua didn't telescope worth a cent. When he appeared at the door these "buckram" men told him to "scat," and threatened to set the dogs on him, for being a black sheep in the flock, but Joshua lingered near until Tom Printy and Jim Fogerty did appear, and these gentlemen took him into the hall. When Foster went to vote, he was beset by the "buckrams" with bad words, and even collared. But Tom Printy and Fogerty got on their muscle and just bared their bosoms to the storm's destructive elements, told the crowd to "hush up," and they hushed. Foster was allowed to vote and felt good to think that once again he was at the top of the heap. The chap who challenged Foster's vote was in turn challenged on the charge of having sold his vote for a bribe last Spring. The combatants called each other all the dirty names they could think of before the ballot was declared. Then the Irish laddies who had championed Foster nominated Geo. W. Tash by a vote of three to one for the "buckram" candidate. How highly honored decent men must feel to have interests in common with such rowdies as interrupted the proceedings of the caucus!

Local Matters.

Laconics.

Master Willie Nowell has developed marked qualities for teaching on his favorite instrument, the violin, and has already a number of pupils, among them some of the finest musicians in Portsmouth. Mr. Julius Eichberg, of the Boston Conversatory of Music, whose pupil Willie has been for nearly three years, states that he is highly qualified to impart his method, which is everywhere acknowledged to be second to none.

The Athlete base ball club of Kittery gave a ball at Trefethen's Hall in that town, Thanksgiving eve. Turner's band furnished the music, and a large and orderly company attended.

Colonel Oliphant of the Direct Cable Company is at Rye Beach, awaiting the arrival of the Faraday at Torbay, in order to make the final completion of the enterprise. Under Colonel Oliphant's directions, plans have been prepared and proposals issued for the building of a cable station of the dimensions of thirty-two by forty-eight and two stories high. In addition to the operating rooms, there will be accommodations for the manager and some of the principal electricians. It is to be completed by January 15th.

Some rascal who deserves a cowhiding entered the yard of Mr. Gilman Randall on Hunking street, Thanksgiving night, and cut the clothes hanging on the line into shreds.

The ball of the Wolfe Tone club, in Congress Hall on Thanksgiving eve, was largely attended. Harlow's band furnished the music, good order was preserved throughout the evening, and every one seemed pleased with the entertainment. The orders of dances were very tasteful and handsome.

Thanksgiving Day was bright and cheerful.

On Thanksgiving Day, a team returning from the Trotting Park collided with a team driven by Miss Emma Sherburne. The lady was thrown out and severely injured, narrowly escaping death. She did not recover consciousness for several hours and is still confined to the house.—In the evening before the moon rose, the street lamps not being lighted, a hack turning into State street, at the corner of Pleasant, ran against a wagon and demoralized it to a great extent.

Paymaster Rufus Parks, U. S. N., is to be relieved from duty at this naval station by Paymaster A. J. Clark. Paymaster Parks is ordered to U. S. S. Brooklyn, and will be fleet Paymaster of the South Atlantic Squadron.

Judge Page held quite a levee, Friday. Jere. Cronin's case was continued to Jan. 1st, 1875, and the youngster was put under $200 bonds. James Gilchrist was sentenced to six months in the County House of Correction for stealing beef; B. Stowe Laskey was sent to the same place for four months for stealing a half-barrel of flour from J. Rider & Son; and James Rogers got sixty days of the same kind of punishment for being an idle and disorderly person.

While the workmen were removing the guns from the U. S. S. Ticonderoga on Friday afternoon, one of the derrick guys gave way, and the derrick, with a gun weighing 16,000 lbs., fell with great force, upon the wharf and in the midst of the men. Fortunately no one was hurt, though their escape from death was truly wonderful. Gunner Wilson, who was standing directly beneath the derrick, seeing that to move was certain death, stood still, the gun falling on one side of him and the mast on the other. The accident was caused by the breakage of a block-strap of one of the guys.

Thieving.

For some time past petty thieving has been going on in this city from wagons, shops and houses, and the old as well as the new police have endeavored to ferret out the thieves. For a long time the police attention has been directed to a gang of loafers who made their rendezvous around the Spring Market, although no direct charges could be brought, as their tracks were kept well covered. But they have finally come to grief. Four have been arrested and brought to trial and three duly sentenced, the fourth being on bail. In hunting up these cases the police have found an organized band with a leader who directs the movements of the young rascals—and are on the track of the receivers of stolen goods, who pay for their booty in bad rum.

Who Will It Be?
The postponement of the Gift Concert of the Kentucky Public Library to November 30th, 1874, was resolved upon to make a full drawing a certainty. There will positively be no further postponement, and the great prize will be the magnificent sum of $250,000. Who will get it? What a pestered man Gov. Bramlette of Louisville, business manager, would be, if the people supposed he could tell!

Don't Hazard Your Life!
A lighted torch in a powder mill is scarcely more dangerous than a deep-seated cough or cold. The individual who waits for such an invidious enemy of life to die out of itself, commits a frightful error. It is an inexcusable error too; for HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR will cure any irritation of the lungs or throat with a dispatch and thoroughness which preclude all necessity for apprehension. No type of cough, cold, influenza, or bronchitis can resist its strengthening, soothing, healing operation.

PIKE'S TOOTH-ACHE DROPS—Cure in one minute.

Phlebotomy.
When Dr. Sangrado found his patients weak he gave them water gruel. When they got weaker he bled them and dosed them with calomel and jalap. Gil Blas tells us they almost invariably died. A good many people are killed that way yet. The world in general, however, has found out that, in cases of debility and premature decay, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the true life-sustaining cordial. This tonic is a powerful and perfectly harmless restorative. But it does more than invigorate. It regulates and purifies. While it builds up the strength and infuses vitality into the blood, it brings all the secretions into harmony with the laws of health. The feeble see and it invaluable in the various physical difficulties to which their organization renders them subject. In all hysterical and hypochondriacal cases its effect is magical. By it the strength is increased, the appetite preserved, and firmness and elasticity given to the system.

The Green Grass Grows in the meadow, go spread over it a thin layer of Bearine, and the tiny blades will shoot upwards, and grow far more luxuriantly than before. Try the same experiment upon your hair and the effect is still more marked; the hair grows vigorous and seems to find in Bearine all the ingredients to support its life. 19

COOKING and PARLOR STOVES
To be found in any establishment in the State, among which may be found the WYOMING RANGE, which we believe to be superior to anything in the shape of a cooking arrangement yet invented,—having six boiler holes, a large oven, warming closet, dump grate, shelf, sifter and ash-pan,—combining all the conveniences found in others and some advantages to be found only in this; it is a quick and ready baker, splendid looking and beautifully ornamented, and in all its appointments is far ahead of anything of the kind in the market; and another important item is, we can sell it at a Very Reasonable Rate and warrant it to do all we say. Call and see it, and be satisfied that this is THE BEST COOKING STOVE IN THE WORLD.
We have for sale the HUB RANGE, said by those who use it to have no superior.
Also the GRANGER RANGE, a nicely-working stove which we sell at a reasonable price.
For the usual style of Cooking Stoves we have the ELECTRIC COOK Improved, and the NEW MAGNET, which cannot be beaten,—and we are bound to sell them at such bargains as will insure a ready sale.

[31w2nd013]

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, high, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, and to that end discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any interior page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure, and animal subjects, sustain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment, worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,000, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union,

SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.

(No charge for postage.)

Specimen copies of THE ALDINE, fifty cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON, President.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the cause of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

He is no novice or humbug to beg, borrow or buy belsters to uphold him in an art he does not fully understand in every phase of its beauty; but would respectfully point to the best of references, WORKS, and ability to discover, develope and train inherent talent to accomplish splendid results. His pupils are shining in private and public, here and elsewhere. His many Musical Exhibitions—such as others seldom or never present to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from fawning favoritism where true merit is too often absent. NUMBER IV.

I propose to devote this, and it may be the following letter to Stratford-on-Avon, and its surroundings; and the next to personal impressions of England—its hotels, railroads and people. Few Americans who visit England for pleasure leave it without spending a day or two at Shakespeare's birth-place.

Our country is new and raw compared with those on this side of the ocean, and there has been a great deal to do besides reading and studying; but there are few of its citizens who have not some idea of the great benefits that Shakespeare wrought for the mind and language of the English speaking race, and none need be ashamed of the noble literary monuments raised to his memory by Hudson, White and Furness.

A beautiful, quaint, old-fashioned little town is Stratford, with here and there a house of considerable pretensions, and in odd nooks and corners cottages that appear as though they might have been in existence a couple of centuries. The number of visitors here yearly amounts to many thousands, coming from every part of the world, pilgrims to the shrine of transcendent genius—the birth-place of him who wrote "not for a day, but all time."

I reached the place from Warwick in the midst of a driving rain, but did not feel my ardor abate in the least, for no one with a spark of true sentiment could come here, upon a first visit, for the enjoyment of outward show. It is the feast of the soul that entrances the visitor—the thronging array of fancies, recollections and impressions that gives zest to every hour spent here. Of course I went to the Red Horse Hotel, better known in America as the Washington Irving Hotel, from his having resided in it in 1820.

Perhaps some of my younger readers would like to know something about Stratford itself, aside from its connection with the Great Bard. Everything about it was interesting to me, and I availed myself freely of the Yankee prerogative of asking questions.

Stratford-upon-Avon is situated on the banks of the river Avon, eight miles west from Warwick, and ten from Leamington. It also lies in high road from London, distant ninety-four miles, and is approached by a stone bridge built over the river by Clopton, Knight and Lord Mayor of London in the reign of Henry VII. The town can be traced to as remote a period as three hundred years before the Norman invasion, at which time there was a monastery, supposed to have been founded by the Saxons, which was afterward dissolved, but the town remained in the possession of the Bishops of Worcester till 1542, when it was made over to the Duke of Northumberland. The present Lord of the Manor, is Lord Buckhurst. The first regular charter of incorporation dates back to Edward VI, which reciting and confirming former grants of privileges to "The Bailiff and Burgesses of Stratford-upon-Avon" was extended by James I, and subsequently by Charles II, in the 16th and 26th years of his reign.

For centuries after its incorporation Stratford continued to be but the unimportant centre of an agricultural district, and it is only within the last few years that it is inhabitants have awakened to the knowledge of its natural beauties and its many important advantages for trade and commerce. Only as late as 1867 an American tourist, who wrote some very pleasing letters for a Boston paper, spoke of Stratford as a "quiet unpretending little town, with hardly any manufactures, and but a few small shops where busts of Shakespeare pictures, carvings, guide-books and china dishes with pictorial representations of the poet's birthplace, Stratford church, etc., could be purchased." If that was a true picture then, the town has changed wonderfully certainly, since I have seen no place in England—this letter is written in London—where I would so soon make my home as in Stratford. At this time the inhabitants seem to be diligently availing themselves of their advantages of location; manufactures are springing up, old ones being extended and enlarged, while the streets and stores—there are more than two hundred of the latter some of which are very pretending in their display of fine and costly goods for a population of seven thousand souls—bespeak a condition of thrift and prosperity pleasing to contemplate.

I am told that nearly all of this is directly traceable to the silent yet all powerful influence of him who draws all nations to his shrine—to him, who though dead, yet lives in all hearts, and whose memory hallows every foot of street and road and every stone of Stratford.

I have never been in any town or city where everything about me seemed so pleasing and inviting as this. No wonder the beauty and salubrity of the neighborhood attract new residents every year. Scrupulously clean in every part, well lighted, thoroughly drained, well paved, a delightful suburb, and with abundant supplies for the conveniences and comforts of life, Stratford has every prospect of becoming one of the most considerable towns in the county.

Let us start from the hotel, making our first visit to the Birth-place. I am inclined to think that the first view of this odd and old-fashioned mass of wood and plaster which visitors get brings a disappointment with it; it certainly affected me so. I had been told that it was greatly changed, different even from its appearance a dozen years ago. I was familiar with its outer aspect as ordinarily represented in engravings, but was not prepared for the rejuvenated appearance given it by the new covering of wood and plaster, which painfully suggested a discarding of ancient garments by an old man, to whom every fold and wrinkle was becoming, for the inharmonius symmetry of fresh attire. This change, however, I found to be only upon the outside, and was necessitated by the decayed condition of some of the timbers. As it now stands it promises to resist Time's utmost efforts for centuries.

Unvarying tradition has pointed out this house, situated on the north side of Henly street, as the one in which John Shakespeare resided when his illustrious son was born. Small as it appears now it doubtless was in the sixteenth century a dwelling quite sufficient for the accommodation of a reputable family; and despite its restoration clearly shows a large portion of the old work and timber.

For nearly three hundred years the old home stead remained in the family possession, for although the direct line became extinct in the death of his grandchildren, Richard and Thomas Quincy, the property passed into the hands of Joan, the sister of the poet, by whose descendants it was held till 1806.

In 1847, after having passed through various vicissitudes of fortune, being in succession, a tenement house, a public house, and lastly a butcher's shop, it was again exposed for sale, when, in consequence of a powerful appeal made to the feelings of the nation by the Press, prompt and vigorous measures were taken to raise funds to secure for the country this inestimable relic. Some of my readers will remember the Quixotic scheme of a few Americans to purchase the building, and taking it apart, transport it to the United States. There is no doubt that such talk helped fire the British heart, and added to the enthusiasm where upon the 16th of Sept., 1874, the national agent bid off the little estate for a small advance over $15,000 previously offered. In connection with this little episode, it is pleasing to record a gift of John Shakespeare, Esq.—a gentleman who claims to be collaterally descended from the poet, of nearly fifteen thousand dollars additional for the purpose of separating it from the neighboring houses on Henly street. This wise measure will secure the building to a great extent from danger of fire and be a means of preserving it from decay.

We will enter the house; (fee six-pence, and one additional to visit the museum;) here we are in the kitchen, or according to the woman who showed our party about—"the living room." Everything is as near as possible in the original state, or as when occupied by the Shakespeare family. Of course old Time has necessitated many a patch of plaster, many a brace of wood and stay of iron; but still much that the visitor sees may well have been in place three hundred years ago. Everyone has to step in the great wide chimney place and examine with curious interest the hinge from which swung the crane, as well as the hooks on which the hams hung when undergoing their final smoke, not forgetting to peer into the great bacon closet, an apartment with which houses in those days were furnished.

Here in front of the blazing logs we may well imagine Will often sat listening to village legends and gossip, or stories of old crones and narratives of stirring events by flood and field, and so stored his growing mind to the full with that food which gave such strength and imagination to it in after years.

We linger here but a moment, for the room itself is all we have before us, everything pertaining to it having been conveyed to the adjoining room, and an upper apartment, which together form the museum.

The chamber in which the poet was born next claims our attention. How massive every thing appears here! Men built more rudely than now, but with a strength incomparable with the present. The apartment is low and plain, but bears upon the plastered walls a wealth of mosaic in pencilled autographs and inscriptions. A story was told us of this room which I make a note of in my letter; it must interest every one who has heard it. About forty years ago a poor old woman, one of the Harts, the last alleged descendants of Shakespeare, was ejected from the house, in consequence of the property passing into other hands. In a fit of resentment, before she quitted the ancient house she whitewashed the bedroom with a view to obliterate the inscriptions and signatures with which the whole surface is covered, forming unquestionably the richest and most interesting collection of autographs ever accumulated in one place. But the old lady in her haste to be revenged, omitted to put into her whitewash the necessary ingredients to secure its proper adhesion to the walls. This being discovered, steps were taken to remove the wash; it was a work of care rather than difficulty and was so far successful that thousands of names, obscure and otherwise, again see the light to the no small gratification of the visitor.

Our conductress kindly pointed out the autograph of Sir Walter Scott, made with a diamond on one of the panes of glass—overhead the name of Charles Dickens, and at the side of the fire-place, which seemed to have been the chosen spot for the autographs of actors, the signatures of Charles-

Kean, Edward Kean, G. V. Brooks and others. Visitors are not now permitted to write upon any portion of the building, and are always kept in sight by the people in charge, lest in the general passion for relic-stealing the rooms be defaced, or some portion of the house or appointments be taken away.

This room has but little furniture in it; a table, a chair or two, and a bust of the poet. But the two rooms used for the museum are full to overflowing of mementoes of the great bard, and objects associated with his name. Perhaps the greatest interest here centres in the "Stratford portrait," which is said to be of undoubted authenticity, having been in the family of a Mr. Hunt for over a century,—it is now kept in an iron safe for security against fire—and the rude school desk over which Master Will bent at his studies in the grammar school over the ancient Guild Hall. The bench is hacked and cut, and black with age, a sadly battered affair, but whether the true school-boy marks upon it were made by Will's knife tradition does not tell. Of course the visitor desires to think so. Among the other relics in the room is the deed made in 1596, proving that John Shakespeare, father of the poet, resided in the house we are now examining; also the celebrated letter from Richard Quyney to Shakespeare in 1598, asking for the loan of thirty pounds, the only letter addressed to Shakespeare known to exist.

Suspended from the wall, so that all may see it, the old sign of "The Falcon" demands a word. This ancient affair swung over the hostelry of that name in Bedford, a few miles from Stratford, where, so the story runs, Shakespeare and his chums made merry. The poet's gold signet ring, marked with the initials, "W. S." and a true lover's knot between is kept in a case. Here also is his jug, from which Garrick sipped wine at the jubilee of 1758; a phial, hermetically sealed, containing juice from the fruit of Shakespeare's mulberry-tree; the tree that was so foolishly cut down at New Place by Rev. F. Gastrell in 1756; an original grant of four yards of land in Stratford fields, by William and John Combe to Shakespeare in 1602; the poet's sword—numerous busts—the 2d, 3d and 4th editions of his works, besides many objects of great interest, some of which are directly associated with his residence in Stratford and London. Within the last few years the museum has been enriched by donations from various individuals and by the absorption of minor collections, until at this time nearly all that the nation holds directly associated with the history of this remarkable man is crowded within the compass of these walls.

From the birth-place I went to what is known as New Place, the later residence. It is but a short distance from the Town Hall, and on the same street, close to the beautiful chapel of the Holy Cross. It is much to be regretted that the whole of this interesting house should not now be standing; one wall, the outer face of the next tenement, being all that now remains; and still more to be regretted that the insane spleen of Rev. F. Gastrell—before referred to—should have been the cause of its demolition. The associations connected with this house are chiefly interesting as serving to show the standing and possessions of Shakspeare at the time he removed back to Stratford.

I remember reading not a little slanderous matter concerning this wonderful man; stuff wherein he was accused of low and vagabondish life during his later years, —compelled even to accept minor parts in the rendition of his own plays, and that his last days were passed in want and among low associates. Happily the day for the manufacture and repetition of such stories has passed away; and with a clearer and more comprehensive view of the work performed by this first of all poets and writers, the name of Shakespeare needs defence from no man. New Place was purchased by Shakespeare after his retirement from London in 1597, who after making repairs gave to it a new name. Of its furniture not a single relic is known to be extant. At his death the house came to his daughter, Mrs. Hall, for her life. After her death the premises were sold to Sir Edward Walker, Knight, who left them to his daughter's husband, Sir John Clopton. From Sir John the place passed to his youngest son, Sir H. Clopton, who repaired and new fronted the house, and bequeathed it to his son-in-law, Henry Talbot, Esq., by whom it was sold in 1753 to Rev. F. Gastrell, vicar of Frodsham, who, if we may judge from his actions, felt no pride or pleasure in possessing this enviable prosperity. The mulberry tree became the first object of his dislike, because it subjected him to the trouble of answering the frequent questions of strangers, whose zeal prompted them to visit it.

In an evil hour he ordered the tree, then in its prime, to be cut down. This act is said to have taken place in 1756. The greater part of the wood was purchased by a Mr. Thomas Sharp, watchmaker of Stratford, who having a better knowledge of its value, and with a shrewd eye to the main chance, turned it much to his advantage by converting it into small boxes, goblets, etc. Some of these relics are to be seen in the museum of the Birthplace. About three years after this act, in another splenetic fit, the Rev. gentleman ordered the house to be taken down and the material disposed of.

I can hardly suppose the matter of which I am writing is unfamiliar to Shakespeare-an students, or to the ordinary reader as interesting, at the distance of three thousand miles, as it is to me. To the visitor, however, no place about Stratford is more interesting than the site of this house, and its surroundings; for here in the fulness of his fame, with a handsome competence, and before age had chilled the enjoyments of life, the poet returned to his native town to spend the remainder of his days among the quiet scenes and friends of his youth.

Everything about speaks of the departed. Here stands, close to the garden wall, the still beautiful chapel of the Holy Cross, whose exterior has undergone no subsequent change since Shakespeare's eye dwelt upon it. All along the street are houses, which though new-fronted, were standing then, inhabited by the neighbor's of the bard—and in one of them, three doors from New Place, Julius Shaw one of the witnesses to his will is said to have resided. Thackeray says:

"It is a sentiment, seemingly inseparable from our nature, which leads us to connect the memory of great men with the localities they inhabited or frequented—a sort of involuntary belief that something of the spirit of the departed still lingers about the spot in which he dwelt. If we traced, in most cases, the subsequent occupants and their various characters, we should doubtless find strange contrasts, many of which might well desecrate the place, yet they pass away one after another, and the memory of the one departed worthy still retains its hold, unrelaxed."

So Shakespeare's name and memory will ever stand out fresh and green, inseparably connected with everything about Stratford.

News and Notes.

The longshoremen in New York are on a strike.

The Harrisburg (Penn.) Telegraph says: "Miss Anna Dickinson is reported as declaring that a short time before his death Horace Greeley said to her that he intended to bring the Tribune back to the republican party, acknowledging that he had been misled and deceived, and stating that the balance of his life should be devoted to repairing the injury he had done. If Miss Dickinson's word is questioned by the crazy fellow who now mismanages the Tribune she is not of the metal to be silent. If her statement goes uncontradicted, then the overthrow of the present management is certain. Greeley's name has been the buoy on which Reid has floated. If that support is taken away he becomes simply and entirely contemptible."

Prof. James Russell Lowell declines the Russian mission on account of ill health.

There were seven test votes on the salary-grab bill. Every time N. P. Banks, of Massachusetts, voted for the bill. Four times Dan Voorhees, of Indiana, voted for the bill; the other three times he did not vote at all. Three times Fernando Wood, of New York, voted for the bill; the remaining four times he dodged. These are the three men most mentioned in connection with the Speakership by the democrats. What a blessed change this democratic victory is going to be!

Savannah News: "A brace of negro preachers in Elberton recently engaged in a dispute while sitting in the pulpit as to which should conduct the services. In the course of the argument one of them called the other a "liar," and then they clinched. The congregation thought at first they were wrestling in prayer, but when little wads of wool began to fly over the pulpit they knew the tussle was deadly. It required the efforts of all the brethren to part them.

A boring three feet from the surface of the Chipman Lode at Newburyport has uncovered ore the value of which in lead, silver and gold is $10,000.

Advices from Australia state that John Norton, chief mate of the whaler James Allen, with Alexander Collins, Thomas Barker, John Seypan, Charles Ambler and Charles Beyer, seamen, went in a boat and struck a whale, but the line got foul and they were drawn down and all perished.

A drunken workman named Madden, who had been discharged from Border City Mill No. 2 at Fall River struck the watchman, Herbert Lasalle, (who refused him entrance,) with a lapstick on the head. Lasalle died shortly afterward.

New Jersey boasts that it is the only State in the Union which has kept a proper record of its soldiers and sailors.

The annual report of the comptroller of the currency says that during the past year seventy-one national banks were organized, with an authorized capital of $6,745,000. Three banks failed and twenty have gone into voluntary liquidation. The actual increase of the national bank circulation during last year was $3,576,297. Total circulation outstanding November 1, including $3,136,094 due the banks for mutilated notes destroyed, was $351,927,246, leaving $2,072,754 yet to be issued of the $354,000,000 authorized. Since the passage of the act of June 20, 1874, forty-six national banks have been organized, with capital of $4,019,000, to which circulation has been issued. Applications have been made for the organization of sixty-four other national banks, with a capital of $5,110,000, and a circulation amounting to $4,500,000 has been assigned to these proposed organizations.

A frightful mountain disaster is reported on the Great Saint Bernard, Switzerland. Eleven persons were buried in the snow, and it is supposed that all have perished.

The Philadelphia Ledger says that the new election laws, of Pennsylvania, particularly in requiring the official counting of the returns to be in the the presence of the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas, have given general satisfaction. The people now have assurance that every vote, whether telling on the result or not, is counted, and that the candidate with one majority is as sure of election as if his majority was by thousands.

Congressman Elliott, of South Carolina, who resigned his seat in Congress to undertake the leadership of his party at home (which sorely needed a better leader than any it has lately had) has been elected Speaker of the House of Representatives of that State.

Wisconsin has just adopted a crowning measure in her Constitution. The people have decided by a very large majority that hereafter no town, city or county in that State shall borrow money or lend its credit to any corporation, or incur a debt, for any purpose whatsoever, exceeding five per cent. of the total valuation of real and personal property within said town, city or county. Had this been a provision in the Constitution of Wisconsin twenty years ago, Milwaukee, Fond du Lac, Watertown, Kenosha, Beloit, Racine, Mineral Point, Sheboygan, Geneva and other towns would not be groaning under heavy debts incurred injudiciously to expedite the construction of some railroad.

Australian dates to October 24 state that the cutter Lapwing, with a crew of four white men and several natives, sailors, while on the passage from New Caledonia, stopped at the island of Santa Cruz for provisions. The savages massacred the captain, officers, and all the crew but one native sailor.

The tenure of power in the United States Senate, by the republicans, all other conditions being unchanged, depends on the lives of six Senators now in old age or infirm health, and behind whom are democratic Governors, or democratic legislatures, or both.

The jury in the safe-robbery case in Washington reported, agreeing that Arthur B. Williams is innocent, but could not agree as to Harrington and Whiteley. A new trial was ordered. The evidence of tampering with the jury, on the part of the defendants, are numerous and undoubted.

Geo. P. Rowell, the leading advertising agent in this country, has formed a partnership with Nelson Chesman, recently the editor of Rowell's Newspaper Directory, and the new firm opens an agency at St. Louis. Mr. Rowell's great success has been won through perseverance and reliability. The great responsibilities resting upon a man conducting so large a business as Rowell & Co., might swamp most men, but Rowell & Co. manage so systematically well that there is no such thing as fail. Mr. Chesman has shown considerable ability in the editorial line and brings much experience to the new firm—to which we tender our heartiest wishes for success.

Lifting Power of Plants.

A Portsmouth boy studying at Amherst sends the following:

Ever since I have been back here we have been conducting experiments on a squash, which are not only very interesting, but some of the results truly wonderful. The whole thing originated in a nutshell, so to speak. Last Spring, seeing an article in a scientific paper on the power exerted by vegetables in their growth, President Clark determined to institute a series of experiments to test the full force of the vegetative power. First thinking of a nut as the best adapted to sustain a heavy weight, he finally discarded it as too small for successful operations and selected a squash instead, of the Mammoth Chili variety, as giving the most vigorous growth and greatest size. When I got here in July the vine was about ten feet long and growing at the rate of nine inches per day. On the fifteenth of August a young squash appeared and increased rapidly in size for one and one half weeks, when we applied a pressure of sixty pounds by means of weights attached to a lever. This however did not check its growth, and without any effort at all it raised the weight the next day, when sixty pounds more were added. Thus the pressure was continually increased and raised until we got on (4100) forty-one hundred pounds, which though raised, was the last effort the squash would make. Here then we see the enormous power exerted by nature, in the process of building up vegetable structures, to overcome the chemical and physical forces acting in an opposite direction. Hundreds of visitors have been to see it from all parts of the State and go away in the full conviction that it is the most wonderful thing they ever saw, when every day they see the same thing on a much more grand scale in the form of trees which must be and are actually raised each year by a layer of new cells. I have also seen rocks of many tons weight, raised by a single root of four or six inches diameter, but none of these things were thought of before the squash was tried. The fame of this squash has not only brought the College, but the President into wide and favorable notice. This lifting power of the squash, however, is only a small fraction of the work that has been done. For the past month I have been busy studying the structure of the whole plant, under the microscope, and several new and interesting facts have been discovered. Experiments are also being made on the flow of sap, which furnish very interesting results.

Another correspondent sends us the following:

There is a tree in York, Me., the germ of which found its way through a fissure in a large rock fifteen feet horizontally, and now sustains on a poise, the whole width of the mature tree, several tons of rock. But the tree now shows signs of decay.

Phlebotomy.

When Dr. Sangrado found his patients weak he gave them water gruel. When they got weaker he bled them and dosed them with calomel and jalap. Gil Blas tells us they almost invariably died. A good many people are killed that way yet. The world in general, however, has found out that, in cases of debility and premature decay, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the true life-sustaining cordial. This tonic is a powerful and perfectly harmless restorative. But it does more than invigorate. It regulates and purifies. While it builds up the strength and infuses vitality into the blood, it brings all the secretions into harmony with the laws of health. The feebler sex find it invaluable in the various physical difficulties to which their organization renders them subject. In all hysterical and hypochondriacal cases its effect is magical. By it the strength is increased, the appetite preserved, and firmness and elasticity given to the system.

IN THE WORLD."

MESSRS. CUTLER BROS. & CO.
CINCINNATI, Ohio, March 13, 1872.
Please send us TEN gross small and FIVE gross large "Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam." This is doubtless the best Cough Medicine in the World.
[Signed] ALLEN & CO.

P. S. These parties have sold this Balsam for over thirty years.

[From one of Boston's most estimable citizens.]
No. 5 Worcester Sq., BOSTON, March 18, 1873.
MESSRS. CUTLER BROS. & CO.
In ordering another small lot of your invaluable
VEGETABLE PULMONARY BALSAM,
should like to tell you what I know about it, in order that others may have the benefit of my EXPERIENCE.
Since this Balsam first came to my notice, in 1848, I have kept it constantly in the house, never allowing myself to be out of it over night. In all these
TWENTY-FIVE YEARS
It has not failed in a single instance in my own case to give the desired relief; and I will say the same in regard to my mother, whose LIFE WAS SAVED
By it as I cannot but think. Hers was a case of Congestion of the Lungs, and although attended by a most skilful physician, she seemed to fail constantly, so that we despaired of her recovery, when an old friend and neighbor persuaded her to try this Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam. The result was most gratifying, I assure you.
RELIEF WAS IMMEDIATE
And recovery rapid. She is now over 82 years old, and is active and well. Whenever she gets a severe cold, which happens once in a while, she takes thirty to sixty drops, according to the violence of the cough, which has always yielded in a day or two by taking the Balsam only on retiring at night. With it the
IRRITATION
Is at once subdued, and a good night's sleep secured. I will mention another case, that of a young lady acquaintance, who
BLED AT THE LUNGS
And coughed frightfully, had night sweats and was fearfully reduced. She left Boston for her country home, 150 miles away, as we supposed to die. I sent her a bottle of your Balsam, and soon had the satisfaction to hear that she was much better. She continued taking it for a while and got
ENTIRELY WELL,
And is living now, which fact is to be ascribed mainly to the use of the Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam.
Very truly yours, JOHN CAPEN.

As there are many imitations, be careful to get the genuine. Price in large bottles, which are much the cheaper, $1; small bottles, old style, 50 cents.

Local Matters.

Laconics.

John H. Bailey & Co. have received a new lot of skates of all styles—just the thing to present to the boys and girls for their winter amusement. As so many people are out of employment, skating this season bids fair to be more popular than ever, if J. Frost furnishes enough smooth ice.

Messrs S. M. DeMeritt, Geo. E. Hodgdon and Butler & Laighton advertise houses to let.

We confidently expect a crowded house at the Methodist church this evening, the attraction being a lecture by Professor Sanborn of Dartmouth College upon the origin and development of the English language. All friends of schools and education are invited.

Sheridan, Mack and Day's Combination appears this evening at the Temple, the programme of the entertainment being more than commonly amusing. Sheridan and Mack appear in their noiseless dance, "My old wife and I," "Who's dat knockin at de outside gate," and "Pat McCann," Carrie Boshell and Alecia Jourdan sing character songs, Lester and Allen dance and sing, the Stewart sisters do a double clog hornpipe, and the pantomime of "Robert Macaire" close the entertainment. William R. Preston sells secured seats.

In this city, to-morrow, the monthly session of the Salmon Falls Valley Preachers' Meeting will be held at the M. E. Church. The essayist will be Rev. Jas. Thurston, of Dover.

Prof. Sanborn of Dartmouth College, will deliver the second lecture before the Teachers' Association, this (Monday) evening, in the Methodist church. Subject, "The Origin and Development of the English Language." Prof. Sanborn lectured on Friday evening before the Methodist Lyceum, and was favorably received.

In a very complimentary notice of the Hyers sisters and Messrs. King and Luca, the Exeter News Letter says their unisons may defy any quartet company to produce their equals.

The new keeper of White Island light has drifted seaward and the echo of Nathaniel's boot-heels are heard no more in the land.

Police Court.

Saturday, Judge Page continued his soiree. A marine named Thos. Meagher paid in to the treasury $16.90 for brawl and tumult, and was placed under $300 bonds to appear in April on a charge of assaulting officer Hayes, who brought his man in after a hard tussle.

William Ramsey was deemed guilty of being a common drunkard and goes to Brentwood for thirty days.

Wentworth Manson, a double-barrelled common drunkard, was sent to Brentwood for sixty days. He has been there before.

State News.

The Manchester Mirror trusts that Congressman Pike will be renominated and reelected. So say we, all of us.

A few days since a horse attached to a buggy, owned by Geo. E. Wilson of Manchester, became frightened, and making a vigorous lunge tumbled into an old cellar in Suncook, and quickly gathering himself sprang out on the other side,—over a ditch, —through a board fence,—over a pile of dirt,—and finally overturned the buggy by a quick turn after landing in the street, from which he instantly cleared himself. Mr. C. C. Clement, who had the animal by the head when he started was precipitated into the old cellar, where he fell underneath the horse, receiving several bruises. Singular as it may appear, the horse and buggy escaped with only very slight damage.

Joseph Lafayette, of Suncook, lost a mare, valued at $300, last week, by her getting frightened and jumping upon a picket fence on Glass street. The intestines were literally torn out.

At South Lyndeboro, Frank Abbott, a youth, while playing in a cart, recently, was thrown upon one of the stakes, which entered his groin, making a fearful and dangerous wound, which, however, it is hoped will not prove fatal.

GILBERT'S LIVER LOZENGES,

WHAT THE PEOPLE SAY ABOUT THEM.

CARROLLTONVILLE, IND., April 23, 1874.

S. GILBERT: A box of your Liver Lozenges have almost cured me of the Dyspepsia of 20 years standing. I have recommended them in many cases, and they have never failed to my knowledge of giving relief, and I have heard several say they were the best remedy they had ever used. A. H. ALLISON, s8 Eld. Christian Church.

—We are glad to know that Cheney's American silks have a good name in Europe, where American ladies who have worn them have made their merits known, so that orders are now coming from England, and already the European manufacturers, taking advantage of their reputation, have begun to make an inferior silk in imitation for this market, and to some extent for England. These inferior French silks are frequently sold as "American silks," and, despite the hints and suggestions of fashion writers, ladies are often imposed upon. Silks that have achieved a reputation, and are a standard article, are, under the competition of trade, necessarily sold at a very small advance on cost, while the unknown and inferior substitutes pay much better profits to the retailer. Hence the special effort to put forward the inferior goods and withhold the standard article from their customers until specially demanded. Probably the best advice on this subject would be, for ladies, when making purchase, to use a little precaution, and if Cheney's American silks are wanted, to insist on having them, and to practice the same rule in buying other silks of equally good reputation, and so avoid buying any imitation or substitute whatever.

THE POLITICAL, PERSONAL AND PROPERTY RIGHTS OF A CITIZEN OF THE UNITED STATES," by Theophilus Parsons, LL. D. As the writer of the numerous standard law books which bear his name, and as a professor in Harvard College for more than twenty years, Professor Parsons occupies a position before the country as a legal authority which has no superior. His lucid style and the correctness of his statements have made his previous works indispensable to those interested in the law. In this last issue he takes up subjects which concern every individual in his ordinary life, and has produced a book deserving the consideration of all persons. It is divided into three parts and treats separately of each of the topics that its title suggests. The first is upon the constitution, national and that of each State, and of constitutional powers; the second, upon personal rights, treats of the writ of habeas corpus, the rights to personal security, to freedom of speech and writing, of religion and profession and of suffrage and to the domestic relation, in general and as affected by the laws of each state. The third, more full in its topics than either of the others, is upon property rights and covers every phase of business relations. Wills, contracts, rules of partnership, deeds, bonds, agency, insurance, transportation and a multitude of other matters are all discussed and analyzed and suitable forms, where such are employed, are given. It is a sort of every day guide-book, an authority to be consulted at all important moves and whenever one is in any uncertainty. The amount of blundering, of fraud, and of litigation that would be avoided by a general knowledge of its contents cannot well be over estimated, and it should be in the possession of every one who has any care about his own rights. It deserves a cordial endorsement and a very wide sale. The book is of 760 pages; each paragraph begins with heavy letters, to catch the eye; chapters are headed and sub-headed; and a most complete index makes any particular point accessible in a moment. There are also included in the volume admirable rules or order for deliberative bodies, and a glossary of legal terms and phrases in common use.

THE NURSERY continues to keep up its well deserved reputation as one of the most attractive, useful and amusing magazines for the little ones that can be desired. It is full of good things. Published by John L. Shorey, Boston.

Roberts Brothers, Boston, have issued a neatly bound edition of "Brassey's Life and Labors," by Sir Arthur Heeps, K. C. B. The various chapters treat of Thomas Brassey's character as a business man, his early career, his skill in calculations, his organization and construction of the Great Northern Railway of England, his financial management and difficulties, his wealth and contracts, his labors on foreign railways, and the great achievement of his life, the construction of the Victoria Bridge, which was commenced in 1854 and completed in 1859. Besides these instructive chapters there is one on "Railways and Government Control" which is of interest to other than the British public.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any text-book page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure, and animal subjects, sustain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment, worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical discussion as to do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,000, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one dollar in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union,

SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.

(No charge for postage.)

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON, President.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Mayweed Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

SEC. 9. That the Postmaster-General, when in his judgment it shall be necessary, may prescribe, by regulation, an affidavit in form, to be taken by each publisher of any newspaper or periodical publication sent through the mails under the provisions of this act, or news agent who distributes any of such newspapers or periodical publications under the provisions of this act, or employee of such publisher or news agent, stating that he will not send, or knowingly permit to be sent, through the mails any copy or copies of such newspaper or periodical publications except to regular subscribers thereto, or news agents, without prepayment of the postage thereon at the rate of one cent for each two ounces or fractional part thereof; and if such publisher or news agent, or employee of such publisher or news agent, when required by the Postmaster-General or any special agent of the Post-Office Department to make such affidavit, shall refuse so to do, and shall thereafter, without having made such an affidavit deposit any newspapers in the mail for transmission, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction, shall be fined not exceeding one thousand dollars for each refusal; and if any such person shall knowingly and wilfully mail any such matter without the payment of postage as provided by this act, or procure the same to be done with the intent to avoid prepayment of postage due thereon; or if any postmaster or post-office official shall knowingly permit any such matter to be mailed without the prepayment of postage as provided in this act, and in violation of the provisions of the same, he or they shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars, or imprisoned not exceeding one year, one or both, in the discretion of the court.

That the sixty-third, eighty-first, eighty-first, eighty-second, eighty-third, eighty-fourth, and eighty-sixth sections of the said "Act to revise, consolidate, and amend the statutes relating to the Post-Office Department," approved June eighth, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, be amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 63. That the postmasters, except the postmaster at New York City, whose annual salary is hereby fixed at six thousand dollars, shall be divided into four classes, as follows: The first class shall embrace all those whose annual salaries are not more than four thousand dollars nor less than three thousand dollars; the second class shall embrace all those whose annual salaries are less than three thousand dollars but not less than two thousand dollars; the third class shall embrace all those whose annual salaries are less than two thousand dollars but not less than one thousand dollars; the fourth class shall embrace all postmasters whose annual compensation, exclusive of their commissions on the money-order business of their offices, amounts to less than one thousand dollars."

"SEC. 80. That the postmaster of New York City and postmasters of the first, second, and third classes shall be appointed and may be removed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall hold their offices for four years unless sooner removed or suspended according to law; and postmasters of the fourth class shall be appointed and may be removed by the Postmaster-General, by whom all appointments and removals shall be notified to the Auditor for the Post-Office Department."

"SEC. 81. That the compensation of the postmaster at New York City shall be six thousand dollars per annum, and the respective compensations of postmasters of the first, second, and third classes shall be annual salaries, assigned in even hundreds of dollars, and payable in quarterly payments, to be ascertained and fixed, by the Postmaster-General, from their respective quarterly-returns to the Auditor for the Post-Office Department, or copies or duplicates thereof, for four quarters immediately preceding the adjustment or re-adjustment, by adding to the whole amount of box-rents, not exceeding two thousand dollars per annum, commissions also not to exceed two thousands dollars per annum on the other postal revenues of the office, at the following rates, namely: On the first one hundred dollars per quarter, fifty per centum; on all over one hundred dollars and not over four hundred dollars per quarter, forty per centum; on all over four hundred dollars and not over two thousand four hundred dollars per quarter, thirty per centum; and on all over two thousand four hundred dollars per quarter, ten per centum. And in order to ascertain the amount of the postal receipts of each office, the Postmaster-General may require postmasters to furnish duplicates of their quarterly returns to the Auditor at such times and for such periods as he may deem necessary in each case: Provided, That whenever, by reason of the extension of free delivery of letters, the box-rents of any post office are decreased, the Postmaster-General may allow, out of the receipts of such office, a sum sufficient to maintain the salary thereof at the amount at which it had been fixed before the decrease in box-rents."

"SEC. 82. That the compensation of postmasters of the fourth class shall be the box-rents collected at their offices and commissions on other postal revenues of their offices at the rate of sixty per centum on the first one hundred dollars or less per quarter; fifty per centum on the next three hundred dollars or less per quarter; forty per centum on the excess above four hundred dollars per quarter; the same to be ascertained and allowed by the Auditor in the settlement of the quarterly accounts of such postmasters: Provided, That when the aggregate annual compensation, exclusive of commissions on money-order business, of any postmaster of this class shall amount to one thousand dollars, the Auditor shall report such fact to the Postmaster-General, in order that such postmaster may be assigned to his proper class, and his salary fixed as heretofore provided."

"SEC. 83. That the salaries of postmasters of the first, second, and third classes, except that of the postmaster at New York City, shall be re-adjusted by the Postmaster-General once in two years, and in special cases as much oftener as he may deem expedient."

"SEC. 84. That the Postmaster-General shall make all orders assigning or changing the salaries of postmasters in writing, and record them in his journal, and notify the change to the Auditor; and any change made in such salaries shall not take effect until the first day of the quarter next following such order: Provided, That in cases of not less than fifty per centum increase or decrease in the business of any post office, the Postmaster-General may adjust the salary of the postmaster at such office, to take effect from the first day of the quarter or period the returns for which form the basis of re-adjustment."

"SEC. 86. That the Postmaster-General may designate offices at the intersection of mail-routes as distributing or separating offices; and where any such office is of the third or fourth class he may make a reasonable allowance to the postmaster for the necessary cost of clerical services arising from such duties."

SEC. 12. That section two hundred and forty-five, section two hundred and forty-six, section two hundred and forty-seven, section two hundred and fifty-one, and section two hundred and fifty-three of the act entitled "An act to revise, consolidate and amend the statutes relating to the Post Office Department, approved June eighth, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, be amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 245. That every proposal for carrying the mail shall be accompanied by the bond of the bidder, with sureties approved by a postmaster, and in cases where the amount of the bond exceeds five thousand dollars, by a postmaster of the first, second, or third class, in a sum to be designated by the Postmaster-General in the advertisement of each route; to which bond a condition shall be annexed, that if the said bidder shall, within such time after his bid is accepted as the Postmaste General shall prescribe, enter into a contract with the United States of America, with good and sufficient sureties, to be approved by the Postmaster-General, to perform the service proposed in his said bid, and, further, that he shall perform the said service according to his contract, then the said obligation to be void, otherwise to be in full force and obligation in law; and in case of failure of any bidder to enter into such contract to perform the service, or, having executed a contract, in case of failure to perform the service, according to his contract, he and his sureties shall be liable for the amount of said bond as liquidated damages, to be recovered in an action of debt on the said bond. No proposal shall be considered unless it shall be accompanied by such bond, and there shall have been affixed to said proposal the oath of the bidder, taken before an officer qualified to administer oaths, that he has the ability pecuniarly, to fulfill his obligations, and that the bid is made in good faith, and with the intention to enter into contract and perform the service in case his bid is accepted."

"SEC. 246. That before the bond of a bidder provided for in the afo e-said section is approved, there shall be indorsed thereon the oaths of the sureties therein, taken before an officer qualified to administer oaths, that they are owners of real estate, worth, in the aggregate, a sum double the amount of the said bond, over and above all debts due and owing by them, and all judgments, mortgages, and executions against them, after allowing all exemptions of every character whatever."

"SEC 247. That any postmaster who shall affix his signature to the approval of any bond of a bidder, or to the certificate of sufficiency of sureties in any contract before the said bond or contract is signed by the bidder or contractor and his sureties, or shall knowingly, or without the exercise of due diligence, approve any bond of a bidder with insufficient sureties, or shall knowingly make any false or fraudulent certificate, shall be forthwith dismissed from office, and be thereafter disqualified from holding the office of postmaster, and shall also be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both."

"SEC. 251. That after any regular bidder whose bid has been accepted shall still to enter into contract for the transportation of the mails according to his proposal, or, having entered into contract, shall fail to commence the performance of the service stipulated in his or their contract as therein provided, the Postmaster-General shall proceed to contract with the next lowest bidder for the same service, who will enter into a contract for the performance thereof, unless the Postmaster-General shall consider such bid too high, in which case he shall re-advertise such service. And if any bidder whose bid has been accepted, and who has entered into a contract to perform the service according to his proposal, and in pursuance of his contract has entered upon the performance of the service, to the satisfaction of the Postmaster-General, shall subsequently fail or refuse to perform the service according to his contract, the Postmaster-General shall proceed to contract with the next lowest bidder for such service, under the advertisement thereof, (unless the Postmaster-General shall consider such bid too high,) who will enter into contract and give bond, with sureties, to be approved by the Postmaster-General, for the faithful performance thereof, in the same penalty and with the same terms and conditions thereto annexed as were stated and contained in the bond which accompanied his bid; but in case each and every of the next lowest bidders for such service whose respective bids are not considered too high by the Postmaster-General shall refuse to enter into contract and give bond as herein required for the faithful performance of his contract, the Postmaster-General shall immediately advertise tot proposals to perform the service on said route. Whenever an accepted bidder shall fail to enter into contract, or a contractor on any mail-route shall fail or refuse to perform the service on said route according to his contract, or when a new route shall be established, or new service required, or when from any other cause there shall not be a contractor legally bound or required to perform such service, the Postmaster-General may make a temporary contract for carrying the mail on such route, without advertisment, for such period as may be necessary, not in any case exceeding six months, until the service shall have commenced under a contract made according to law: Provided however, That the Postmaster-General shall not employ temporary service on any route at a higher price than that paid to the contractor who shall have performed the service during the last preceding regular contract-term. And in all cases of regular contracts hereafter made, the contract may, in the discretion of the Postmaster-General, be continued in force beyond its express terms for a period not exceeding six months, until a new contract with the same, or other contractors, shall be made by the Postmaster-General."

"SEC. 253. That hereafter all bidders upon every mail-route for the transportation of the mails upon the same, where the annual compensation for the service on such route at the time exceeds the sum of five thousand dollars, shall accompany their bids with a certified check or draft, payable to the order of the Postmaster-General, upon some solvent national bank, which check or draft shall not be less than five per centum on the amount of the annual pay on said route at the time such bid is made, and, in case of new or modified service, not less than five per centum on the amount of the bond of the bidder required to accompany his bid, if the amount of the said bond exceeds five thousand dollars. In case any bidder, on being awarded any such contract, shall fail to execute the same, with good and sufficient sureties, according to the terms on which such bid was made and accepted, and enter upon the performance of the service to the satisfaction of the Postmaster-General, such bidder shall, in addition to his liability on his bond accompanying his bid, forfeit the amount so deposited to the United States, and the same shall forthwith be paid into the Treasury for the use of the Post Office Department; but it such contract shall be duly executed and the service entered upon as aforesaid, such draft or check so deposited, and the checks or drafts deposited by all other bidders, on the same route, shall be returned to the respective bidders making such deposits. No proposals for the transportation of the mails where the amount of the bond required to accompany the same shall exceed five thousand dollars shall be considered, unless accompanied with the check or draft herein required, together with the bond required by a preceding section: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed or intended to affect any penalties or forfeitures which have heretofore accrued under the provisions of the sections hereby amended."

SEC. 13. That hereafter the postage on public documents mailed by any member of Congress, the President, or head of any Executive Department shall be ten cents for each bound volume, and on unbound documents the same rate as that on newspapers mailed from a known office of publication to regular subscribers; and the words "Public Document" written or printed thereon, or on the wrapper thereof, and certified by the signature of any member of Congress, or by that of the President, or head of any Executive Department shall be deemed a sufficient certificate that the same is a public document; and the term "public document" is hereby defined to be all publications printed by order of Congress, or either House thereof: Provided, That the postage on each copy of the daily Congressional Record mailed from the city of Washington as transient matter shall be one cent.

Approved, June 23, 1874.

—The good people of a certain country village in Indiana hungered and thirsted for an organ to assist in the church services, but as they could not afford to hire an organist they bought a self-operating instrument warranted to grind out forty tunes of a religious cast. The musical machine was placed in position for the next Sabbath. The sexton was instructed how to set it going, and how to stop it, but unfortunately, he forgot the latter part of his business, and after singing the first four verses of a hymn before the sermon, the organ could not be stopped, but continued playing two verses more; then just as the clergyman completed the words, "Let us pray," the organ clicked and started another tune. The sexton and others continued their exertions to find the spring, but no one could put a stop to it; so they got four of the stoutest men in church to shoulder the perverse instrument, and they carried it down the aisle of the church, playing away, into the churchyard, where it continued clicking and playing until the whole forty tunes were finished.

—When the mail bag from West Goshen, Conn., was opened at Goshen, a mouse popped out. An attache of the office immediately wrote back as follows: "I wish to call your attention to the law regulating the transmittal of live stock by mail. The mouse that arrived this forenoon from West Goshen, was stopped at this office for the reason that no stamp was attached to his tail."

News and Notes.

T. DeWitt Talmage is a preacher who preaches much froth. He recently delivered a diatribe on theatres and actors which several leading ladies and gentlemen of the stage replied to pungently. The Christian (?) gentleman (?) retorted last Sunday by saying that "libertines and adulteresses connected with the stage have taken it upon themselves to attack a plain minister for telling the truth." Somebody would do a sensible thing by seizing DeWitt by the collar and giving his head a good square "soak."

A disease originating in dried sausages has been haunting the throats of New Yorkers. They call it "thoresis."

Two men robbed a hen-roost in West Gorham, Me. One man shot at them. Pickens, one of the thieves, gave up the ghost, and Blake his compatriot has thirty-seven shot in him. Farmer Skillings did it.

Kalakaua, King of Hawaii, has arrived at San Francisco in U. S. S. Benicia. How are ye, Kala?

John W. Ganie killed Richard Kneeland in self defence at Boston, Friday. Kneeland and another "rough" attacked Ganie on Gouch street, and Ganie stabbed Kneeland in the lungs with a sheath knife.

Barque Veteran was wrecked off Fraserberg, Scotland, Sunday, and eleven of the crew were drowned.

Elias Williams of Troy, N. Y., killed his hired man, by sawing off his head with a hand-saw. Then remorse seized him, he cut his throat with the saw and bled to death.

Ex-Senator Yulee of Florida writes a letter saying that the statement now going the rounds of the press that he is engaged in buying up slave claims, in the hope that Congress will ultimately pay for the emancipated negroes, is absurdly false. He says the loss of slave property is one of the irredeemable losses of the war, and the idea of any possible reclamation is too wild to be entertained by any sane man.

The official count of the vote in Missouri gives Harding, democrat, for governor, 37,462 majority.

Official returns from Michigan show that the legislature stands 71 republicans to 61 democrats on joint ballot.

The Biddeford school committee, having expelled Herbert Knights from the high school for continued disregard of authority, Judge Virgin of the supreme court has granted an injunction restraining the committee from keeping Knights out of school. The novel legal feature is that the committee, though summoned to be present, was given no opportunity for a hearing for a motion to dissolve the injunction. Eminent counsel are retained on both sides.

A heavy snow-storm prevailed throughout the West on Friday.

Death from cutting a corn, is a novelty in necrology. The instance was that of Mr. T. R. Green, of Athens, O., whose death occurred one day last week from gangrene superinduced by trimming a corn on his right foot. Amputation of the leg was resorted to, without avail.

Maffit and Bartholomew, the well-known pantomimists, have dissolved copartnership, and Mr. Bartholomew sailed for England on Nov. 14, where he goes to pursue his profession—not, however, as pantaloon, but as clown. The cause of separation was that Mr. Bartholomew was dissatisfied with acting pantaloon, and believes that he can be more successful in impersonating clowns.

Hon. William F. Havemeyer, Mayor of New York, died suddenly Monday morning of heart disease. He had been on a short trip out of town and in returning, missed the train and had to walk a distance of two or three miles. The weather was cold and he was obliged to walk fast to keep warm. Mr. Havemeyer was about 75 years of age. He was of German origin. For many years he was in the sugar refining business, in which he amassed quite a large fortune.

A writ of habeas corpus has been granted in Tweed's case, on the plea that the court before which he was tried did not have jurisdiction in the case.

State News.

An Enfield man has the most motherly hen that has mounted the rostrum during the past season. She appears in print with twenty-three chicks, all lively and "doing well."

An investigation urged by the Nashua Telegraph shows that the earth-closets in the Mount Pleasant school, where there has been a great amount of sickness, were choked up, owing to the laziness of the janitor, who is also a member of the school board. The Nashuans should make an example of him.

J. J. Burleigh of Sanbornton lost a valuable horse by the rupture of a blood vessel while being doctored for colic.

Mr. Riley, a baggage master at the Claremont station, while handling a trunk, had the ends of the first and second fingers of his right hand cut off square as if done with a knife.

Mrs. J. H. Knott, of Gilmanton, fell down stairs, and broke her collar bone, besides receiving other severe bruises.

Edson Bumford of Stewartstown lost a valuable horse in a singular way. It was a work in a threshing machine when a derangement of part of the machinery threw a piece of timber against its leg, breaking it.

Novel Financial Scheme.

"Abolish the national banks" is an extravagant form of speech which, expressing too much, means nothing. It is very easy to join in the hue and cry for a hard money currency, but it may not be quite so easy to demonstrate the problem to the satisfaction of a true, full-blooded democrat. Or, admitting its feasibility, to point out the first step to be taken. To the mind of the writer, if the government will look directly to the best method of dealing with the national debt, and at the same time take off the nursing bands from the banks, letting them stand and walk manfully alone, two important results will follow, viz.:

1. A gradual diminution of the debt by a natural and genial process;

2. We shall have a sound and reliable basis for banking operations, such as can be easily adapted to every section of the country.

Pr position 1. Retire the national bank circulation; issue instead thereof the necessary amount of greenbacks, with which cancel so much of the national debt—make them equal to specie for all internal purposes, except sales of public lands.

Proposition 2. Fund one billion of the debt on the best terms obtainable.

Proposition 3. For the balance of the debt issue three per cent. stock, receivable in payment for public lands at a fair valuation and not a minimum standard; these lands to be kept sacredly for this purpose.

HARD PAN.

A Mysterious Playmate.

To the stories of occurrences hard to explain on any material theory, the Burlington (Vt.) Free Press contributes the following:

A story of such occurrences has recently been related to us, and if it were permissable to gives names, they would give much weight to the statement. The facts come to us through only two mouths from the actors. A family removed from a country village into Boston, and occupied a house comparatively new, and in a modern part of the city. The children soon began to tell their parents of a boy who came to play with them in the street or in their playroom, and of what he said and did, and how he looked. The parents never saw the boy, and finally bade the children bring him in some day to see them. The answer was, "Oh, we can't; he goes right away." Being told the next time he came to the house to let them know, the children did so; but, as they said, he had "gone right away" when the parent reached the playroom. This went on for some time, greatly to the wonder and perplexity of the parents; the children, simple, and matter-of-fact, thought nothing strange of it. One day they reported to their father that their playmate, now well-known by name, told them his father and mother were going to Europe in a few days, and he gave their names and the vessel they would sail by from New York. The gentleman without saying anything went to New York, found such names on the steamer list, went to the dock on the day of sailing, sought out the persons, and inquired if they had a boy of such age and descriptions as his children had related to him. With great emotion they replied "We had such a boy, but he is dead; why do you ask?" Further conversation convinced them and the Bostonian that the spirit of their darling boy, never seen by those who knew and loved him, was a frequent visitor to the house of perfect strangers, and seen and talked with by the children of others. What was the result is not known to us; whether or not, upon the return home of the Bostonian, any attempt was made to open communication with the spirit boy for his parents, or even whether or not the "spirit" was again seen; but the facts here given went near to overturn his disbelief in the possibility of the return of the soul in bodily appearance, on the part of the clear-headed, devout and gray-haired man, to whom the tale was told by his life-long friend, the Bostonian himself, and through whom the story comes to us.

Phlebotomy.

When Dr. Sangrado found his patients weak he gave them water gruel. When they got weaker he bled them and dosed them with calomel and jalap. Gil Blas tells us they almost invariably died. A good many people are killed that way yet. The world in general, however, has found out that, in cases of debility and premature decay, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the true life-sustaining cordial. This tonic is a powerful and perfectly harmless restorative. But it does more than invigorate. It regulates and purifies. While it builds up the strength and infuses vitality into the blood, it brings all the secretions into harmony with the laws of health. The feebler sex find it invaluable in the various physical difficulties to which their organization renders them subject. In all hysterical and hypochondriacal cases its effect is magical. By it the strength is increased, the appetite preserved, and firmness and elasticity given to the system.

The Green Grass Grows in the meadow, go spread over it a thin layer of Bearine, and the tiny blades will shoot upwards, and grow far more luxuriantly than before. Try the same experiment upon your hair and the effect is still more marked; the hair grows vigorous and seems to find in Bearine all the ingredients to support its life. 10

Who Will It Be?

The postponement of the Gift Concert of the Kentucky Public Library to November 30th, 1874, was resolved upon to make a full drawing a certainty. There will positively be no further postponement, and the great prize will be the magnificent sum of $250,000. Who will get it? What a pestered man Gov. Bramlette of Louisville, business manager, would be, if the people supposed he could tell!

Don't Hazard Your Life!

A lighted torch in a powder mill is scarcely more dangerous than a deep-seated cough or cold. The individual who waits for such an insidious enemy of life to die out of itself, commits a frightful error. It is an inexcusable error too; for HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR will cure any irritation of the lungs or throat with a dispatch and thoroughness which preclude all necessity for apprehension. No type of cough, cold, influenza, or bronchitis can resist its strengthening, soothing, healing operation.

MESSRS. CUTLER BROS. & CO.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, March 13, 1872.

Please send us TEN gross small and FIVE gross large "Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam." This is doubtless the best Cough Medicine in the World.

[signed] ALLEN & CO.

P. S. These parties have sold this Balsam for over thirty years.

[From one of Boston's most estimable citizens.]

No. 5 Worcester Sq., BOSTON, March 18, 1873.

Messrs. CUTLER BROS. & Co.

In ordering another gross I lot of your invaluable

VEGETABLE PULMONARY BALSAM,

should like to tell you what I know about it, in order that others may have the benefit of my EXPERIENCE.

Since this Balsam first came to my notice, in 1848, I have kept it constantly in the house, never allowing myself to be out or it over night. In all these

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

It has not failed in a single instance in my own case to give the desired relief; and I will say the same in regard to my mother, whose

LIFE WAS SAVED

By it as I cannot but think. Hers was a case of Congestion of the Lungs, and although attended by a most skillful physician, she seemed to fail constantly, so that we despaired of her recovery, when an old friend and neighbor persuaded her to try this Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam. The result was most gratifying, I assure you.

RELIEF WAS IMMEDIATE

And recovery rapid. She is now over 82 years old, and is active and well. Whenever she gets a severe cold, which happens once in a while, she takes thirty to sixty drops according to the violence of the cough, which has always yielded in a day or two by taking the Balsam only on retiring at night. With it the

IRRITATION

Is at once subdued, and a good night's sleep secured. I will mention another case, that of a young lady acquaintance, who

BLED AT THE LUNGS

And coughed frightfully, had night sweats and was fearfully reduced. She left Boston for her country home, 150 miles away as we supposed to die. I sent her a bottle of your Balsam, and soon had the satisfaction to hear that she was much better. She continued taking it for a while and got

ENTIRELY WELL,

And is living now, which fact I to be ascribed mainly to the use of the Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam.

Very truly yours, JOHN CAPEN.

As there are many imitations, be careful to get the genuine. Price in large bottles, which are much the cheaper, $1; small bottles, old style, 50 cents.

Local Matters.

A New Departure.

Mr. Israel P. Miller, who has long been connected with this and other papers, has assumed the duties of his new appointment as keeper of White Island Light at the Isles of Shoals—in which new position hosts of friends will wish him all success and happiness, while wondering what on earth or on the sea, took him out on that barren rock. But he has eminent precedent for the move.—since the well known Hon. T. B. Laighton, one of the ablest editors the old NEW HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE has on its long roll, travelled the same road long before him, though under rather different circumstances. Mr. Laighton was rather disgusted with the political world, and retired almost entirely from connection therewith and thereafter; while Mr. Miller will still use his pen, and doubtless has future honors yet in store.

Though still young, his experience as farmer, cabinet maker, whaleman, sailor, officer, printer, editor, author, navy yard clerk and "what not else," has been neither uneventful nor uninteresting; nor has he ever lacked for position, but usually voluntarily exchanged one for another, it would seem for novelty. The greatest lack we note in the new position, is the fact that neither he nor his assistant keeper is blessed with a wife, and so may be obliged to depend on the mermaids for mates; but with the new peopling of both Appledore and Star Islands, the new keeper of White Island can more easily find neighbors than did the sage of Appledore during his early self banishment to those lonely isles of the ocean. May his light, like that of all wise virgins, be always kept trimmed and burning.

Laconics.

Naval Constructor Thomas E. Webb has been ordered to the Washington navy yard.

Capt. Dummer Lord of Kennebunkport, a privateersman of the war of 1812, and a prisoner at Dartmoor, died a few days since. Capt. Benjamin Perkins, a survivor of the celebrated Portsmouth Packet, died recently, also, at the same place. The Packet was originally an English cruiser, was captured by the privateer "Thomas," taken into this port and fitted as a privateer and sailed under command of Capt. John Perkins, who died several years since in Biddeford. The Packet was recaptured by the British and the crew were taken to Chatham prison in England. Capt. Oliver Bourne of Kennebunk is said to be the sole survivor.

The monthly session of the Salmon Falls Valley preachers' meeting at the Methodist church in this city is adjourned to next Tuesday.

Colonel A. M. Eastman, of Manchester, attorney of the United States Direct Cable Company, has received information to the effect that the stockholders of the company held a meeting in London on the 16th instant and voted to take measures immediately for raising funds for constructing an additional wire from Ireland to the United States, the success of the work of laying the wire being now assured. The second cable will probably be laid next year.

The funeral of Mr. Mark Scott, which took place Sunday, was the largest held in this city for some time.

A Fair will be held at the Universalist church on the evenings of Thursday and Friday of this week. Fancy articles and refreshments will be for sale, and a black walnut arm chair is to be disposed of.

The policemen have had a quiet time for a day or two, there being no lodgers at the station and no arrests from Friday night until Monday evening.

The barbarous practice of tolling bells for funerals is still kept up in Portsmouth.

The Eastern Railroad has been employing tram men of late at $80 per month, Skilled workmen and laborers are without work in many cases, hereabouts, and can be hired for smaller wages than usual. Quite a number of citizens avail themselves of the opportunity to build residences at reduced cost. Rents have been excessively high for years and the increase of buildings is likely to reduce them. Shrinkage in values is in order.

Capt. Samuel G. Gardner left on Monday to take command of the ship Simla, now in Boston. The vessel is owned by J. M. Tredick & Son, of this city, and was formerly commanded by Capt. Thomas Salter, who has been very successful in making good voyages.

Col. Clement March, of West Virginia, formerly of Greenland, is in town.

If the Grangers and the Sovereigns of Industry were political organizations, as some erroneously suppose, they would soon rule the city; but they hold no relations to politics, though as the Newburyport Visitor says, there is no reason in the world why the laboring people should not be as much united to save a dollar on their taxes as on a barrel of flour.

The Martha Washington Tea Party which the S. P. C. A. will hold in the court-house in about two weeks, promises to be a very popular entertainment.

The warm rain of Saturday night was succeeded by a northwesterly wind on Sunday, changing the temperature to such an extent that on Monday overcoats and thick clothing were a necessity. During the gale of Sunday, a gondola had her sail blown to ribbons on the trip from Dover to this city. On Monday, tug Clara Bateman towed two gondolas loaded with coal to Dover, making the last of 13,000 tons of coal transported by Capt. Drew from this city to Dover, this season. The present cold weather will probably close the river above Dover Point.

Rev. Ira G. Bidwell, one of the most eloquent men in New England, delivers the lecture in the Methodist lyceum course, on Thursday evening next. Subject: "The Old-fashioned District School, and what it has done for New England." All who like New England, our school system, and a superior lecture, should hear him. Admission twenty-five cents.

Mr. George G. Lougee, one of the most successful of Rye hotel keepers, is erecting a two-story building as an addition to the "Sea View House." It is 72 feet long and 36 feet wide, and the upper portion will be fitted for sleeping rooms. The lower floor is to be used as a dance hall. Mr. Lougee has met the increasing wants of the public with foresight and good judgment, and will doubtless make the accommodations he is now preparing, extra inducements to strangers and friends to abide at the ever popular "Sea View."

Lieut. Commander Cook is ordered as executive officer on the receiving ship Sabine. Lieut. Commander Wingate is ordered to the iron-clad Ajax, at Pensacola.

The morning train from Concord does not stop at Newmarket Junction for the train from Boston over the Boston & Maine road, and passengers from stations on that road who desire to reach Portsmouth are obliged to accept the accommodations of a freight train.

—A Boston paper says: "Cheap and hungry dances" are a Vermont institution. There are no refreshments, and the fun stops at twelve o'clock.

—France has still to feed 25,000 men who fought under the first Napoleon.

New Publications

James DeMille, the author of "The Dodge Club," has written another ridiculously funny book entitled "THE BABES IN THE WOOD"—as interesting as it is nonsensical. There are eight babes, the youngest being refreshingly verdant and of course answering for the heroine. The "wood" means Italy, and the author undertakes to make some of his "babes" talk broken Italian in his "tragic comedy." The Countess Carrara, who by the way is not one of the "babes," is more of a Corkonian than an "Italian." William F. Gill & Co., of Boston, publish the book in pamphlet form, and it may be had at the bookstores.

Sheldon & Co., of New York, are publishing a number of interesting pamphlet novels, among which we find Theodore Davies' "LOSING TO WIN" one of the most readable. It is a book treating of the present day, and incidentally refers in detail to strikes, stock speculations, reportorial experience, newspaperdom and other interesting matters. The experience of "Little Silva" is pathetically told and lends an interest to the story that none can resist. There is a freshness about the narrative that leads the reader to hope that the author's pen will not lie idle. For sale at J. H. Foster's.

A Fortunate Baker.

On an evening in April last a baker entered a store where tickets to the First Grand Gift Concert of the Masonic Relief Association, Norfolk, Va., were for sale, and while there purchased a ticket. On the 5th of May the number on that ticket drew $25,000, which the baker received. This Association will have only one more Concert, which will positively be given on the 22d of December, and you may be as fortunate as the above-mentioned baker if you purchase a ticket. The character of the gentlemen conducting this enterprise is a sufficient guarantee that the second drawing will be done with the same honesty and fairness which characterized the first. Every tenth number will be a prize ranging from $10 to $30,000. Address H. V. Moore, Sec'y, Norfolk, Va., or Branch Office, Nos. 78 and 80 Broadway, New York.

COOKING and PARLOR STOVES

To be found in any establishment in the State, among which may be found the WYOMING RANGE, which we believe to be superior to anything in the shape of a cooking arrangement yet invented,—having six boiler holes, a large oven, warming closet, dump grate, shelf, sifter and ash pan,—combining all the conveniences found in others and some advantages to be found only in this; it is a quick and ready baker, splendid looking and beautifully ornamented, and in all its appointments is far ahead of anything of the kind in the market; and another important item is, we can sell it at a Very Reasonable Rate and warrant it to do all we say. Call and see it, and be satisfied that this is THE BEST COOKING STOVE IN THE WORLD.

We have for sale the HUB RANGE, said by those who use it to have no superior.

Also the GRANGER RANGE, a nicely-working stove which we sell at a reasonable price.

For the usual style of Cooking Stoves we have the ELECTRIC COOK Improved, and the NEW MAGNET, which cannot be beaten,—and we are bound to sell them at such bargains as will ensure a ready sale.

Of the most approved kinds, such as the Eldorado, of which hundreds have been sold in this vicinity, and which everybody likes,—keeps fire the whole season and is very economical. Also the Gen. Grant, Union Gas Burner, etc., etc.

SOAPSTONE STOVES in great variety: Oven Parlor and Air-Tight Stoves of every style, and to be sold as cheap as the cheapest.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest character-istic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. A though each succeeding number affords a fresh plea sure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to rare gems from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The arts as illustrated by American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious intermission of landscape, marine, figure, and animal subjects, sustain an unbroken interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment, wooing all the artistic instincts, with such technical discussions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 500 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union,

SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.

(No charge for postage.)

Specimen copies of THE ALDINE, fifty cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or be handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON, President.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. THOS. P. MOSES, thorough and tasteful Teacher of Music, from A in its alphabet to composition and arrangement, has concluded not to accept a recent call to go South again, but will retain his permanent location in the grand "Old Town by the Sea" where he was born,—and renews the offer of his services as above, with unabated zeal and love for this branch of human refinement. He is no novice or humbug to beg, borrow or buy bolsters to uphold him in an art he does not fully understand in every phase of its beauty; but would respectfully point to the best of references, WORKS, and ability to discover, develope and train inherent talent to accomplish splendid results. His pupils are shining in private and public, here and elsewhere. His many Musical Exhibitions—such as others seldom or never present to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from fawning favoritism where true merit is too often absent. Terms, $12 for twelve weeks (twenty-four lessons) at his Music Room, or $15 at the pupil's residence, for Piano or Scientific Vocalization, separately or together. Mr. Moses will also tune Pianos,—a business "familiar as household words" to him,—and solicits orders.

Be an honor to your family name. Hence, get thee to the frozen lake. How different 'twas in "those days" when we were young. It was hard to get a pair, even of odd skates; harder yet to get them fastened on tight, and hardest of all to limp home with an ache in every salient point, only to hear a "Good enough for you."

—By the disobedience of a lad in 1809 a garden gate in Rhode Island was left open and a pig got in and destroyed a few plants. A quarrel between the owners of the pig and the garden grew out of it, which spread among their friends, defeated the federal candidate for the legislature, and gave the State a democratic Senator, by whose vote the war of 1812 with Great Britain was declared.

—One of the Russian papers has a correspondence descriptive of a queer element of our Western population. They are Russians who were sent to Siberia as convicts, but who, having made their way to the eastern coast of Asia, have got over Behring Straits on American whalers, and are now employed as herdsmen on the plains.

To The Afflicted.

In presenting this valuable remedy to the public, I would say that the almost unlimited and wholly unprecedented success it meets with, stamps it at once as the GREATEST DISCOVERY OF THE AGE. On its merit I am willing to stake my reputation as a physician; and so confident am I that it will not disappoint the most sanguine expectations of a single invalid, that I am prepared to make contracts on the basis of CURE OR NO PAY, with those who have tried other medicines without relief until they have become too faithless to make another attempt. To substantiate what I claim for this Wonderful Vegetable Remedy, I do not propose to import far-fetched testimonials, but will simply refer to well-known, reliable living witnesses in your own State.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1874.

The New Form of Slavery.

An act was passed in the Texas House of Representatives, on the last day of the session, and carried to a third reading the day following, in the Senate, which is a mixture of the old slave law and of the Mexican law of peonage, and is intended to revive slavery in a new form, the chief difference between this and slavery proper being that the man who enjoys the labor of the slave is not obliged to support him in sickness or old age.

This act provides that any person convicted of a petty offence may be hired out for such length of time as the presiding justice may deem proper. And with that compendious method of justice which is found only in a people educated under the benign institution of slavery, an accused person may be hired out at once, without waiting for the form of a trial. This does not add much to the severity of the law, which, of course, is intended only for negroes, and the trial is a mere ceremony. In case of acquittal, the accused is to have remuneration for his services. What chance a negro will have of acquittal, what opportunity of trial, any one may judge. The fugitive slave law is substantially enacted, for the capture and detention of persons escaping from those to whom they have been hired out, and all sums due for labor performed are forfeited by an attempt to escape, and the poor fellow who, by the cruelty of his master or by the innate love of liberty which is planted in every human heart, has been driven to escape, commences his dreary term of servitude over again.

The Chicago Tribune makes the following illustration of the way in which the law will work:

A black man is arrested for some trifling offence, and the Justice, without allowing him bail, immediately hires him out to his former owner until his trial. That owner might just as well own him, body and soul. To all intents and purposes he does. The trial of his former slave may be postponed indefinitely. The latter is not in a condition to consult lawyers, or prepare his defence. He is condemned to hard labor, although he may be innocent. It is easy enough to put off his trial, upon one pretext and another, for he is so situated that he knows nothing of the proceedings in his case, and cannot even enter a protest, or appear in court personally or by proxy. At last, grant that a trial is awarded him. He has no counsel. He has had no opportunity to make a defence or summon witnesses. Whether innocent or guilty, he is sure to be convicted. It will not require much effort in Texas to impose the extreme penalty upon a negro. If acquitted, his employer would have been compelled to pay him the pittance of not less than twenty five cents hor more than $1 per day, but, as he is convicted, the employer gets the previous labor for nothing, and can now make a new contract with the Justice for his labor during the term of his sentence, which, of course, has been made as long as the law will allow, if not longer. Wherein does this differ from African slavery, except that the employer cannot sell his laborer?

Nor is this revival of slavery confined to Texas. Georgia, which was the first of the rebel States to suppress the colored vote and to reorganize on democratic principles, has enacted a similar law. The following Washington despatch to the New York Evening Post shows the progress that "conservatism" is making in that section of the Union:

It has been ascertained here that the new democratic code of Georgia, as lately amended, contains a provision designed to serve the same purpose as a bill just passed by the Texas legislature. This amendment reads as follows:

"In all cases where persons are convicted of a misdemeanor and sentenced to work in a chain-gang on public works or public roads, or when such persons are confined in jail for non-payment of fines imposed for such misdemeanor, ordinary of the county, then, where there is a Board of Commissioners of Roads and Revenues of the County, said Board of Commissioners in those counties where there is a county judge where such conviction was had or where such convicts may be confined, may place such convicts in the county or elsewhere to work upon such public works of the county in chain-gangs or otherwise, or hire out such convicts upon such terms and restrictions as may subserve the ends of justice, and place such convicts under such guards as may be necessary for their safe-keeping."

It is claimed that under this law a black man may be taken forcibly from the county of his residence and sold into involuntary slavery, or hired (which is the same thing) in another or remote county of the State, and that the guards necessary for their safe-keeping will be masters to whom they will be hired, and that the duration of their servitude may be prolonged indefinitely.

Falling of a Bridge.

On Monday, about 4 P. M., while the New York accommodation train and the Cockeyville accommodation train were passing over the bridge at Swan Creek, at the Relay House of the Northern Central Railroad, nine miles from Baltimore, the structure suddenly gave way with a deafening crash, causing the tenders, baggage and smoking cars of both trains to fall into the water. The engine and rear cars of each stood on terra firma and did not even jump a rail. The trains had the appearance of a suspended bridge over deep water. The engine stood on the top, the tender hanging over and partially submerged in the water. The baggage-car was completely embedded in the stream; on the opposite side, the smoking-car had the same position as the tender, being coupled to the rear car on terra firma and also over-hanging the water. Mr. Upton, a young farmer, residing near Cockeyville, who was going on a gunning expedition, was in the baggage car with his dog. When the crash came, his gun exploded, the load entering his neck, head and shoulders and stomach and mangling him fearfully. He was killed instantly. George Wesner, another passenger, had his leg lacerated frightfully and and his abdomen torn open. Samuel Harris, the conductor of the Northern train, was very badly hurt, and John Purdy, the engineer of the Southern train, was badly bruised. Several other persons were more or less injured.

News and Notes.

The annual report of Chief Engineer Wood of the bureau of steam engineering in the Navy department says that the machinery, etc., under the contract for the eight sloops of war is either ready, or nearly ready, for erection on board the respective vessels, and some of it is now being forwarded to the navy yards where it is to be erected. It is expected that these engines will be complete within the next three months, and some probably at an earlier date. He also recommends that the number of engineer cadets appointed to the academy be increased to such a number as will give not less than fifteen graduates per annum.

The melancholy fact is announced that George Francis Train is not dead.

The Chicago Times describes an office-holder as "collector of the port of Ararat, when Noah arrived there with his ark, and has uninterruptedly held office ever since." One of the "outs" wants to know if this has any allusion to any of the old navy yard bosses?

The New York Tribune, discussing strikes concludes that there is only one way in which any man in this country can fix his own wages—and that is by becoming a member of Congress.

So wild are the expectations of the southern democrats, under their recent victories, that the more enthusiastic of their papers are already speculating upon the chances of driving the next Presidential election into the House of Representatives, and electing Jeff Davis to the chief magistracy of the government which his treason vainly attempted to destroy.

The Portland Advertiser thinks it will "puzzle the average mind to see what the prohibitionists of New Hampshire have gained for the cause of temperance by independent political action."

The contract for building a telegraph office station house at Rye has been awarded to Moses Yeaton & Son of this city, for $5500. It will be of two stories and will contain sleeping rooms for the operators.

State News.

The city committee of Keene has voted to appropriate a gratuity to the Manchester and Keene Railroad of three per cent. on the last property valuation, said gratuity payable in city bonds at par, the road to be completed before December, 1878.

On Sunday, Nov. 22, the steam mill in Danville, belonging to Messrs. Brown and Emery of Newton Junction, was destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $1000. Most of the machinery was saved. The origin of the fire is believed to have been from a smouldering fire in a large pile of sawdust in close proximity. The mill was located on a large timber lot owned by the Messrs. Case and Wentworth of Haverhill, Mass.

Jennie Page, a girl 12 years old, who was sent to the Reform School from Keene for a petty theft, was taken sick on Sunday morning, the 22d, with scarlet fever, and died on Tuesday night in spite of what care and medical skill could do. She had earned a good reputation while at the school.

A Nashua paper says a party that was gunning a day or two since in Rock meadow discovered the carcass of a horse that undoubtedly had been hitched to a tree and left there to die of hunger. It is believed that the animal was stolen and left in this secluded place by the thief, who feared detection. The leather halter has been secured and is at the Marshal's office in Nashua.

The Manchester mills are to run on full time.

Two Keene boys stole a turkey a few days ago, and were caught cooking it in the bushes.

Women at the Polls.

Somebody's woman, writes from St. Joseph, Mich., to the Kennebec Journal, a racy letter about the work for woman suffrage in the one State which voted on this question last election day. She says:

It is, in fact, the better part of the community who are most interested in woman suffrage and did the most for it at the late election. The movement has been fairly inaugurated by the ladies themselves. On election day, one of the lower offices at the City Hall was tastefully fitted up, wreathed with evergreens and hung with pictures. Coffee, cold meats and other refreshments had been provided, and some twenty or thirty of the most refined and respectable ladies in town waited at the tables and kept all the voters supplied with suffrage ballots. Ladies filled the halls and barricaded the stairway and even invaded the sacred precincts of the voting room. Bashful voters had a hard time of it, running the gauntlet of so many ladies. Some appeared to be fairly frightened, and either voted "no" on the suffrage question, or got away as soon as possible without voting on it at all. The utmost good humor prevailed, and peals of laughter came from the halls, as some luckless voter was surrounded and argued into silence. It was the quietest election day ever known in St. Joseph. In all save the crowd on the sidewalks it resembled a church sociable more than an election. The ladies were treated with the greatest respect; no oaths were heard, and not a drunken man appeared on the scene, although a dozen saloons had open doors within forty rods of the ballot boxes. The total vote polled was 480; the vote on woman suffrage was 389, of which 147 votes were for it and 242 against. The friends of the movement expected defeat, and as it had been confidently predicted that less than 100 votes would be cast in its favor, the ladies were well satisfied with their success.

The opponents of woman suffrage all say it is simply a question of time, and must come. In 1850 there were cast 250 votes on the subject of negro suffrage, and only one man voted for it; and he was so ashamed of his position that he will not acknowledge that he voted as he did to this day. Had the State been canvassed, as it should have been, the affirmative vote would have been much larger. The friends of woman suffrage have not been inactive, but they failed to confine their attention to Michigan, where the first trial was to be made. Being present at the polls all day we were able to see how the voting was done. There were three distinct ballots—the general ticket, containing the State and county officers, the woman suffrage ballot and the ballot on constitutional amendments. The last proposed an improvement on the old constitution, but, not having been sufficiently explained to the people, were voted down. The ignorant and the victims, as well as the foreign element, voted, "no" to both woman suffrage and the constitutional amendments, while by no means all the intelligent voted for them.

The tables of the ladies were well patronized by both parties, and there were not a few cases where voters refreshed themselves several times at the ladies' expense and then voted against them. Among the ladies there is a general feeling of satisfaction at the result. It was new work for them, and they were not altogether at home in it. Another time both they and the voters will be better prepared.

—In a hospital in Montpelier, France, is a patient who has just swallowed a thermometer left on his table, while suffering from temporary delirium. They have a great deal of trouble with him now. When he drinks hot coffee that thermometer flies up against the roof of his mouth hard enough to lift his hat off, and when he eats ice cream it gets down in his boots and worries his corns.

—The quaintest thing of late in baby-talk— A little girl seeing a dog scratching to be let in at an opposite door, promptly knocked at the window and called out, "Ing e bell, doggy; ing e bell."

—If you want to know whether your grandmother was cross-eyed, or where your great uncle stood in his arithmetic class, just run for office, and you'll know it all.

—A remarkable instance of the trifles that sometime create excitement in a theatrical audience occurred at the Grand Opera House, New York. In the third act of the "Black Crook" a series of national dances are given, in which China and Japan are represented by some little boys and girls. During the evolutions one of the smallest of these children dropped her Japanese wig, yet she went through the movements as though nothing unusual had happened. The audience "took" the incident at once, and greeted the unconscious child with rounds of applause, which were redoubled on her regaining the wig and putting it on hind side foremost. When the dance was over the uproar and applause became deafening, and the business of the piece was stopped. Yet no one behind the scenes seemed to know the cause, and performer after performer came on, only to be greeted with derisive laughter. One of the Kiralfy brothers next made a bow, but it was no use, for the tumult never ceased until the little girl came out and kissed her hand to her friends. Of all the multitude of people who appear in the piece, none received such a greeting as this little toddler, who made the hit of the night by a mere accident.

—The Courier Journal says the fact that Joaquin Miller has had his hair cut clean to his head is taken as an indication that he is coming home to see Mrs. Miller. But John Henry says it does not enter into the heart of that man to conceive the ingenuity of the sex. Woman, lovely woman, will get a man with a cropped head to romping at a candy-pull, and then amuse herself next day by pulling the lumps of lasses out together with all hairadtiments and appurtenances.

—A little Vermont girl called at a drug store, and said: "My mother wants ten cents' worth of jumps." This astonished the clerk. The child insisted that it was jumps that had been sent for; but returned to her mother for further instructions. Very soon she came back, and said it was hops that she wanted.

Phlebotomy.

When Dr. Sangrado found his patients weak he gave them water gruel. When they got weaker he bled them and dosed them with calomel and jalap. Gil Blas tells us they almost invariably died. A good many people are killed that way yet. The world in general, however, has found out that, in cases of debility and premature decay, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the true life-sustaining cordial. This tonic is a powerful and perfectly harmless restorative. But it does more than invigorate. It regulates and purifies. While it builds up the strength and infuses vitality into the blood, it brings all the secretions into harmony with the laws of health. The feebler sex find it invaluable in the various physical difficulties to which their organization renders them subject. In all hysterical and hypochondriacal cases its effect is magical. By it the strength is increased, the appetite preserved, and firmness and elasticity given to the system.

The Old Barque Martha.

[Written for the Chronicle.]

November 29th, 1849, just twenty-five years ago, the barque Martha, Captain Joseph Grace, (who is still living, hale and hearty, among us,) sailed from this port for San Francisco,—carrying the first large company of gold-hunters from this section to the newly-discovered ElDorado—though a few individuals had previously gone hence by way of the Isthmus and otherwise. A quarter of a century is a long term in the history of a country like California; and comprises the larger part of the average man's opportunity for fame, wealth or honor; and it will be interesting to many a reader, to take a brief retrospect of the Martha and her crew and passengers at this time. The writer hereof was at that time a boy employed in the Portsmouth Journal office; and at the request of the editor, the late Mr. C. W. Brewster, one of the best friends of his life, wrote the following notice of the Martha's sailing—which was among his first items that he had the satisfaction of seeing in print:

[From the Portsmouth Journal, Dec. 1st, 1849.]

SAILING OF BARK MARTHA.

We have rarely witnessed on our wharves so large a collection of people as were present on Monday afternoon last to witness the departure of the above vessel for California—the first which has been sent from Portsmouth. The day was beautiful as early autumn, and the cheerful countenances of the passengers showed that they went off in good spirits. Among the passengers were two from our office, one an apprentice, who took the California fever about a month since, and the other a highly esteemed journeyman, who took the fever on that day, and was carried off in about four hours! After working off a token of the first side of the Journal, he relinquished his post to another; at noon first made known to his friends his intention to go to California—and before our first side was worked off, although we do not yet print twenty thousand papers, he was thirty miles at sea on his way to California! Mr. Ham is an excellent young man, and we hope he will meet with deserved success.

The number of passengers is 64, among them one female, the wife of the steward. The following is the list as published in the GAZETTE:

Joseph Grace, Master; Thomas M. Drown, 1st Mate; Oliver P. Philbrick, 2d Mate; John F. Brown, 1st Cook; Andrew Davis, 2d Cook; James W. Pettigrew, 1st Steward; Freeman Peverly, 2d Steward; Albert S. Marden, 3d Steward; Charles T. Clapham, John W. Kelly, Joseph E. Laighton, Charles E. Coffin, Edward Furniss, James O. Trefethen, G. B. French, seamen.

We were pleased to observe that most of the leave-takings had been finished at home; and but few of the female relatives of the expectant voyagers were on the wharves to see the vessel's departure. This is at it should be. "Farewell's a bitter word to say," at best; bitter enough without being aggravated by the presence of strangers.

The religious services sometimes performed on such occasions, and commonly neglected till the hour of sailing, had been ably and appropriately gone through with by Rev. R. W. Clark, in his church, a few days before.

The Martha is a noted swift sailer, and her accommodations and fit-out are rarely surpassed by those of any California-bound vessels. She glided gracefully down the river, and though few expected her to get outside in the light breeze of that evening, she made no stop below, and was spoken near Whale's Back Light by a boatload of friends of the passengers, within an hour after letting go her "fasts" at Pier Wharf. So good a beginning of the adventurers voyage, augurs well for a successful termination.

"All's for the best!—be a man but confiding,
Providence tenderly governs the rest,
And the frail bark of his creature is guiding,
Wisely and warily, all for the best.

It would be interesting to trace the history of all the little party who went round the Horn in the Martha, and see how many came out of the little end.

Certain it is that Portsmouth never got back the value she paid in men and money to help establish the golden State—and California, like almost every other new commonwealth is largely indebted to poor little New Hampshire and all New England for a start and early support, and they have but poorly acknowledged or repaid the debt, any of them. Had the men and the money that were taken out by the Martha, been employed at home, in digging their native soil, and building up their own section of country—who can say that the men would not have been far more comfortable and happy and the pecuniary result far better to-day? Digging the soil is unquestionably the best business in the world—indeed, almost the only one worth following; but gold is among the poorest of average crops. Potatoes and corn are far more sure. But be that as it may; from the list of Capt. Grace's crew and passengers above, the curious can figure out whatever result they may, and await the close of another quarter century,—which very few of us of the Martha's days will see on this side Jordan.

Your present correspondent had been solicited, with the rest, to go to the golden shore; but he thought then, as he thinks now, that the opportunities for enjoyment and reasonable success in life are as good in Portsmouth as anywhere else; and that all that glitters, especially afar off, is not always gold. So he was not dazzled thereby and never has been since, to a change of base.

The Martha was a rather poor sailer on the wind, and made a very long passage. Being shallow and with little keel, she often made leeway rather than headway. But with good health, plenty of provisions, and good pluck, all landed safely at the Golden Gate—though but few ever literally got through it. It was the design of the vessel's owners to run coastwise there; but with sailors' wages at $100 a month, this was hardly practicable. So the captain sold her, and came home ere a year had passed. Varied fortunes attended the party. Few of them ever realized the riches, the hope of which lured them so far from home and friends. Several have returned, and are living among us to-day. Many are dead; and a a few are still residents in that wonderful Pacific empire,—whose destiny no man can foresee, but which is to-day scarcely less a mystery and an enigma, than in the days when the Martha left these frozen shores for the sunny Pacific.

The Educational Lectures.

The lecture by Prof. Sanborn, of Dartmouth College, at the Methodist Church on Monday evening, was one of the finest efforts of extemporaneous speaking that it has been our privilege to listen to for some time. It was a sketch of the origin of our race, together with the history of the origin and development of our language, its idioms and peculiarities. The church was well filled with a quiet audience, who gave the strictest attention to the lecturer for the space of one hour and twenty-five minutes, thus paying the speaker a compliment that he no doubt fully appreciated.

Those directly interested in this educational series of lectures are more than satisfied with the marked degree of interest that is shown by the full attendance that is accorded them. "The two lectures already given are worth more than some whole lyceum courses," remarked a gentleman while coming out of the church on Monday evening, and we readily endorse his opinion of them. The next lecture will be delivered Friday evening of next week; subject "School Management;" the place to be announced hereafter. The course will probably consist of eight lectures, although it is possible that the number may be augmented to ten.

Laconics.

Mr. Joseph Meloon, florist, has taken Mr. Goodall's greenhouses and will run them in connection with his own on Middle street. He has done this because he needs more room for his large stock of plants, but more particularly that those wanting plants or cut flowers can obtain them from a greenhouse near at hand. He pays particular attention to cut flowers. See advertisement.

Hon. Frank W. Miller's three years' term as County Commissioner expires next summer and as he is not a candidate for renomination and it is eminently proper that Portsmouth should have one of the three Commissioners, the friends of Hon. Marcellus Bufford are considering the subject of placing his name among the list of candidates. A more faithful official cannot be named for the position, and his large experience as City Clerk and his intimate acquaintance with the business, make his nomination eminently a fit one. Mr. Miller will retire from the Commission with the pleasant realization that his efforts to reduce the county debt and pauper expenses have been successful to a high degree. Judge Bufford is a safe man to place in charge of the interests of the city and county, and as he will add strength to the ticket, we trust that he will second the desires of his friends and allow the use of his name as a candidate. The republican party needs such men as he at the front.

U. S. S. Gettysburg, from Washington, via New York and Boston, arrived at the navy yard, on Tuesday, with stores for the various departments.

The first testimony to be used before the court of Alabama claims, in support of a claim for destruction of a vessel by the rebel steamer Sheuandoah, was taken on behalf of Captain Orlando G. Robinson, formerly master of the barque Gypsy, of New Bedford, before United States Commissioners Hackett on Monday. The claims for master's effects and articles of trade amounted to $9361.

A Great Chance for Boys.

[San Francisco Bulletin.]

One event in the history of the Palace Hotel enterprise in San Francisco is pregnant with importance to the entire community and fairly overflows with suggestions. It appeals directly to the best instincts of the people, and contributes to the solution of the problem regarding the distribution of the city youth. The lathers of the city, or a large number of them, formed a combination for the purpose of raising their wages about the time the lathing of the Palace was to begin. They found fault with what they termed the peculiarities of the job, and decided that the lathing should not be done at less than twelve cents per square yard. At this period 1,043 men (and not one boy) were at work on the hotel on per diem pay. One thousand and forty-three men and not a single apprentice. In view of the aggressive movements of the lathers, the projectors of the hotel, who had already conceived the idea of furnishing employment for the hundred or more boys, concluded to initiate boys into the mysteries of lathing and have these novices perform this work under the intelligent direction of experienced lathers. Advertisements for boys were immediately published in the papers, and of course they met with a prompt response. The boys came pouring in from all quarters, and letters by the score were received from widows and others soliciting work for boys who roamed the streets in idleness from the lack of opportunities to earn money. The letters and verbal applications demonstrate the sad scarcity of work in the trades for boys. Some of these letters related stories of wantand misery that would bring tears to the eyes. All the boys who gave any promise at all were set at work. The men engaged on the building, appreciating the situation came to the front and offered their boys, saying in substance, "We believe in this method of doing business; we want our boys to get into a trade, and we appreciate the facilities afforded on this building. We will stand by you in this emergency." The sons of the workmen on the buildings are among the best of the novice brigade. The lathing work is forging ahead to the entire satisfaction of all parties concerned. The number of apprentices in this department has increased in this ratio: Friday, October 23d, 45; 24th, 75; 26th, 122; 27th, 140; 28th, 166. Thus the per diem employers yesterday included 290 carpenters, 282 masons, 147 hodmen, 215 laborers, 36 plumbers, 50 gasfitters, 14 blacksmiths, 14 riggers, 11 watchmen, 9 engineers, 166 apprentices, and ten drivers, a total of 1,244 men. There is a principle involved in the employment of these boys which needs no elaborate explanation, and it is encouraging to observe, that none appreciate the fact more thoroughly than the men at work on the building.

The Farm King of Illinois.

[El Paso Journal.]

Mr. L. Sullivant, the great farmer of Illinois, and of the West, too, for that matter, is one of those cheerful souls who never do anything by halves. A correspondent says of his farm: "I was at Sullivant's farm recently. It is about eight miles square and contains about 44,000 acres. Met Mr. Sullivant in his office, and found him a most pleasant and agreeable man, ready to entertain any one who calls. I am indebted to Mr. W. B. Dix, chief clerk, for the following condensed report of the workings of the farm: Number of hands employed, about 600; mules and horses, 1,000; cattle (oxen) 50; number of acres in corn, 20,000; acres in small grain, 3,000; acres in tame grass, 3,000; miles of hedge 300; head of hogs, 1,000; head of cattle, 600. Everything is run in regular military style. He can tell just what it costs to raise a bushel of grain on any section of his farm; also the cost of each month, to feed the hands. The hands are all hired by the month and boarded. There is a resident doctor—Dr. Blair—who attends to the sick. According to actual figures it is demonstrated that 11 cents per bushel in ordinary seasons will put corn in the crib, and 26 cents per day will board hands. The bill of fare is better than that found in most boarding-houses. The following is the bill of fare for June, 1874: Smoked shoulder, mess beef, flour, bread, rice, beans, peas, tea, coffee, sugar, dried apples, vinegar, molasses, lard, spices, eggs, fresh vegetables, etc.: cost per capita, 26 1-3 cents. Found Mr. Fay, the Cashier, Mr. Miner, the general manager, and others, very pleasant gentlemen. A general stock of goods is kept, from which the men are supplied at net cost. An elevator of 35,000 bushels capacity is about ready to receive grain. It is said to be by competent judges the best and most complete elevator in the State, outside of Chicago. There is now in crib 450,000 bushels of corn wanting the completion of the elevator to be shelled and shipped. Crops look splendid; the recent rain has removed all apprehensions of injury from drought."

—When a society young man cleans his own clothes and smells of benzine for a week, one can judge this will be a tough winter for the poor.

CLASS IN TELEGRAPHY COMMENCES OCT. 5.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quality of the work at any price, although any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chrome, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to the gems from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from a home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size and of a character to give satisfactory treatment to details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure, and animal subjects, assists in a marked interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is of a light and graceful accompaniment, society or the artistic features, with only enough technical disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention, entitled

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,

SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs!

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.

EDMUND BURKE,

Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.

JOHN TAGGART."

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

He is no novice or humbug to beg, borrow or buy boisters to uphold him in an art he does not fully understand in every phase of its beauty; but would respectfully point to the best of references, WORKS, and ability to discover, develope and train inherent talent to accomplish splendid results. His pupils are shining in private and public, here and elsewhere. His many Musical Exhibitions—such as other Seitons or Writers present to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from fawning favoritism where true merit is too often absent. Terms, $12 for twelve weeks (twenty-four lessons) at his Music Room, or $15 at the pupil's residence, for Piano or Scientific Vocalization, separately or together. Lafayette's Watch.

It will be remembered that in June, 1874, Hon. Samuel Hooper presented a joint resolution in the House of Representatives, appropriating $300 for the purchase and restoration to the family of the Marquis de Lafayette of the watch presented to him by General Washington, and lost by General Lafayette during his last visit to this country. In connection with the resolution was a statement that the watch was in the possession of John R. Ward, Esq., of Texas, who had purchased it four years ago at a pawnbroker's sale in Louisville, for the sum of $75. It bears the inscription: "G. Washington to Gilbert Mottier de Lafayette, Lord Conwallis' capitulation, Yorktown, October 17, 1781." During the visit of the Marquis to Nashville, in 1825, this watch mysteriously disappeared, and was never heard of again until it turned up in the hands of John R. Ward, Esq., of Texas.

An ancient detective has been tracing its peregrinations and has given the result thereof in the New York World. He set himself to work in dead earnest to find out who stole the watch. It was a very arduous task. He sought the aid of "mediums," All gave him minute descriptions of the thief; but each medium differed from the other in the description. This expedient failed. He next resolved on an examination of the records, newspaper files, etc., at Nashville, contemporary with the event. The watch was stolen from Lafayette's room at the United States hotel, in Nashville, spite of the strong guard of "distinguished citizens," who watched during the sleeping hours of the Marquis. One window of the room was partly open, and it was conjectured that the thief, who had been secreted either under the bed or in a closet, had escaped by that way.

He endeavored to interview the "guard of honor," but they were each and every one of them dead, and he got no satisfaction out of them. He then made another shift. Posting at once to Louisville, he interviewed the firm who auctioneered the watch off among the effects of the pawnbroker into whose hands the watch fell. He says:

They informed me that the sale in question had been made by order of Isaac Stampfly, a pawnbroker of Memphis, to whom they gave me a letter. I went to Memphis and saw Stampfly, a Swiss Jew, with a shrewd but honest face. He objected at first to giving me any information, fearing it might make complications and trouble; but, when I explained my motives and pressed him, said he remembered the transaction perfectly well, and corroborated it by taking down an old ledger and opening to a particular page, where he showed me the following entry:

"June 18, 1868. Miss Matilda Garland, of Jackson, Madison county, deposits a watch [here follows a description, etc. of the relic]; thirty five dollars lent her on it for six months. Memorandum—As there are suspicious circumstances here, she gives me Rev. Mark Tweedy, D. D., and Major Biglee as her references. Teaches school in Jackson, and wants to redeem it."

"I wonder where Miss Garland is now?" I asked. Stampfly went to his desk and found a card. "Here she is; 'Mrs. Paul De Long, Grenada, Miss.' She was here not three months since on a bridal tour. Came to redeem the watch. Was much distressed that it was sold. Asked me to hunt it up, and left that address in case I should make any discoveries concerning it."

He sought Mrs. De Long. In the conversation which he had with her she said that her grandfather was reported to have been one of Lafayette's body-guard, but was much horrified when told that the watch, which she supposed Lafayette gave to him, was really stolen from the Marquis. Mrs. De Long then gave a history of the watch so far as she knew anything about it. We give the gist of her account. Her grandfather died suddenly in 1847, leaving his library and desk to her father, who was killed during the last war, leaving the family utterly destitute. Piece by piece they sold all they had to keep body and soul together. We quote her own words now:

"At last, when we were half starved, I persuaded her to sell the secretary, too, and I was cleaning out the old papers from the drawers and brushing the dust and cobwebs out preparatory to sending it to the auction room, when this little spring here (she had gone to the desk to show me) flew back, thus opening the drawer and disclosing the old watch snugly nestled away upon the cotton. I pounced upon it as a treasure sent from Heaven, and next day took it to Memphis, and pawned it to old Stampfly."

After a series of questions it was at last determined to examine the "secretary." A false bottom was found in that self-same secret drawer, under which was discovered a draft for £150 on a London banking house, drawn in favor of Rufus Garland, and the history of the stolen watch in Rev. Dr. Garland's handwriting. Here it is:

NASHVILLE, Dec. 18, 1846.—This has been a very sad day to me. This forenoon came to me my old friend and comrade, Benjamin Flurney, of Columbia, in great distress of mind, and asked me to lock the doors and hear him make a disagreeable confession. Then he laid before my eyes the long-missing watch of Lafayette, the loss of which caused such excitement, "I stole it," he said; "I stole it, Rufus," and hid his face from me and wept scalding tears. Presently, when I comforted him and he grew more calm, he said: "The doctor tells me I have not long to live; my heart is diseased; I desire you to make restitution for me. Here is all the money needed; take the accursed wedge of Achan from my sight; it has tortured my whole life; restore it to the heirs without exposing me. I have had misery enough." And again he bowed his white head, that head so honored, and wept. "How did this happen, Benjamin?" I asked. Said he: "That night, you remember, we were all upon guard. You and the rest were asleep, but Spatch, Davis, La Cross and I were on guard for a spell of two hours. We had all been drinking heavily; poor Spatch and Hyacinthe fell asleep on their post, and the devil was in me. I wanted something that belonged to the Marquis. I stole into his room, past old Pouchon, who was snoring. So tired and worn out the old Marquis looked! I opened the trunk, seeking a ribbon, a handkerchief, or the like. The first thing I saw was the watch, and, without thinking, I put it into the pocket, raised the window gently, and crept like a thief as I was from the room. As I crossed the threshold I heard the old Marquis call out in his sleep: 'Arretez vous, Monsieur! Noblesse oblige?' Stung to the quick I turned back to restore the watch, but just then Pouchon aroused, and I escaped. I have never known a happy minute since." My poor friend! I could look in his haggard face and believe him. I told him however, that I could not consent to deal with the matter in a clandestine way. There need be no publicity about it, but in communicating with the Marquis' heirs I must give his name and the circumstances. He groaned and begged me to defer the disclosure until after his death. "It will not be long," he said pathetically. To this I assented, and so he left me, after I had earnestly enjoined him to seek comfort and peace of mind by prostrating himself at the foot of that throne where mercy, peace, comfort are never refused to the contrite and humble petitioner. I have drawn this statement up only as a guide for my heirs in case of my death happening before that of Flurnoy's.

Dr. Garland did die just a week before Flurnoy. Rather a strange history that watch had. Is the story of the World true?

News and Notes.

Another woman was buried to death in Providence on Saturday. Her name was Bridget Conley and she resided in the tenth ward. She was trying to light a kerosene lamp when the accident occurred which cost her life.

The dead-lock in the Biddeford city government was broken on Monday night. The board of aldermen passed without amendment the year's appropriation bill sent in from the common council last May. It has lain on the table since May 11.

Mrs. Ann Sullivan started a fire at South Boston, Tuesday, for her husband's supper, with kerosene, and was burned to death.

Proceedings have been instituted against Rev. Dr. Talmage of Brooklyn, on a charge of slander, by a former member of his church.

The public debt statement shows a reduction of $123,427 last month.

State News.

The Prohibition Herald has a hard time getting a living.

The trustees of the Concord Savings Bank have suspended payment. The run upon the bank has been heavy, some $600,000 having been withdrawn in the past few months, reducing the deposits from $1,550,000 to $950,000, and with every prospect of a continuance of this run the trustees have taken this action, believing it to be for the best interests of the depositors.

The republican conventions will be held as follows: State, at Concord, Jan. 12; Congressional, 1st district, Dover, Jan. 21—2d, Manchester, Jan. 13—3d, Lebanon, Jan. 13; Councillor, 1st, Portsmouth, Jan. 14; Senatorial, 1st, Exeter, Jan. 26; County, Rockingham, Exeter, Jan. 26.

The municipal election in Keene takes place next Tuesday. Hon. Francis A. Faulkner is the republican nominee. Mayor Colony is the democratic candidate.

Eight children attending the Mount Pleasant school at Nashua have died this fall, and many others have been ill—a result which is said to be directly traceable to the deadly effluvium generated in the earth closets of the schoolhouse.

Mr. Frank H. Keyes of Keene was shot on Monday night by Mr. S. G. Griffin, who mistook him for a burglar. The ball took effect in the breast of Keyes, producing, however, only a slight flesh wound.

The Boston Advertiser declares on most reliable authority, that the reports of suffering in the mining districts of Pennsylvania are grossly exaggerated. Although work is somewhat dull there is nothing like a stoppage, and on an average the miners in that region are earning more money than are the workmen in the mills and manufactories in Massachusetts.

Minority representation seems to have resulted very satisfactorily in the recent election in Illinois. It applies, we believe, only to the legislature, and the idea is to give parties a representation corresponding to their relative strength. This was effected with remarkable accuracy. Of the 153 members, the republicans were credited by their votes to 68 members, and they got 69; while the opposition were entitled to 85, and got 84, one less. Had the election been on the old basis, the republicans would have elected but 54, and the opposition would have elected 99.

Senator Brownlow, of Tennessee, will not go to Washington until after the holidays, and then will be prepared to take the lead in a movement for the reconstruction of the republican party in the South. His health is reported to be about as usual.

A fire at Wilton destroyed $100,000 worth of buildings and goods on the morning of the 2d. It caught in Wallace's block and extended to Masonic hall, Chas. Tarbell's building, Bradbury's apothecary store, and stores of D. B. Needham, Frank Kent, Alfred E. Jaques, William S. Taggard, Mrs. Wm. P. Dunklee, Dr. Henry Trevett, N. D. Foster, S. T. Hutchinson, Tarbell & Sewall, Samuel Center, James Hunnaford, Railroad hotel, Wilton Savings Bank, Whiting House, C. H. Burns' law library and Whitney House stable.

Old Time Chronicles, No. 119

By Uncle Joseph.

The battle of Bennington was fought August, 1775. Gen. Stark had fourteen hundred under his command. He was victorious. His loss was four officers and ten privates killed, and forty-two wounded. He captured four pieces of artillery with all the baggage wagons and horses of the enemy. The loss of the enemy was two hundred and twenty-six killed. Col. Baum was mortally wounded and captured with 33 officers and 700 privates.

A written account of this battle, dated August 18, 1775, by Gen. Lincoln of Massachusetts to the council of that Province, is now before us. We think it was never printed. In speaking of Gen. Stark, Gen. Lincoln says, "officers and men, stimulated by the most laudable motives, behaved with the greatest spirit and bravery. They entered the enemies several intrenchments with fortitude and alacrity, amidst the incessant fire of field pieces and musketry." It says, "Brigadier-General Stark is the same person who commanded a regiment at the famous battle of Bunker Hill, and behaved with great intrepidity and courage." Then the letter states that after the first part of the action, "Gen. Stark ordered a hogshead of rum for the refreshment of the militia." This was generous in the General as things then were as to ideas of the manner of refreshing fatigued and exhausted soldiers in conflict; but it is stated that so eager were they to fight the enemy, they tarried not to taste it. Good soldiers, those.

The forces in that engagement on our side were from Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and what was then called the Grants, a portion of Vermont.

The Elevator Man.

The St. Louis Republican discourses of a modern character in this wise: "He has reached the advanced age of sixteen years. Not blighted affections or lost confidence in 4, 11, 44 has brought him to it. No! The filthy lucre of $5 per week has made him in love with solitude and a rising profession. He gushed with an enthusiasm of high art when he first took hold of the rope. He has had hold of it six months, and he gushes no longer. That rope has taken all the gush out of him. He leans against it a sadder and a wiser hermit of the elevator. When the hermit is strictly on duty, he leans despondingly in the rope corner like a blighted being; as if there might possibly be something in this world beyond the monotony of continually going up and continually coming down, if he could only find it out, but perhaps it is not worth the trouble. If you ask the hermit if there is any fear of the elevator shooting up through the roof, he only shakes his head sorrowfully as if to say—no such good luck. If you plunge into the intricacies of hydraulics or steam-pressure or cogwheels, he shuts you up like a jack-knife with a withering look and an inquiry of 'Which floor?' He is the sworn enemy of the engineer residing in the subterranean gulfs. If the elevator runs fast or slow, it is always the engineer. Every ill in the life of the hermit is centred in that engineer. He is a demon. If the hermit caught that engineer's head under the elevator, perhaps he'd squeeze it good. We often think that perhaps it was because of the worldly friction of this engineer that the hermit became a hermit of the elevator. Take the hermit all in all, he is a simple-minded child of nature. He sees more ups and downs in this world than any one else, without being seasick, or sick of seeing the same people forever and forever ascending and descending, and forever and forever ringing the changes from one to five on that same eternally tinkling bell."

—They tell of some extraordinary Cincinnati wood sawyers: Old Mr. Crabapple is very much pleased with a gentleman whom he has engaged to saw wood. "When he piles the wood," said old Crabapple to his friend, "if one stick projects beyond the others, he pounds it in with the ax." "He's a slouch," replied old man Stubble; "you should see my wood sawyer. When he gets the wood all piled, he takes off the rough, projecting ends with a claw hammer saw." "Does he? Well, he couldn't pile wood for me," broke in old Spikenberg; "my sawyer piles the wood carefully, then goes over the ends with a jackplane, sandpapers them down, and puts on a coat of varnish before he thinks of asking for his pay." Then they all went into the Grand Hotel after a big drink, before Syntax could tell how his wood sawyer silverplated all the ends of the wood and nailed a handle on each and every stick to pick it up by.

—Silk culture in California is a failure.

Muscular Christianity.

[Chicago Tribune.]

We fear that Rev. Dr. Elliott of Washington, Ky., has been making unkind references from the pulpit to the probable future of the editor of the Maysville (Ky.) Eagle. At any rate, the blood of the Eagle is up. It issues unpleasant biographical sketches of Rev. Elliot as rapidly as its name-sake screams. If one-tenth or so of what it says is one-quarter true, the residents of Washington are not to be congratulated on their choice of a pastor. We extract from the Eagle's crowded columns a few of the chief charges against this expounder of the gospel and pounder of men, as follows: His first appearance in Washington was as a teacher. In this capacity he managed to quarrel with everybody and to embroil the whole town in litigation. When the verdicts were rendered and the fees were paid, it was found that the clerical combatant had got into his hands, by some legal legerdemain, the title to the town court-house. He has since established himself there, and invites the town to put him out. As he is panoplied with revolvers, the town has not yet found time or courage to do so. Having secured the citadel, he attacked the outworks. It is the custom in the village of Washington to hitch horses to the fence of the court-house yard. Rev. Elliott objected to this because the animals gnawed the rails. He could not have his property destroyed in that way. It is easy to see that, if twenty horses eat two splinters a day a piece, a square of fencing will soon vanish. At any rate the belligerent divine thought so. When the yeomanry of Washington persisted in fastening their horses to the fence which they paid for, he whitewashed the rails with a compound of plaster and poison. No horses have been hitched there since. Such triumphs excited him to further efforts. He locked up the well in the court-house square, from which the Washingtonians were wont to take their daily drinks. A number of young men with an unwonted fondness for cold water tried to break the lock one night. Elliott lay in ambush for them and opened fire with a revolver. A brief, fierce struggle ensued. When the smoke of the shooting cleared away, the prostrate form of the divine was dimly discovered beneath those of all the nice young men. They were sitting, and standing, and sprawling upon him impartially. His bullets had missed, and his foes had triumphed. His revolver was taken as a lawful prize of war, and his lock was smashed, but he was let go free. He is now supposed to be lurking somewhere within the court-house, waiting for fresh chances of combat. The town still claims to own that structure, but would probably be willing to sell its title cheap, especially if the purchaser would agree to remove the building and its contents. The story of Rev. Elliott's doings, if it is true as it is told, might be placed beside the exploits of Rev. E. E. Hale's hero who stole a meeting-house. Stealing a court-house and its appurtenances is something more surprising still.

Spiritual Wonders.

[Spiritual Scientist, Nov. 12.]

A large gathering was present at the meeting of the Boston Spiritualists' Union, Sunday evening, over 400 persons finding seats in the hall. Mrs. Croswell and daughter sang several selections, which were well received, after which Lizzie Doten was moved to speak. "Once in the slumbers of midnight," she said, "I seemed to be walking along in a narrow, dark place, and as I walked along, feeling somewhat afraid suddenly there came a bright light, and there stood before me a figure; it had a glowing countenance—a face which I might describe as crystalized, and a light shining through it. I stood back in astonishment; I was not afraid, the influence was so attractive. 'Who and what are you?' 'I am a spirit,' it said; 'you have seen spirits in the past as they appeared in earth life; this is my spirit form.'

"I said, 'May I touch you?' and then it seemed that I put out my arm and that a thrill shook me from head to foot; it is impossible to describe it. 'I could not lay my hand on your head and you live,' said the figure, 'for you belong to this material sphere.'

"I now seemed to be retracing my steps, when it said, 'Don't lose your presence of mind.' I walked back and into my room. I touched the face of my material body; it was a matter of fact. The form said, 'Don't be agitated,' and I remember the feeling of anxiety that then pervaded me, as I became absorbed; the next thing I recognized I could not stir hand nor foot. It was a moonlight night—every article of furniture was visible. 'Don't be agitated,' said the voice, and I could feel the perspiration from every pore. I never shall forget the experience, for I know that I am an immortal soul, and the time will come when, beyond the bounds of immortality, I shall have that beautiful spirit form."

Prof Carpenter related an occurrence that happened during the week in Lynn. At a private circle, immediately after a funeral, which had laid away the earth-form of a husband, the widow was convinced of his presence by the appearance of a rose-bud, and he (the husband) controlling, the medium said that this rose was in his hand when the body was laid in the tomb; he was enabled to bring it because she had touched it previous to its being placed there. Prof. Carpenter said an investigation proved the truth of the story. The undertaker and assistants were certain that the rose was there when they locked the door, but it was not when they opened it.

—Twenty-one girls of Kenosha, Wis., have "Resolved, That if the young men won't come and see us, we will go and see them." And the young men are stepping down and out, and taking to the woods.

—The paragraphist of the Milwaukee Sentinel is named John Lase; and his last name would be much more appropriate if one were to knock l out of it.

Prepared by Dr. O. C. Gage, Saratoga, New York.

Geo. C. Goodwin & Co., Wholesale Agents, Boston.

To The Afflicted.

In presenting this valuable remedy to the public, I would say that the almost unlimited and wholly unprecedented success it meets with, stamps it at once as the GREATEST DISCOVERY OF THE AGE. On its merits I am willing to stake my reputation as a physician; and so confident am I that it will not disappoint the most sanguine expectations of a single invalid, that I am prepared to make contracts on the basis of CURE OR NO PAY, with those who have tried other medicines without relief until they have become too faithless to make another attempt. To substantiate what I claim for this Wonderful Vegetable Remedy, I do not propose to import far-fetched testimonials, but will simply refer to well-known, reliable living witnesses in your own State.

The afflicted's obedient servant,

DR. O. C. GAGE, Saratoga, N. Y.

A Thousand Bankruptcies

Would not create as great a panic in commerce as the withdrawal of HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR from the market, would create among the sick. The reason is obvious. Tens of thousands of both sexes would be bankrupted in health by such an event. The famous specific is effecting such cures in cases of chronic cough and cold, influenza, bronchitis, bleeding from the lungs and apparent consumption, as have never heretofore been accomplished within the memory of man.

PIKE'S TOOTH-ACHE DROPS—Cure in one minute.

Rational Medication.

Medication is only successful when it is rational, and it is rational only when it begins at the beginning. In other words, to cure a malady, its cause must be removed. Weakness, either general or local, is the origin of the great majority of diseases. Reinforce the vital energies, regulate digestion and secretion by strengthening the organs which perform those all-important functions, and dyspepsia, constipation, kidney and bladder complaints, uterine difficulties, impure circulation, and the thousand and one ailments which are the consequences of debility, are completely, and in most cases permanently removed. The best, safest and most agreeable tonic and alterative that can be employed for this purpose is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The experience of twenty-five years, during which time it has outlived perhaps ten times that number of ephemeral preparations which have entered into competition with it, has proved it to be unequalled as a remedy for all disorders accompanied by or proceeding from weakness.

The Green Grass Grows in the meadow, go spread over it a thin layer of Bearine, and the tiny blades will shoot upwards, and grow far more luxuriantly than before. Try the same experiment upon your hair and the effect is still more marked; the hair grows vigorous and seems to find in Bearine all the ingredients to support its life. 10

Local Matters.

Newcastle.

Editor Chronicle; Having nothing to engage my attention during the past week, I thought I would break a monotony by taking the census of this town, and was so much surprised as well as interested, that I have concluded to send you a copy, that you might if you think proper publish it in your paper for the benefit of its many readers who once lived in Newcastle but who now live in various parts of our State and country. There are 3 churches, 3 schools, 1 hotel, 4 grocery stores and 2 rum shops, with a population of 610, a decrease of nearly one third within the last ten years. I have classed them as follows:

Married couples living together as husband and wife, 118; widows, 37; widowers, 19; grass widows, (who don't live with husbands) 6; grass widowers, 3; old maids, 13; old bachelors, 20; with a large number who have to make up their minds very quick, or they will come in the last two classes. Married couples over eighty years of age, 1: married couples under 20 years of age, 3; persons over 85 years of age, 2; persons over 80 and under 85, 11; persons over 70 and under 80, 24; persons over 60 and under 70, 47; the others being under 60 years of age. I would not class them. The above is as correct as time and labor could make it. RUSTIC.

Laconics.

Tuesday night, the station house was well filled with lodgers who had a general fight in the cell assigned them. Almost every night some of them go there under the influence of liquor, and in some instances are very saucy. On Wednesday morning, on being released they scattered around the city. One of them entered the house of Rev. Dr. Bingham, helped himself to what was on the breakfast table and refused to leave, and did not until arrested by an officer. Would it not be advisable to set such fellows breaking stone for the city?

On Wednesday, two marines named Teirney and McLane, were fined $9.90 each for making a brawl and tumult on Daniel street.

The Pacific mail steamer "Henry Chauncy," on board of which James P. Bartlett, Esq., and wife, of this city, are passengers bound to Panama—met and spoke with steamer "Acapulco" on the 22d of November within three days' sail of Panama. The voyage had been pleasant, and the passengers were all well and enjoying the voyage. The Acapulco has arrived at New York.

Commodore Fairfax is ordered to the command of the naval station at New London.

Engineer Corey, of the P. & D. railroad, is a careful man. Seeing a man walking on the bridge ahead, on Wednesday, he blew the whistle, but the man continued walking between the rails. The engineer concluded it better to stop the train than to run the risk of the man's staying on the track to be run over. So the obstinate pedestrian walked on until he reached terra firma, and the train was delayed five minutes.

The ladies and gentlemen who attend the educational lectures would enjoy them better if order were preserved. The giggling of a few inconsiderate girls and boys prevented many of Prof. Sanborn's audience from hearing a portion of his lecture.

Remember the lecture at the Methodist church this evening. Rev. Mr. Bidwell has lectured in Portsmouth twice before this, and has each time been pronounced the best lecturer in the course. Do not fail to hear him.

A Quaker Printer's Proverbs.

Never send an article for publication without giving the editor thy name, for thy name often-times secures publication to worthless articles.

Thou shouldst not rap at the door of a printing office; for he that answereth the rap sneereth in his sleeve and loseth time.

Never do thou loaf about nor knock down the type, or the boys will love thee as they do the shade trees—when thou leavest.

Thou shouldst never read the copy on the printer's case, or the sharp and hooked container thereof, or he may knock thee down.

Never inquire of the editor for news, for behold it is his business to give it to thee at the appointed time without asking for it.

It is not right that thou shouldst ask him who is the author of an article, for it is his duty to keep such things unto himself.

When thou dost enter his office, take heed unto thyself that thou dost not look at what may concern thee not, for that is not meet in the sight of good breeding.

Neither examine thou the proof sheet, for it is not ready to meet thine eye, thou mayest understand.

Prefer thine own town paper to any other, and subscribe for it immediately.

—The jovial captain of a steamship tells a good story relative to the May and December marriages so common in Brazil. A Brazilian gentleman, apparently over, fifty years of age, was a passenger on his vessel. He was accompanied by two girls, one about fifteen, and another younger. The gentleman was sea-sick in the cabin, and the girls were on deck, whereupon the captain endeavored to amuse them—took them on his knees, and told them stories, while he enjoyed their prattle and pretty smiles. In the midst of this pleasant occupation the gentleman came on deck. With a fierce expression he gazed upon the scene for a moment, and then inquired in a harsh, husky voice: "You, sir, are you married?" "Yes, I have a daughter older than your little girl here," said the captain. "She reminds me very much of mine." Here he patted the pretty cheek. "That little girl, sir," exclaimed the indignant Brazilian, with great emphasis, "that little girl is my wife, sir!" The captain collapsed.

—A very dirty, debased and ignorant-looking man went to vote in a township of Mischigan. Said one of the ladies, offering him a ballot: "I wish you would oblige us by voting this ticket." "What kind of a ticket is that?" said he. "Why," said the lady, "you can see yourself." "But I can't read," he answered. "Why, can't you read the ballot you have there in your hand, which you are about to vote?" the lady asked. "No," said he, "I can't read at all." "Well," said the lady, "this means that you are willing to let the women as well as the men vote." "Is that it?" he replied. "Then, I don't want it; the women don't know enough to vote."

—Mary was the proprietress of a diminutive, incipient sheep, whose outer covering was as devoid of color as congealed vapor, and to all localities to which Mary perambulated, her young Southdown was morally certain to follow. It tagged her to the dispensatory of learning, one diurnal section of time, which was contrary to all precedent, and excited the cachination of the seminary attendants, when the children perceived the presence of a young quadruped at the establishment of instruction. Consequently, the preceptor expelled him from the interior, but he continued to remain in the immediate vicinity, and tarried in the neighborhood with fretfulness until Mary once more became visible.

By an accident on the Concord & Montreal Railroad, Wednesday, the 2d, an engine, tender and one passenger car was thrown down an embankment. A brakeman was killed and several other persons injured.

CLASS IN TELEGRAPHY COMMENCES OCT. 5.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful life study; and a collection of pictures, the purest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possession of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quality of the paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and there, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the artistic treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior pages. The judicious inter-position of landscape, marine, figure, and animal subjects, sustains an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment, worthy of the pictorial illustrations, with only such technical discussions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union,

SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.

(No charge for postage.)

Specimen copies of THE ALDINE, fifty cents.

THE ALDINE, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON, President.

COMBINED PAPERS—FORTY-FIFTH YEAR.

THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN.

POSTAGE FREE FOR 1875.

The Country Gentleman is published WEEKLY on the following terms, when paid strictly in advance: ONE COPY, one year, $2.50; FOUR COPIES, $10, and an additional copy for the year free to the sender of the club; TEN COPIES, $20, and an additional copy for the year free to the sender of the club.

The Country Gentleman possesses an unequalled corps of correspondents, regular and occasional, among the BEST FARMERS of all parts of the country, and constantly reflects the practical condition and progress of the husbandry of every section of the United States and civilized world.

The Country Gentleman gives in its HORTICULTURAL DEPARTMENT a continuous variety of information and suggestions, equal or superior in the aggregate to what is obtained in the monthly numbers of most magazines devoted to Horticulture.

The Country Gentleman has probably done as much as all other journals combined, to introduce and disseminate IMPROVED STOCK of every kind through the country; as it commands to a greater degree than any contemporary, the confidence and support of breeders and purchasers.

The Country Gentleman contains unusually full and trustworthy MARKET REPORTS, and devotes special attention to them and to the prospects of the crops, as throwing light upon one of the most important of all questions—When to Buy and When to Sell.

The Country Gentleman embraces numerous minor departments of a practical character, such as the Dairy, the Poultry-Yard, the Apiary, the Vineyard, and so on, and weekly presents a column or two for the housewife and an intere-ting variety of Juvenile Reading. Pulmocine Cordial.
Pulmocine Cordial.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding such other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredient "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

His pupils are shining in private and public, here and elsewhere. His many Musical Exhibitions—such as others seldom or never present to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from fawning favoritism where true merit is too often absent. The Thistle.

At the annual festival of St. Andrew's Society, at Washington, D. C., on the 30th of November, Hon. Thomas L. Tullock responded as follows to the toast—"Scotland as she is:"

MR. PRESIDENT: Scotland has been beautifully portrayed in prose and celebrated in song. Her history, so replete with thrilling and romantic interest, has been eloquently commemorated by her illustrious historians, and sweetly and affectionately sung by those immortal bards whose names are held so dear in their own land and are so familiar in all others. I have, on previous occasions, at your annual festivals borne my admiring and willing testimony in behalf of Scotland. Her glorious history; her beautiful scenery; her men of renown, as well as to her many noble national characteristics, and I am now called upon to respond to the sentiment, "Scotland as she is." The inspired pen of a Scott could only do justice to such a theme, and modesty will restrain me from attempting it. Though its grand and sublime scenery is the same; though physically unchanged, it is not now the Scotland of Auld Lang Syne; and yet, it as much deserves our admiration. I recur with ever fresh pleasure to my recent visit to her time-honored and historic soil. During the summer of 1873 I traveled rapidly over the most picturesque routes, and visited most of the important cities, places of historic renown and natural beauty to which tourists resort, and admired the lovely and almost incomparable scenery of coast and isle, mountain and glen, highland and lowland, loch and stream. The same grand old mountains stand as sturdy sentinels, often peering through the very clouds; the same pearly streams, with their never-failing supply, continue their unceasing tribute to the vast expanse of ocean; the same beautiful, natural reservoirs, nestling among the everlasting hills, delight the eye as of yore. Geographically, Scotland remains, as in centuries past, the admiration of every beholder; but Scotland in her economy, Scotland politically, socially, and ecclesiastically, displays a widely different aspect to those who carefully study her condition from that which students of its history have presented to us. It is a subject however, with which I am not sufficiently familiar correctly to represent the Christian civilization, the material wealth and moral condition of Scotland, as I gave but little attention to those matters while there, for my time was mainly devoted to her local, traditional, and historic attractions, and looking at the beautiful in nature. Whatever knowledge I possess is derived from casual observation in my rapid journeyings throughout the length and breadth of the land. Without attempting any description of her ecclesiastical history I may state that the prevailing religious sentiment of the present is Presbyterian, represented by the Established Church, the Free Church, and the United Presbyterian Church. Other denominations exist, but the great preponderating religious element of the people is Presbyterian, as it has been for many years past. The adherents of that faith are unyielding in their convictions, tenacious of their principles, and exemplify its teachings in their lives. Their contributions must be munificent, for in addition to their liberality in sustaining their home work I noticed in most of the centers of population on the Continent missions supported by their generous offerings. We commend them for their fidelity to conscientious convictions, for their inflexible will and persistent adherence to what they regard as truth, and their obligations to adhere to it at any cost. I was especially impressed by their rigid observance of the Sabbath and the Thursday preceding the Sacrament, and the quiet of those days. We had evidences of their scrupulous devotion to Christian duty, and witnessed the sincere homage yielded to it by willing and obedient hearts. Very able and learned divines have ministered at her altars and now occupy her pulpits, exerting a potential moral and religious influence. The people rally to their standards with as much earnestness and constancy as the clansmen followed the behests of their noted chieftains in the olden times.

In their domestic habits and tastes the people are eminently social and hospitable, and perhaps somewhat convivial in their disposition on festive occasions. The flowing bowl was once quite common, but is now more temperately used. While on the Continent one hears the subject of temperance seldom introduced, and but little, if any, intoxication is witnessed, probably the result of drinking light or native wines; but when in Scotland, although conspicuous signs indicated temperance houses, temperance stores, and gatherings in the public squares temperance lectures, yet I was sometimes reminded by occasional cases of inebriation of scenes I had witnessed nearer home, denoting the use of a stronger beverage than wines—Scotch whisky. The temperance sentiment is, however growing, and the thrift and general good habits of the people everywhere attest to their uniform sobriety, frugality, and industry. Their courage, their rugged and hardy constitutions, their generosity, intelligence, and honesty, are national characteristics, as proverbial as their industry, shrewdness, and love of liberty.

In dress the Highland costume presents a pleasing appearance, and was the subject of much admiration. Although we noticed many, both old and young, thus clad, yet this distinctive feature of the Scotch seems to be fast going into disuse, as is also the Gaelic language, for education in the English tongue is now, I believe, compulsory.

In material wealth there is everywhere observable a remarkable development of her manufacturing, mechanical, and other industrial interests, as well as her merchant marine. Progress and prosperity greeted and cheered us on every hand. The great improvements in all professions are most gratifying. The preservation of ancient structures and the erection of substantial public edifices and private dwellings are also noticeable. The many railroads built and in progress are developing the resources of the country, and enhancing its wealth as well as the happiness of the people. The immense business of constructing steam vessels of every capacity is a great feature of Scotch industry and prosperity. Growth in wealth and in everything that distinguishes an enterprising, cultivated, and industrious people, as I have said, is everywhere observable, yet their prosperity never seems to stimulate them to engage in speculations so prevalent and so ruinous in America. Capital seeks safe investments—judiciously promoting industries, which, though slowly, are surely, remunerative, or else securely vested in trusts yielding moderate rates of interests. Less than one-half of the interest required by us is satisfactory to them. Security and liability are considerations in the investments of their capital, rather than large interest, with questionable security. In Scotland, as in every other country, the concentration of vast landed estates is in the hands of individuals, a few dozen proprietors possessing a large proportion of the soil, is an unqualified evil, wrong in principle, and injurious in practice. It retards the prosperity of the nation, is oppressive to the people, and conducive to emigration. If the tenantry of Scotland owned in fee the lands they cultivate and the houses they occupy no one can doubt that a deeper interest would be felt in public affairs, as well as a much stronger disposition to beautify their homesteads and improve the soil. A house owned by the occupant is ever desirable, not only because it gives more comfort, contentment, and competency, but because it constitutes an additional incentive to effort, permanence, and to an elevation of character; but notwithstanding this injurious and unjust feature, (a relic of the old feudal system,) the future of Scotland promises to be as vigorous and healthful as her past has been successful and honorable. May she have peace and prosperity throughout all her borders, and continue, as ever, to present to the world the same love for true liberty, both political and religious; the same high regard for principles, the same great moral characteristics, and the same readiness to do or die in defense of her rights.

Politically, Scotland is neither Conservative nor Radical, but may be regarded as Liberal, the elections almost invariably indicating the general prevalence of a liberal sentiment among the people. The loyalty of Scotland to the Royal Family is unquestioned. The Queen is greatly beloved and esteemed as a most estimable and acceptable sovereign. She loves Scotland and her people. In a book entitled "Our life in the Highlands," written by herself, you cannot fail to discern her kind appreciation. She is joyfully and gratefully welcomed to Balmoral, her summer home, by the people who warmly commend her humane and Christian sympathy. An admirer of Victoria, residing at Balmoral, in conversation, gave a glowing and affectionate recital of her gracious acts in relieving the destitute, in kind offices to the widow and the fatherless, in visiting the aged and the sick, cheering them by reading from religious works or imparting Christian consolation. She is familiar with the condition of every household in the vicinity, and is fondly reverenced for her charities and virtues, and justly commands the intense love and affection of the people, irrespective of condition. We cannot, from such testimony, wonder at the high estimation entertained by her subjects for her exalted character as a woman and sovereign. While in Scotland she worships with the Presbyterian, mingles freely with the people, and is in harmony with them at all times. The purity of her private life, her domestic virtues, her generous and loving disposition, as well as her wise, humane, and judicious public administrations, endear her to a people who have full confidence in her earnest sympathy for their happiness and prosperity.

Scotland, we love thee! We hail thee as the land of chivalry and song! Your annals are illustrious. On your historic scroll are inscribed the names of eminent sons who have made enduring impress on the ages, and whose memories are treasured in the grateful recollections of admiring countrymen. We cherish in fond remembrance all that relates to Scotland—an admiration for her sons of valor and song; of learning and science; of piety and statesmanship; an enthusiasm for all that is ennobling in the past and commendable in the present. Scotland, we again salute thee with kindly cheer and fraternal greetings; with sympathetic tenderness we ask for blessings on our ancestral home. Scotland, for the past we sincerely venerate thee; for the present we exultantly congratulate thee, and invoke gracious benedictions on thy coming future.

—It takes faith and courage to publish a country paper in California. A lack of the first-named quality leads the editor of the Calaveras Chronicle to moralize thus:—"There is wood enough owing us for subscriptions to set a dozen Hindoo widows up in the suttee business, but for some reason or other delinquents are perversely adverse to yielding it up. One noble-hearted gentleman has supplied us at the office, but there are no more indications of fuel around our residence than there are of a good crop on the Sahara. Are things always to remain thus?"

—The body of a man murdered at Little Rock had thirty-four bullets in it, and the printers thought that the obituary ought to be leaded.

—Silence is the fittest reply to folly.

Daily Chronicle.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1874.

The Note of Preparation.

The meeting of the republican State committee showed that an earnest, energetic contest is to be waged on the part of the republicans of New Hampshire during the coming Winter, and the meagre attendance at the prohibition convention indicates that although there may be no fewer advocates of restriction of the sale of intoxicating liquors, there is no longer doubt that the scattering vote which has shown a disposition for several years past to concentrate on a candidate representing the prohibition element and nothing else, is likely to return to its original status. The tone of the speeches made in the committee shows a lively sense of the importance of allowing the people to make their own selections of candidates hereafter. It was for this purpose that we urged three years ago the adoption of a system of nominating candidates by which all republicans could vote in each town and city directly for the men they desire nominated for Governor, Congressmen and other officers. The plan is more cumbrous than that in vogue, yet we know of no other which promises to indicate so clearly the wishes of the people. The proposition was voted down in committee (as we expected) because it afforded less opportunity for wire pulling and political trickery, and until now politicians have managed the party in many instances for their own selfish purposes rather than for its self-preservation.

For the gubernatorial candidacy, if any change be made, Col. Charles H. Bell, Hon. Dexter Richards and Hon. Person C. Cheney seem most prominently named, although there are a score of excellent men, such as Hon. William H. Y. Hackett, Hon. Benj. F. Prescott, Hon. Benj. J. Cole, Hon. Oliver Wyatt and Gen. Gilman Marston, whose very names carry a weight with them which would be satisfactorily felt in such a canvass as that of 1875 is to be. Gen. McCutchins' frank speech intimating that he wishes no renomination from mere precedent or compliment will make him hosts of friends, and should any other man be the chosen standard-bearer, the honest old farmer and his friends will be found doing sturdy duty in the ranks.

It seems to us that this Congressional district will be looked to as being the ground where the republicans will be expected to display foresight and wisdom in the selection of a candidate. Men who have advocated and believed in republican principles in the past, and have held aloof from their party friends for one reason or another, are inclined to keep step with the party if by so doing they do not minister to the selfishness of "cliques" or "rings." We believe the candidate for the emergency to be Judge Charles Doe, and the statements industriously circulated, that he does not desire the nomination and couldn't be "managed" after an election, we regard as just so many commendations. We want our best and ablest men in Congress, and we want votes. Judge Doe would make his mark there and the people would be content that his duty would be well done. There are other good men to choose from, and we hear that Hon. E. A. Rollins, Hon. Gilman Marston, Hon. James W. Emery and Hon. John J. Morrill will have friends in the convention. We hope that the delegates will be untrammeled and that their action will be endorsed by every voter who believes that the living principles of the republican party are worth maintaining.

News and Notes.

The New York papers make gloomy predictions for the poor during the coming winter, anticipating that it is certain to be one of much greater hardship and destitution than was the last. It is estimated that the actual number out of work can not be less than 50,000 or 60,000. The general dullness in trade and the stagnation of building interests, in which 15,000 skilled artisans are interested, to say nothing of the day laborers who depend upon it for bread, are marked features of the hour.

The strike of the longshoremen in New York and vicinity has proved a virtual failure.

Slavery is abolished in New Guinea.

The sale of the Philadelphia Press to Col. McClure has fallen through, as Col. Forney has telegraphed from London his refusal to sell.

A convention of the colored men favorable to removing their race from Alabama met in Montgomery on the 2d. Philip Joseph of Mobile was elected chairman. Twenty counties in the cotton belt were represented. Able speeches presenting the deplorable condition of the colored people of Alabama were made and various committees were appointed. An address, which is a direct appeal to the hearts of the northern people was prepared. The feeling in favor of leaving Alabama is unanimous.

Rev. Mr. Glendenning was acquitted by the Jersey City presbytery of the charges against him.

At the election in Hudson, New York, last month, the democrats had more than 300 majority. At the city election on the 1st inst., Hon. James M. Townsend, republican, was chosen Mayor by 200 majority.

Governor Chamberlain of South Carolina on taking the oath of office indicated his desire to reform the State government. Governor Moses' last official act was the pardon of twenty convicts.

The Oswego Times says that if "the gentlemen prominent in the 'liberal' movement ever have any 'pensive moments,' it might be of value to the coming generation of politicians if they would state to the public just how much they have benefited themselves by their operations during the past three years."

The Sacramento Union expresses the belief that at $10 per ton and ten tons per acre, grapes are probably the most profitable crop that can be cultivated in California. Mr. Nickeson of Lincoln, Placer county, this year sold his crop of 2000 tons, raised on 200 acres, for $10 per ton, the buyer to pick and deliver the crop. This is at the rate of $100 per acre, and it required less labor and expense to produce the 200 acres of grapes, than it would to plant, harvest and deliver 200 acres of wheat. The wheat in San Francisco would, at twenty bushels per acre, be worth at the outside $18. The grapes are worth nearly six times as much, at the low price of half a cent per pound, which is as low as the most ordinary vegetables. Grapes food on the poorest soils—where potatoes, onions, corn, beans, or even black-eyed peas would not come to anything.

The New York Republic improves daily and we can recommend it to republicans as an able advocate of their principles. Its news matter is placed before the public in readable style and its editorials have the right ring.

Charles E. Blanchard was killed by a bursting mill-stone at Alpena, Mich.

Five thousand dollars was paid to Bishop Alemany for performing the marriage ceremony of Miss Sharon.

James Kelly and George Orem, of Baltimore, fought over ten cents. Kelly broke Orem's skull. Orem bit Kelly's ear off.

State News.

The prohibition State convention was a small affair. Nathaniel White, Esq., of Concord, was nominated for Governor, receiving 71 of the 90 votes. David Heald of Milford was nominated for Railroad Commissioner. For Congressmen, Rev. A. C. Hardy of Portsmouth, J. M. Fletcher of Nashua, and Edward H. Weston of Whitefield were nominated. Mr. Hardy, it will be remembered, ran as a candidate for Congress, two years ago, in the third district, and succeeded in defeating Gen. Simon G. Griffin, the republican candidate. Last March, he was the temperance candidate for Senator in this district, but did not succeed in defeating Hon. J. F. Hall, republican. The Portland Press styles the convention a "democratic side-show."

Scarlet fever and whooping cough are prevalent in several of the Manchester city schools.

The selectmen of each town and ward in the State are required to revise the list of jurors during the month of December.

Loss of a Cable Steamer.

The steamer La Plata, from Gravesend for Rio Grande del Sud, chartered by the Siemens Brothers to repair the telegraph cable, foundered off Ushant on the 29th of November, and sixty persons were drowned. Fourteen survivors were rescued by the Gareloch of Glasgow from a boat in which they had been floating twenty-three hours, and were transferred to the steamer Autenor, which arrived in the Thames on the 1st. The loss of the steamer is attributed to the shifting of the heavy grappling apparatus. Of 250 miles of telegraph cable on board, 150 had been paid out, which had to be abandoned. Unavailing attempts were made to save the vessel by lightening. The captain, surgeon and three other officers, the engineer, seven stewards and cooks, eleven stokers, fourteen seamen and the whole of the cable staff, numbering sixteen, and including Mr. Ricketts, the chief electrician, were drowned. The chief steward, who was saved, reports that the fires were all out by ten o'clock on the morning of the 29th. A heavy sea carried away two of the boats. The ship gradually settled by the stern, and at 10:30 foundered, stern first. The captain and doctor were on the bridge, having failed to clear the patent life rafts, and went down with the crew. The decks burst as the steamer sank.

—A remarkable occurrence is reported at Niagara Falls. A gentleman from Rochester was driving about there recently, and while on Goat Island, nearly opposite the place where the painter fell off from the bridge last summer, he noticed that large rocks in the bed of the river were entirely dry between the bridge and the first of the Sister Islands, where the water usually rushes on two feet in depth. The Rochesterian proposed to walk across the island, but the driver objected, and then decided to try the feat himself, which he did without wetting the soles of his boots. This was never accomplished before, and two days afterward several feet of hurrying water covered the spot. It is supposed that a strong northeast wind which had prevailed for several days set the waters back—forced them up the lake. The Rochester gentleman only regrets that he did not cross himself, that he might have had it to boast of to his acquaintances.

—"How much is your stick candy?" inquired a boy of a candy dealer. "Six sticks for five cents." "Six sticks for five cents, eh? Now, lem'me see. Six sticks for five cents, five for four cents, four for three cents, three for two cents, two for one cent, one for nothin'. I'll take one." And he walked out, leaving the candy man in a state of bewilderment.

—Many a man makes his home happy by staying away from it.

A POLITICAL, LITERARY, AND GENERAL NEWSPAPER.

DEVOTED TO REFORM IN MUNICIPAL, STATE, AND GENERAL GOVERNMENT

ESTABLISHED 1851.

POSTAGE FREE FOR 1875.

As a family paper, THE TIMES has always borne a very high reputation throughout the United States. It is free from all objectionable advertisements and reports, and may be safely admitted to every domestic circle. The disgraceful announcements of quacks and medical pretenders, which pollute so many newspapers of the day, are not admitted into the columns of THE TIMES on any terms.

As a political journal, THE TIMES will be devoted, as in the past, to a discriminating support of the Republican Party, while it reserves the right of expressing independent opinions upon the measures or policy of any Administration, or upon the course of any leaders. It belongs to no faction or clique within a party, and has never entered into any relations which were likely to imperil its perfect freedom. Its course is that of independence within the Republican Party, for in that way can the interests of the people be most efficiently served.

Started in September, 1851, THE TIMES has ever since been recognized as among the most successful, popular, and influential newspapers in the country. Two of its original proprietors still direct its policy, and, with greatly increased resources and experience, will spare no pains to extend and strengthen its claims upon the confidence and support of that public which it has endeavored faithfully to serve for upward of three and twenty years.

Its editorial columns will be conducted in a spirit of fairness and impartiality, free alike from self-interested aims, political jobbery, or undue favoritism. It will represent the great body of the people, rather than any clique. On all subjects it will maintain an attitude of perfect independence. Its correspondence will be full and timely, and directed with special reference to the publication of the truth on all questions, and from all parts. Its reports will be prepared with the utmost care. The literary department will be in thoroughly capable hands, and will present a full review of the literature, the fine arts, the music, and the drama of the day. The scientific add educational reports and articles are specially prepared by some of the ablest men in the country.

The Sunday edition of THE TIMES includes, in addition to all the news, selected and original literary matter of the most varied and agreeable character. Special arrangements have been made to impart new attractions to this feature of the paper. Among the contributors of original stories or articles to this paper are Bret Harte, J. W. De Forrest, Thomas Hardy, Dutton Cook, William Black, and negotiations are being carried out with many other distinguished authors.

Notices of the Press.

The Bazar is edited with a contribution of tact and talent that we seldom find in any journal; and the journal itself is the organ of the great world of fashion.—Boston Traveller.

The Bazar commends itself to every member of the household:—to the children by droll and pretty pictures, to the young ladies by its fashion plates in endless variety, to the provident matron by its patterns for the children's clothes, to paterfamilias by its tasteful designs for embroidered slippers and luxurious dressing-gowns. Still, the reading matter of the Bazar is uniformly of great excellence. The paper has acquired a wide popularity for the fireside enjoyment it affords.—N. Y. Evening Post.

"MEDICAL WONDER"

Prepared by Dr. O. C. Gage, Saratoga, New York.
Geo. C. Goodwin & Co., Wholesale Agents, Boston.

To The Afflicted.

In presenting this valuable remedy to the public, I would say that the almost unlimited and wholly unprecedented success it meets with, stamps it at once as the GREATEST DISCOVERY OF THE AGE. On its merits I am willing to stake my reputation as a physician; and so confident am I that it will not disappoint the most sanguine expectations of a single invalid, that I am prepared to make contracts on the basis of CURE OR NO PAY, with those who have tried other medicines without relief until they have become too faithless to make another attempt. To substantiate what I claim for this Wonderful Vegetable Remedy, I do not propose to import far-fetched testimonials, but will simply refer to well-known, reliable living witnesses in your own State.

The afflicted's obedient servant,
DR. O. C. GAGE, Saratoga, N. Y.

Home Testimony.

MRS. IRA S. APPLETON, Hillsboro' Bridge, N. H.; spinal and kidney diseases, confined to bed, and doctors failed to raise her; her husband procured "Medical Wonder," and she now writes, "I am able to do considerable work."

J. E. MORRILL Franklin; scrofulous humor, says nothing has ever helped him like "Medical Wonder."

MRS. C. D. ORDWAY, Centre St., Concord; confined to bed, and had been treated without benefit by several physicians, for female and kidney diseases; took Dr. Gage's "Medical Wonder," and was cured in a month.

ANDREW J. PEASLEE, Sutton, N. H.; humor, debility, disease of liver, lungs, &c.; most wonderful recovery.

REV. O. J. WAIT, Franklin, N. H.; very severely afflicted; took "Medical Wonder" with great success.

GEO. W. EVANS, Derry; difficulty of side and stomach, humor, weakness, &c., cured, and went to work.

MRS. J. W. FYFE, Suncook, N. H.; female weakness, dropsy, nervous prostration, &c.; discharged hired girl.

Local Matters.

Laconics.

The Universalist Fair opened successfully Thursday, and will continue this evening. Refreshments and fancy articles are for sale.

All the grangers in Portsmouth propose to jointly celebrate the anniversary of the establishment of the national grange.

Twenty-five hundred counterfeit tickets over the Boston & Maine Railroad are said to have been taken, and consequently the Eastern Railroad has refused to take the tickets, which have been selling at a discount.

The far-famed favorites, the Hutchinson Family, are to give a sacred concert at the Temple next Sunday evening, of selections suited to the occasion.

The saddest of all jokes was the marriage of a Portsmouth citizen, last week, by a Newburyport clergyman, and the discovery some forty-eight hours afterward that the marriage was illegal, necessitating a remarriage by a Portsmouth preacher.

The blunderer of the Times, not contented with his "idle ship" statement, refers to "Warren Dow of Hampton," and transfers the associated press correspondent to a clerkship "under the navy department." What next, Gup?

Schooner Emily S., Capt. Geo. Kingston, of St. Johns, N. B., ran ashore on the "Nubble," Cape Neddick, in the storm on Tuesday night. She was loaded with shingles, bound to Providence R. I. Vessel and cargo will be a total loss.

Reappearance of the S. H. B.

Ladd street was the scene of brawl and tumult on Wednesday evening, attendant upon the efforts of a charivari party, which assembled there to offer their capacious throats as canals for the passage of distilled and fermented liquids as a bribe for the cessation of discordant sounds which hailed the fifth setting of the god of day on the marital slumbers of Thos. Edward. The crowd were bought off with the "native beverage" that a South Sea or White Islander looks upon with so much contumely, the happy host appearing with hat and lamp in hand to conduct them to Mahoney's ranch on Penhallow street. This sufficed to silence the thirsty bugle blowers, and on Thursday night Thomas retired with the conviction that his trials were o'er. But there was another organization needing stimulants, and again the astonished heavens echoed back a constantly increasing din which sent every cat in the neighborhood adrift and startled the ears of remote Kitterians. 'Twas the Spring Hill Band, revised and rejuvenated, playing such strains of music as would lift the scalp of any gentle Hottentot who dare fold back his ears to attain a sufficient degree of receptivity to absorb the accents so extenuatingly evolved. Peace dawned to the bridegroom's troubled soul only on a repetition of the previous evening's experience.

Girls and Hats.

"Any color so it's red," is what the girls say when they drive into a millinery mill to select trimming for their hats. And such hats! Nobby, do you say? Well, they are. The brim turned down on one side, regular slouch, and turned up on the other and pinned fast, just like one of the "b'hoys what runs wid der masheen, my name's Mose; Sykesy, git out of dem hose, will ye?" Black or stone-colored hats and the everlasting scarlet rose on one side. A saucy, black-eyed girl sailing up street with such head gear looks piratical, and even the mild looking girls gain (?) a pert "get out of the way, the engine's coming" sort of a threatening appearance as they pass along with their latest styles. And it's getting worse and more of it, all the time. Why, sometimes you see a plain, black hat, a foot high, with rim enough to make a door-mat flapping on one side, and enough more strapped up with guy lines and hog chains on the other side to make a pair of slippers for a Chicago girl (it takes two yards and a quarter, full) and two large sunflowers, dyed crimson, nailed on the starboard quarter. It is a common sight now, on our fashionable thoroughfares, to see timid young men crowding around a policeman for protection, as one of these fearfully fashionable females bears down toward them. It strikes terror to the stoutest heart. What good will the democratic victory do if these things shall be, "and overcome us like a summer cloud?" If this thing keeps on the girls will soon be carrying navy revolvers and wearing "narrow broadswords." They want to look terrific. Let the papers ring out their thunderous edict for every girl to repair at once to her "respectful abode" and make that hat over, so it will look more like the becoming apparel of a civilized creature, and less like the war dress of an Amazon or the court costume of a Cannibal Island belle, dressed for a banquet or roast missionary. Go to. They won't do it. Allah is good.

P or Not.

[Philadelphia Press.]

Six months before the belching of the guns of Sumpter any one would have been deemed a fool who predicted absolute war.

[Louisville Courier Journal.]

This may be all true enough; but the war is all over now, and why do you seek to renew the bitterness of sectional hate by spelling Sumter with a p?

[Detroit Tribune.]

Because, sir, the people of the South persist in spenking of "the man who beat Butler" as Thompson with a p. They will yet find that there are blows to be taken as well as given in this contest, and that the heaviest blower wins the fight. Yea, indeed!

[Boston Adv.]

This style of argument is P Q liar. But as long as this is a land of liberty, we shall insist upon the right of every man to be tried by his P-ers. Let us have P's.

—Josh Billings thus discourseth of "Biled Cabbage:" Biled kaggage iz one uv the annuals; they are kreated out ov the earth and hav a bed on them that no man could put there. They gro az kareless and proudly luxuriant az a sunflower, and when they are ripe are worth 10 cents apiece bi the aker. They are eaten both raw and cooked, and menny people think they are a better vegetable than the klam or the mud-turtle. I hav my doubts about this, but don't intend to quarrel about it for I hav found out by trieing it, that in matters ov no consequents it waz a good deal more profitable to let a man think az he waz a mind to. Biled kabbage and biled pork are grate friends, and are often found together side bi side. Kold slaw and sour krout iz made out ov biled kabbage, and for fragranse thare aint nothing, unless it is spilte, that will travel around a narbor-hood further and faster than a haff barrel of sour krout. Yu kan recognize it for 2 miles off in a still day. For dinner call for a konnekticut sassage, one that is about five inches and a haff from end to end, and about one inch thru the center; add to it a good-sized piece ov hed, and skim cheeze, hav 3 pints ov khy coffy reddy, well sweetened and lukewarm, take in yure left hand a raw turnip, and with yure right plunge a three-tined fork up to the hilt into a red hot hed ov biled kabbage, and when yu hav kleaned them all out, rize up and go down to sum honest undertaker and make a bargain with him to take care ov yu bi the job.

—A more pathetic picture has seldom been offered to the sympathetic gaze than that which was presented Thanksgiving afternoon by four small boys belonging to a pious Connecticut deacon. In company with their venerable father they had assembled in their accustomed place of worship on Thanksgiving morning, having previously laid aside their customary "mumble-the-peg" and "two-old-cat," in accordance with the President's proclamation. Hours afterward, late in the afternoon, a casual passer-by discovered four sad looking boys in an uncomfortable state of soap and clean collar seated on the deacon's front door step with gloom upon their abnormally clean faces and hymn books in their hands. To them the cheerful spectator remarked: "Boys, why don't you have a game of ball?" and was met with the reply, "Cause it's Sunday." The morning church service had convinced those miserable boys that an unusually premature Sunday had arrived, and, as in the compulsatory habit of the young of the Connecticut deacon, they had wasted the whole of the afternoon in a sorrowful attempt to "keep it holy." When convinced of their mistake they burst into tears over their unnecessary piety, and with loud references to the process by which damaged stockings are repaired bewailed their inability to redeem the misspent hours of a purely secular day.

—Josh Billings says that in the beds of many hotels "yu sleep sum, but role over a good deal."

—The hog in dispute was worth $6. The Court costs amounted to $250. Terre Haute, Ind., lawyers got the money.

—You may brag as you please of the red, red rose. But redder, by far, is an Omaha nose.

—Burglars are generally great cowards, and every little yellow dog is a terrier to evil doers.

—If we are loved by those around us, we can bear the hostility of all the rest of the world.

—There will be another total eclipse of the moon in eighteen years.

—It is believed that gas from coal is promotive of lung troubles.

—The ties that connect business men with the public—Advertise.

—Standing on the dentist's door-step will often cure toothache.

—The best charity is to give work.

—Counterfeit nickels are round.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

— THE —

Art Journal of America.

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chrome, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artist in illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the artistic conception, treatment or details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure, and animal subjects, contains as much of the unlimited beauty of nature as is possible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The liberal force of THE ALDINE in all and graceful accompaniment, worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves a good dog; the picture is executed so true to life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own unfortunate dead dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 500 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,000, are distributed as soon as the series is filled, and the works of each series so made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union,

SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.

(No charge for postage.)

Specimen copies of THE ALDINE, 50 cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON, President.

Pulmocine Cordial.
Pulmocine Cordial.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation, by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such case s. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, etc.,

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

Good Advice.

The Boston Globe has a most sensible editorial on "The First Campaign of 1875," which contains the best of advice to the republicans of New Hampshire. Says the Globe:

The prohibitionists are an embarrassing and a mischief-making element, and the experience of Massachusetts ought to be sufficient to teach every right-minded and sensible person to keep clear of it as a political organization. It hinders the cause to which it professes to be devoted, and brings disaster upon the only party from which there is any hope of practical measures for the promotion of temperance. If the voters of New Hampshire appreciate the high responsibilities which rest upon them, the prohibitory candidates for the State offices, and the ninety men who nominated them, will be all that can be shown of the party on the second Tuesday of March. * * * * *

If now the republicans will have no dallying with prohibition, or dividing issues of local and temporary consequence, but will take the highest and broadest ground upon matters affecting the interests and welfare of the whole nation, speak in unmistakable tones with regard to all paltering with the national credit, the national currency and all looseness or dishonesty in administration, and put forward their ablest and best men, they can regain the confidence of the people and assume once more the control of the State, thus sending to their friends in other parts of the country, the cheering influence of victory in the first onset.

There has been something said of a hope on the part of the prohibitionists that the republicans would take up their candidates. Surely there is no chance of such madness. The speeches at the meeting of the State Central Committee, the other evening, gave no occasion to fear any such ridiculous course. If the republicans will go on as republicans, standing on the principles of the party, and taking high and advanced grounds on the issues of the day, and let prohibitionists severely alone, they will come out all right. Let the faction which is ready to sink every other consideration for the sake of carrying one point of questionable expediency, do its worst; parleying with it is mischievous, ignoring its petty purposes will make it comparatively powerless. Meantime it should not be forgotten that temperance reform is a great work to be promoted as far as possible by judicious legislation, and that for that promotion it should be able to depend on the good sense and the high regard for public morality, which is still, we trust, among the leading characteristics of the republican party.

News and Notes.

Old fashioned furniture is all the rage in Boston.

There are people green enough to suggest that the republican party be hitched to the prohibocrat kite; but neither victory nor self-respect lie in that direction. Even should thrift follow such fawning there can be no excuse for such conduct.

The Rochester Courier isn't far from the truth in saying "as a usual thing those who grumble most in regard to their reduced wages are the very ones whose labor is worth least."

Attend the caucuses, select the best men as delegates to the conventions, nominate the strongest men, stand by them when nominated, and vote for them at the election, is the demand of the Concord Monitor upon the republican masses.

Samuel Henry, late a colored resident of Salisbury, Md., is an ungrateful repotate, and does by no means appreciate the goods which the gods provide. For when Mrs. Sam. Henry lately presented to him not twins, not triplets, but, as we may say, quadrants—four smiling sable pledges, only to be described by that noun of multitude, cherubim—did Sam. Henry show any gratitude for this distinguished boon? None to speak of, we mourn to say. His only remark was: "I ain't gwine to live in dis he h Salisbury no longer!"

The janitor of an Indianapolis medical college was deeply affected on recognizing his brother-in-law on the dissecting table. His grief was the more poignant from the fact that he had himself carried the stolen corpse up three flights of stairs!

Tweed's first move to escape further penalty for his crimes was quashed by Judge Barrett.

Schooner Sanderson is ashore on Lake Michigan, and all hands lost.

Booth's theatre, in New York, is sold to Oliver Ames 2d, one of the heirs of the Oakes Ames estate.

James R. Gilmore, better known by his magazine name of Edmund Kirke, having wooed and won the widow of a rich Newark merchant named Burnett, withdrew from literature some years since and devoted himself to the ownership and management of real estate; a business which another brilliant literary man, the poet Willis, used to say he would like to have been born to; evidently meaning, in his simplicity, that it was not a very arduous avocation. Poor rich Mr Gilmore found it too much for him, however, as many others have. Whether drink led him into bad ventures, or bad ventures into drink, is not known, but both together led him into obtaining money on heavily mortgaged land under the pretence that it was unincumbered, and for a series of swindling acts of this kind he is now probably to end his days in prison.

The Dover Enquirer intimates that Josh Foster prefers to "live a coward rather than die a hero." Do you allow such language as those, Joshua?

Mr. Dawes got excused from service on an important committee in Congress, on the plea that he wanted to go home and assist in the trial of the cause of "a poor young man," who had sued a railroad for injuries that had disabled him for life. It turns out that Dawes charged the "poor young man" $1050 for his aid. A pretty big fee for a decrepit youth to pay a man who was drawing $7500 a year.

On Saturday afternoon a young lad named Dole was riding on the front of a tip-cart at Amesbury, when a number of boys got in at the hind end of the cart. The pin which held the forward end came out and dumped out the boys at the rear, throwing up young Dole, whose weight brought down the part where he was sitting when the other end was relieved of its load. As the front came down a large piece of flesh was pinched from his thigh.

The new Globe Theatre in Boston, was opened on Thursday evening, with great eclat.

A baby only a year old was recently sent by express from Lisbon to Concord, duly labeled and propped up in a big chair, with a turkey and another express package before it, to prevent its falling out, and it evidently suffered greatly from its uncomfortable situation.

The Burial of the Democratic Party.

[Cincinnati Commercial.]

The Enquirer is calling us pet names, in its own natural and fond way, inspired apparently by the tender recollections, which we have recently revived, of the trying times when we toiled with it, side by side, to shovel the clods of the Valley of the Shadow of Death upon the postrate form of the democratic party. That was a time of deep convictions and much solemnity. It had been a prolific season for great principles, and the results were somewhat diversified. Grant was re-elected, Greeley was sick, Boston was in flames, and the horses had the epizootic. There was a mighty meeting one Saturday night at Mozart Hall, in which liberal principles flowed largely into the Sunday papers, and it might have been said of each of the eloquent orators:

"Like some vast river of unfailing source,
Rapid, exhaustless, deep his numbers flowed."

If ever there was a time to start a new party, and do it brilliantly, that was the time. The Enquirer saw it, and was filled with enthusiasm. We saw it, and our sagacity reached up and out through the vast future. Senator Thurman did not see it. Unlike Beecher's grasshopper, he wanted, as a great American statesman and senator, before he jumped to see where he was to alight. The Enquirer declared in its largest headlines that the new party had been "Born in Earnestness, Baptized in Hope, and Christened Liberal," and that "the party of the future is to be the liberal party." Thurman was admonished that he must not go back to first principles, or if he did, that he must prepare to confront the opposition of the Enquirer. We warned him that his only chance was to be guarded by us, and by Hassaurek and Thew Wright, and other friends of freedom. He would go to Columbus, however, when we wanted him elsewhere, and he did those things he ought not to have done, and said those things he ought not to have said, for we are all poor, frail, wicked creatures: and the Cincinnati Enquirer rebuked him, and the Cincinnati Commercial rebuked him, and Thew Wright rebuked him, and Hassaurek rebuked him, and we all rebuked him. The truth of the situation was, we had conveyed the democratic party to the graveyard, and the grave digging had been done. The Enquirer had the putrid reminiscence, so to speak, by the ears, and we had it by the heels, and in spite of the known relationship existing between the damp body and John Barleycorn, we were determined to heap free soil upon its head. Pendleton, Ewing and the rest stood back, and we would have buried the blarsted thing sure enough if it had not been for the incorrigible Thurman. He not only blocked the way, but took the corpse out of the coffin and gave it corn whiskey and other restoratives. He is the truly responsible man for the unhappy resurrection that followed. He said in his metaphorical way that if the democratic drum was beaten the boys would rally—and (the Lord forgive him for being a prophet!) so they did. The Enquirer before they rallied gave him up to his own devices, said he talked too much, and that 'if he thought it would be profitable to revive war issues, he could go ahead and try his fortune. The Commercial also yielded him up as a political ghost, and sorrowed over his failure to liberalize and "materialize," and mentioned that he talked too much between his nose and chin, and would deservedly be beaten out of sight in the race for the senate; whereas, if he had placed himself in the plastic hands of the managing liberals, he might have been handsomely re-elected. But we could not do anything with him. The joint efforts of the Enquirer and Commercial were wholly ineffectual. He would run headlong his own way, regardless of the warnings and entreaties and good advice of the Commercial, and the dread that the Enquirer would antagonize him—and now see what has happened! It is bad and also sad, and a pity, too.

—It was a Western burglar, and he was engaged in robbing the palatial mansion of one of the leading citizens of Sheboygan. He had entered through the kitchen window, and depending upon the lights afforded by an excellent moon, was unprovided with a dark lantern. Before proceeding to the collection of personal property he penetrated to the kitchen closet with a view to cold ham. Just as he discovered that favorite article of Western diet, and was about to revel in it, he heard footsteps. In his haste to conceal himself he jumped into a barrel which stood in the corner, and as the daughter of the house-owner, who was hungry in consequence of a protracted call from a lover, entered the closet in quest of ham, he crouched down and plunged his head out of sight under the pickles that floated on the surface. Days came and went, and a week afterward the barrel was accidentally discovered to contain a pickled burglar. There is a moral to this pathetic tale. That barrel has vanished from the knowledge of the people of Sheboygan, and the records of the local freight office show that a barrel labeled "pickles" has been shipped to New York.

—Just out of New York city dwells a thrifty couple whose great love is for pork. A pig is raised yearly. Many children would be glad of the attention paid to the inmate of the pen. The man and wife took a journey, and were gone three days. On the way home—fifteen miles away—the couple saw at the fork of the roads a small pig that had a wonderfully familiar look. The animal stood waiting for the wagon, facing the comers. The pig made a grunt of recognition and made a dash for the horse. He soon got entangled in the running gear and brought things to a standstill. Satisfied that the young porker was his own, the man lifted him into the wagon. The pig cuddled down and went to sleep, and lay stiller than a child. He woke up as the wagon neared the house, leaped out, and ran for his pen. It turned out that he had been stolen and carried twenty miles into the country. He made his escape and was homeward bound when he spied his old friends and got a lift into the wagon.

—He lived in Georgia. At the weekly prayer meeting he was leading. As he knelt his pistol dropped from his pocket, exploded, and a Mr. Pepper was shot. As they carried out Mr. P. he smiled sadly, and looking imploringly up into the eyes of those who were carrying him said, gently: "Take care, boys, don't let me drop. Some one else might be shot."

—Burlington Hawkeye: When the duchess of Edinburgh wants to talk nicey-nicey to her boy baby all she has to say is, "And was it its own muzzy's blessed little Albert Alexander Allred Ernest William?" And then that overburdened infant goes into convulsions that would twist the back bone right out of a plebeian baby.

—A gentleman who has watched the weather forty years says that when the first snow is followed by rain, such is the case with every snow storm of the winter. This he claims is not theory, but is knowledge gained by actual observation by himself for the last forty years, and by his father for thirty years previous.

—Detroit Free Press: We never get excited in reading of the mysterious disappearance of "a handsome young lady about eighteen years old." They are generally heard from in about a week, asking the old man if he will forgive and forget, and if they may bring Charles Henry home?

—Seventeen Chinamen were arrested in a gambling saloon in San Francisco and the capital of the concern and that of the seventeen included amounted to the magnificent sum of $1.85. It only cost ten cents a chance to try one's luck in this establishment.

—A Chinese constructor, convicted of swindling by making false estimates in repairing the imperial summer palace, has been sentenced to decapitation. American government employes will please take warning accordingly.

—In Milwaukee they have experience, and they say that when Olive Logan acted people wished she would lecture; when she lectured they wished she would act.

—Were a man but to think of it, the responsibility of not acting is sometimes infinitely greater than that of the most rash act.

—The tread of the tumble-bug and the pattering feet of the jolly cockroach is diminishing at the approach of cool weather.

—"Willie, I'm going to heaven," she wrote, "and you will never see me again," —which was pretty heavy on Willie.

A Thousand Bankruptcies

Would not create as great a panic in commerce as the withdrawal of HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR from the market, would create among the sick. The reason is obvious. Tens of thousands of both sexes would be bankrupted in health by such an event. The famous specific is effecting such cures in cases of chronic cough and cold, influenza, bronchitis, bleeding from the lungs and apparent consumption, as have never heretofore been accomplished within the memory of man.

PIKE'S TOOTH-ACHE DROPS—Cure in one minute.

Rational Medication.

Medication is only successful when it is rational, and it is rational only when it begins at the beginning. In other words, to cure a malady, its cause must be removed. Weakness, either general or local, is the origin of the great majority of diseases. Reinforce the vital energies, regulate digestion and secretion by strengthening the organs which perform those all-important functions, and dyspepsia, constipation, kidney and bladder complaints, uterine difficulties, impure circulation, and the thousand and one ailments which are the consequences of debility, are completely, and in most cases permanent-removed. The best, safest and most agreeable tonic and alterative that can be employed for this purpose is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The experience of twenty-five years, during which time it has outlived perhaps ten times that number of ephemeral preparations which have entered into competition wit it, has proved it to be unequalled as a remedy for all disorders accompanied by or proceeding from weakness.

The Green Grass Grows in the meadow, go spread over it a thin layer of Bearine, and the tiny blades will shoot upwards, and grow far more luxuriantly than before. Try the same experiment upon your hair and the effect is still more marked; the hair grows vigorous and seems to find in Bearine all the ingredients to support its life. 10

Laconics.

We were in error in stating that Rev. A. C. Hardy defeated Gen. Griffin in the third Congressional district in 1873. The official vote gave Parker, democrat, a majority over Griffin and Hardy of 262, so that had Gen. Griffin received all the temperance votes he would still have been defeated.

Elder E. A. Stockman will preach tomorrow in the Advent chapel on Hanover street. The public are cordially invited.

In Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Thursday evening, the petition of the Portsmouth Band (drum corps) for the use of the Elm street ward room was granted until otherwise ordered. The Mayor was authorized to have a drain laid in the court-house yard.

The fourth annual ball of Kearsarge Engine Co. No. 3 will be given New Year's Eve. No pains will be spared to make this the best of the season.

A republican friend who has the best interests of the party at heart, and who has been honored with its suffrages frequently, suggests that the ward committees make calls for caucuses broad enough to include all who have generally voted the republican ticket and are desirous of joining their old associates in a combined effort to dislodge the democratic party from power. Also, that two ballot boxes be used at the caucuses, one for the votes for delegates and one in which each voter may deposit a ballot indicating his first choice for Governor and Congressman. He thinks that such a direct expression of the wishes of the people will tend to bring out a larger vote for the nominees on election day.

Rev. L. L. Harmon's Free Will friends recently surprised him by an evening call, leaving behind a roll of bank bill and heaps of "goodies."

Collector Howard telegraphed the British consul at Boston, Thursday, for help for the crew of the Emily S., and received an answer, Friday, asking that they be sent to Boston. During the day, the schooner was towed into York harbor.

The large amount of improvements being made in Portsmouth attracts general attention, adding to the natural beauties of the city. A large number of houses of the most modern style were put up the past year, numbering sixty, it is said. Recently, a number of lots at Lincoln Hill have been sold to parties intending to erect buildings next Spring. The wharf privileges have been extended and improved. The Sheafe wharf is being repaired by Hon. Frank Jones, and the Shoals steamer will land there next year, a decided advantage to the public over the former arrangement. William F. Fernald, Esq., is building a large ship at the Raynes yard, and will launch it in a few days. Hon. Daniel Marcy is also building one which is to be launched in the Spring.

About 150 men are employed at the navy yard.

An old statute of the State provides that when two persons are married by a clergyman from another State and they consider themselves married, the ceremony is legalized, but the person marrying them is liable to indictment and a fine of $300, half of which goes to the complainant.

The removal of the five trees from its front lets daylight into the Franklin House.

The next entertainment in the lyceum course will be presented by Miss Kate Reignolds on Tuesday evening, when she will give dramatic readings in which she is superior, as all who have listened to her know.

Some more summer?

The commander of the Independent Battalion, Major Edwin A. Tilton, has been notified by Adjutant-General Edgerly that he will accept that organization as a part of the State Militia.

There are but few men or women who are not familiar with the name of the Hutchinson Family and who do not couple with their name the remembrances of the sweetest vocal melodies ever heard in concert halls. Mr. Joshua Hutchinson, one of the famous singers, has prepared and published in pamphlet form, a narrative of the family. They sang last night at Kittery, will sing at the Temple to-morrow evening, and at Hampton on Monday evening.

The horse formerly ridden by the late Rev. Dr. Burroughs recently died at the advanced age of thirty years, and has been buried in the field next the Universalist church on the borders of the pond. A neat fence, ten feet square, encloses the last resting place of the faithful animal.

A Wreck off the Harbor.

The schooner Broadfield, Captain Britt, of and from St. Andrews, N. B., for Boston, laden with 3000 bushels turnips and 800 sleepers on deck, during a southeast snow storm on the 23d ultimo, while trying to make Portsmouth harbor, mistook a light in a house on shore for that of the Whale's Back Light and struck a rock, damaging her rudder. Subsequently she drifted off and was anchored. Captain Britt then attempted to secure the rudder, but the sheet of the mainboom, in swinging from side to side, struck him and threw him overboard. The sea was very rough, the night dark, and the weather very cold. He was not missed by the crew, and his cries of help were not heard, but being an expert swimmer and a powerful man, he struck out for the schooner. He reached the boat, which happened to be secured astern by a line, and hauling her up to the schooner, climbed to the deck. Shortly afterward the chains parted, and all hands, six in number, took to the boat, and were saved; but the vessel was dashed in pieces on the rocks and her cargo scattered far and near, hardly a vestige of either vessel or cargo being saved. The crew landed about 7 o'clock, A. M., amid a severe snow-storm, wet through, and almost exhausted; but were kindly entained by a farmer, in whose house they obtained shelter.

The Coming of Barnabee.

We could think of no known reason in the world why Henry C. Barnabee should neglect his native city in his annual tour of music and mirth, and now that everybody is anxious to listen to the newly written operetta entitled "Sir Marmaduke, or Too Attentive by Half," which Morton, Woolf and Eichberg have been putting together for Barnabee's sole use, his old friends and admirers will learn with pleasure that he is coming—not once only, but twice; first, on the 4th of January with the celebrated concert company, consisting of his very necessary self, Mrs. H. M. Smith, Miss A. R. Clark, Mr. Wm. J. Winch and Miss Persis Bell. From past experience our citizens know what to expect from the talented quartet and the lady violinist. Then he is booked with his musical comedy in operetta, "Sir Marmaduke," for February 1st, in being its first presentation on any stage. Mr. Barnabee's engagements have prevented an appearance at an earlier date, its constant rehearsal being necessary to render its committal to memory perfect. Mr. Barnabee, Mr. Winch, Mrs. Smith, Miss Alice Carle and Mr. H. M. Dow compose the company, and we hazard the prediction that there will be such a gathering at the Temple as will delight the genial manager and help inflate his treasury. A warm welcome awaits him for the compliment he so modestly tenders "the old folks at home" in first inviting their criticism to his new operetta. Tickets will be sold in advance, and each person purchasing tickets to both entertainments will be given a photograph, cabinet size, which retails at fifty cents.

Dover.

The Enquirer says; The result of the city election in the votes given for ward officers shows what the republicans can do when thoroughly united and earnest in support of their candidate. Although in Ward 4 three-fifths of the republican voters did not go near the polls, looking perhaps upon the contest in that ward as hopeless, and although nearly one hundred republicans in Ward 3 were absent, and half as many in Wards 1 and 2, yet the republican ticket received an average plurality on all the officers except Mayor of 188, and a majority over all of 123. This was in spite of a full democratic vote, which could not possibly have been much increased. The republican plurality on Mayor is 62, against 50 last year. The full vote for Mayor this year is, Hodsdon 815, Tash 753, Abbott 67, or 1635 in all, the largest ever thrown at a city election. The largest vote for Mayor prior to this was in 1856, when Andrew Peirce was elected, receiving 749 votes to 725 for Thomas E. Sawyer.

The average vote on the ward tickets at the city election last week stood:

	Rep.	Dem.	Pro.
Ward 1	136	78	12
Ward 2	320	364	22
Ward 3	377	155	31
Ward 4	31	79
	864	676	65

"DOUBLESS THE BEST COUGH MEDICINE IN THE WORLD."

[From one of the Oldest and very best Houses in America.]

MESSRS. CUTLER BROS. & Co.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, March 13, 1872.

Please send us TEN gross small and FIVE gross large "Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam." This is doubtless the best Cough Medicine in the World.

[Signed] ALLEN & CO.

P. S. These parties have sold this Balsam for over thirty years.

[From one of Boston's most estimable citizens.]

No. 5 Worcester Sq., BOSTON, March 18, 1872.

Messrs. CUTLER BROS. & Co.

In ordering another gross I lot of your invaluable VEGETABLE PULMONARY BALSAM, should like to tell you what I know about it, in order that others may have the benefit of my EXPERIENCE.

Since this Balsam first came to my notice, in 1848, I have kept it constantly in the house, never allowing myself to be out or it one night. In all these TWENTY-FIVE YEARS It has not failed in a single instance in my own case to give the desired relief; and I will say the same in regard to my mother, whose LIFE WAS SAVED By it as I cannot but think. Here was a case of Congestion of the Lungs, and although attended by a most skillful physician, she seemed to fail constantly, so that we despaired of her recovery, when an old friend and neighbor persuaded her to try this Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam. The result was most gratifying, I assure you. RELIEF WAS IMMEDIATE And recovery rapid. She is now over 82 years old, and is active and well. Whenever she gets a severe cold, which happens once in a while, she takes thirty to sixty drops, according to the violence of the cough, which has always yielded in a day or two by taking the Balsam only on retiring at night. With it the IRRITATION Is at once subdued, and a good night's sleep secured. I will mention another case, that of a young lady acquaintance, who BLED AT THE LUNGS And coughed frightfully, and night sweats and was fearfully reduced. She left Boston for her country home, 150 miles away, as we supposed to die. I sent her a bottle of your Balsam, and soon had the satisfaction to hear that she was much better. She continued taking it for a while and got ENTIRELY WELL.

And is living now, which fact is to be ascribed mainly to the use of the Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam.

Very truly yours, JOHN CAPEN.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the tendency or timely interest of aesthetic or ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful life artery; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in a literary sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a living chromo-type, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The area in illustration—(American scenery, original with THE ALDINE), is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the artistic eye treatment of details than can be afforded by any ordinary page. The judicious interposition of landscape, marine, figure, and animal subjects, contain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist to closely to a single style of subject. The liberal use of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment, worthy of the artistic features, with only an occasional advertisement to do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful picture, in oil colors, of a large size, embodying whole picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Faithful Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the picture is executed so true to life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage gets up for his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) looks at it! Although a natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 500 subscribers, 100 different pieces, values at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series so made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for their entire subscription. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

DEVOTED TO REFORM IN MUNICIPAL, STATE, AND GENERAL GOVERNMENT

ESTABLISHED 1851.

POSTAGE FREE FOR 1875.

As a family paper, THE TIMES has always borne a very high reputation throughout the United States. It is free from all objectionable advertisements and reports, and may be safely admitted to every domestic circle. The disgraceful announcements of quacks and medical pretenders, which pollute so many newspapers of the day, are not admitted into the columns of THE TIMES on any terms.

As a political journal, THE TIMES will be devoted, as in the past, to a discriminating support of the Republican Party, while it will claim the right of expressing independent opinions upon the measures or policy of any Administration, or upon the conduct of any officers. It belongs to no faction or clique within a party, and has never entered into any combinations which were likely to impair its perfect freedom. Its course is that of independence within the Republican Party, for in that way can the interests of the people be most efficiently served.

Started in September, 1851, THE TIMES has ever since been recognized as one of the most successful, popular, and influential newspapers in the country. Two of its original proprietors still direct its policy, and, with greatly increased resources and experience, will spare no pains to extend and strengthen its claims upon the confidence and support of that public which it has endeavored faithfully to serve for upward of three and twenty years.

Its editorial columns will be conducted in a spirit of fairness and impartiality, free alike from self-interested aims, political jobbery, or undue favoritism. It will represent the great body of the people, rather than any clique. On all subjects it will maintain an attitude of perfect independence. Its correspondence will be full and timely, and directed with special reference to the publication of the truth on all questions, and from all parts. Its reports will be prepared with the utmost care. The literary department will be in charge of able hands, and will present a full review of the literature, the fine arts, the music, and the drama of the day. The scientific and educational reports and articles are specially prepared by some of the ablest men in the country.

The Sunday edition of THE TIMES includes, in addition to all the news, selected and original literary matter of the most varied and agreeable character. Spe ial arrangements have been made to impart new attractions to this feature of the paper. Among the contributors of original stories or articles to this paper are Bret Harte, J. W. De Forrest, Thomas Hardy, Dutton Cook, William Black, and negotiations are being carried out with many other distinguished authors.

LAWS

UNITED STATES

PASSED AT THE

[GENERAL NATURE—No. 92.]

AN ACT reorganizing the several staff corps of the Army.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Inspector General's Department shall consist of one colonel, two lieutenant-colonels, and two majors, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of officers of said grades; and the Secretary of War may, in addition, detail officers of the line, not to exceed four, to act as assistant inspector-general; Provided, That officers of the line detailed as acting inspectors-general shall have all the allowances of cavalry officers of their respective grades; and no new appointment shall be made in the Inspector-General's Department until the number of inspectors-general is reduced to five.

SEC. 2. That the Bureau of Military Justice shall hereafter consist of one Judge-Advocate-General, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of a brigadier general; and the said Judge-Advocate-General shall receive, revise, and have recorded the proceedings of all courts-martial, courts of inquiry and military commissions, and shall perform such other duties as have been heretofore performed by the Judge-Advocate-General of the Army. In the corps of judge-advocates no appointment shall be made as vacancies occur until the number shall be reduced to four, which shall thereafter be the permanent number of the officers of that corps.

SEC. 3. That hereafter there shall be three assistant commissaries-general of subsistence, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of lieutenant-colonel, instead of the two now allowed by law of said grade in the Subsistence Department; that the number of commissaries of subsistence with the rank, pay, and emoluments of a captain of cavalry, is hereby reduced to twelve, and no appointment to fill a vacancy in said grade shall be made until the number thereof shall be reduced to twelve, and the number thereafter shall remain fixed at twelve.

SEC. 4. That the Medical Department of the Army shall hereafter consist of one Surgeon-General, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of a brigadier general; one assistant surgeon-general, and one chief medical purveyor, each with the rank, pay, and emoluments of a colonel; and two assistant medical purveyors, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of lieutenant-colonels, who shall give the same bonds which are or may be required of assistant paymasters-general of like grade, and shall, when not acting as purveyors, be assignable to duty as surgeons by the President; fifty surgeons, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of majors; one hundred and fifty assistant surgeons, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of lieutenants of cavalry for the first five years' service, and with the rank, pay, and emoluments of captains of cavalry after five years' service; and four medical store-keepers, with the same compensation as is now provided by law; and all the original vacancies in the grade of assistant surgeon shall be filled by selection by competitive examination; and the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to appoint, from the enlisted men of the Army, or cause to be enlisted, as many hospital-stewards as the service may require, to be permanently attached to the Medical Department, under such regulations as the Secretary of War may prescribe. And the number of contract-surgeons shall be limited to seventy-five on or before the first day of January in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-five; and thereafter no more than that number shall be employed.

SEC. 5. That the Ordnance Department shall consist of one Chief of Ordnance, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of a brigadier-General; three colonels, four lieutenant-colonels, ten majors, twenty captains, sixteen first lieutenants; and all vacancies which may hereafter exist in the grade of first lieutenant in said Department shall be filled by transfer from the line of the Army: Provided, That no appointment or promotion in said Department shall hereafter be made until the officer or person so appointed or promoted shall have passed a satisfactory examination before a board of ordnance officers senior to himself.

SEC. 6. That no officer now in service shall be reduced in rank or mustered out by reason of any provision of law herein made reducing the number of officers in any department or corps of the staff.

SEC. 7. That as vacancies shall occur in any of the grades of the Ordnance and Medical Departments, no appointments shall be made to fill the same until the numbers in such grade shall be reduced to the numbers which are fixed for permanent appointments by the provisions of this act, and thereafter the number of permanent officers in said grades shall continue to conform to said reduced numbers, and all other grades in said Ordnance and Medical Departments than those authorized by the provisions of this act shall cease to exist as soon as the same shall become vacant by death, resignation or otherwise; and no appointment or promotion shall hereafter be made to fill any vacancy which may occur therein.

SEC. 8. That so much of section six of an act entitled "An act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and seventy, and for other purposes," approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-nine, as applies to the Ordnance, Subsistence, and Medical Departments of the Army be, and the same is hereby, repealed: Provided, That this section repealing said section shall not apply to any of the grades of the Medical or Ordnance Departments which are omitted or abolished by the provisions of this act.

THE WELL AND THE WILL.

BY B. P. SHILLABER.

["The Well and the Will," is founded upon what was told me as an incident in the early history of Portsmouth, though, after a somewhat diligent search, I was unable to find the will. But that it is true I know as well as Mark Twain did that the residence of Mary of Magdala was authentic—because he had seen the house. I have seen the well; so that part is established, if the will is wanting. Yours, believingly, B. P. S.]

In the primitive ancestral days,
When all were happy "under the King,"
A quaint old town, with quaint old ways,
Huddled beneath the royal wing.
And here dwelt quiet Goodman Hayes,
Who owned a beautiful spring,
Whose water clear
Through all the year
Flowed out, a grateful thing.

When the summer sun poured fiercely down,
And air and earth were parched and dry,
The people of the dull old town
Would to its cooling precinct hie,
And the birds, with nests in the green tree's crown,
Sang on the branches nigh:
And the horses quaffed,
And the verdure laughed
In joy as the stream flowed by.

Sweet flowers nodded around its brink,
The trees wore a brighter and fairer hue,
And the cattle which came that way to drink
Stopped long, delighted, ere they withdrew,
Seeming to ponder and to think
Of the beauty in dull and true.
As the water sweet
Flowed round their feet,
Forever bright and new.

To fill their pitchers the maidens came,
And sailed as they saw in the wave below
Their forms reflected and cheeks aflame
With the ruddy beams of health's bright glow;
And the urchin left his boisterous game
To drink of its generous flow;
And the real face
Met the shadowy face
O'er sands as white as snow.

As free to all as the air or light,
The spring gushed up from many a pore,
Bearing along, with a sparkle bright,
A blessing to each neighboring door;
And Goodman Hayes rejoiced at the sight
Away to his heart's deep core;
Beatitude
At others' good
Left room for nothing more.

Then Goodman Hayes conceived a thought
That, inasmuch as die he must,
He would make a will with kindness fraught,
Which should save his spring as a sacred trust,
That generous might be brought,
When he had turned to dust,
To prize the gift
Of his generous thrift,
As gratefully they must.

The will was made, and the summons came,
And Goodman Hayes was borne to his rest.
The beautiful spring poured forth the same,
On its mission of love, as erewhile, blest;
And more than the question of common fame
For him was manifest
Whose smile still seemed
In the rill that gleamed
For all through his bequest.

But time moved on his lengthened race,
And generations came and went;
Unknown was the Goodman's act of grace,
Though the bounteous well its comfort lent.
The rude town grew to a crowded place
Of feverish discontent,
Yet bright and sure,
Its waters pure,
Rushed on their course unspent.

To-day no barrier intervenes
To check the thirsting its brink would gain:
Though changed its old surrounding scenes
And heard no more is the hatd's refrain;
Though the tree no more its covert screens,
In the green, romantic lane,
But, binding still
Is the Goodman's will,
Forever to remain.

Better by far than transmitted pride,
Of the garish glory of titles grand,
The unselfish act, thus identified
With human good, unassuaged to stand;
And though the marble may be denied
That lesser deeds command,
The donor lives
In the boon he gives,
Which blesses every hand.

—N. Y. Independent.

[The well to which Mr. Shillaber refers is situated in the lane near the Coffin estate, between Union and Cabot streets.]

NO. VIII.

HISTORY OF THE SOUTH PARISH.

Until the year 1693 there was but one place of worship—the Old South Meeting House—for the inhabitants within the limits of Portsmouth, Newcastle, Rye, Greenland and a part of Newington.

From the settlement at Odiorne's Point in 1623, the way was easy across the beautiful waters of the Little Harbor to the Great Island (as Newcastle is even still frequently called,) with its small and pleasant beaches, its higher rocks, and its securer defences by nature from the attacks of the Indians. One finds, at the present time, graves in all parts of the island, and, although by reason of the inconveniences of the ferries and in the growth of the colony, Portsmouth became more prominent and engrossed nearly all the history of the settlement, we must not forget that a number of years Great Island was of more importance and the most populous and aristocratic part of the town. Here were the governor's residence; the fort, called William and Mary, on the site used ever since for the same purpose; the prison, where Moody and others were confined; the houses of several of the most wealthy and influential settlers, mansions of note for their day. Inasmuch as this parish was one with ours, and as we owe to its previous and judicious choice and trial two of our prominent clergymen of a later date, its history is the complement of our own.

In the year 1693 there appears the following record:

"To the Honorable, Ye Lieut. Governor and Councile of this their Majestie's Province of New Hampshire the humble petition of the Inhabitants of the Great Island humbly sheweth:

That whereas we, being part of ye towne of portsmo', and having found for many years great Incoveniences arising thereby in regard of the distance we are from the banck, and no way to it but by water, wherein there is great difficulty at any time but sometimes more especially to the hazard of our healths and lives, in going up to attend the publike worship of god at Strawberry banck and having many poore people amongst us, both men and women and children, which have no convenience of passage, by which means ye greatest part of our people cannot enjoy ye hearing of ye word preached to them, wch causeth many times ye breach of ye Sabbath, and ye dishonor of god's holy worship; as, also, our Island being ye mouth of ye harbor and Inlet into ye province, having King's fort placed here, and all the stores of ammunition, wch is of great Consequence and ought at all times to be carefully attended and lookt after: but if the Inhabitants of this Island must be confyned to attend to duty at Strawberry banck upon every publike ocation, the King's fort is left destitute of assistance, and lyes exposed to ye surprizall of ye enemie and our owne destruction; we therefore, the Inhabitants of ye Great Island, being a competent number to make and uphold a townership, do humbly beg and desire of this honorable board ye governur and Councill that we may be constituted a Towneship by ourselves, and that you would grant us the previleges and imunities as their Majestys have bin gratiously pleased to allow sutch a Towneship * * * and ye petitioners shall ever pray."

This petition is signed by a number of persons, among whom we find names still common at Newcastle. Of course there was considerable opposition on the part of Portsmouth to the petition. The selectmen appeared before the council, contessed it was inconvenient for the inhabitants of Great Island to go to meeting at the Bank, and that the fort and stores ought not to be at any time deserted; but there should be a minister settled on the island rather than a separate town.

The council, however, decided that Great Island should be made a township, and divided from the Bank, taking in Little Harbor and a part of Rye, and on the 30th day of May, in the fifth year of the reign of William and Mary, 1693, the charter of the town of New Castle was given. It is written on parchment in black letter, or old English, and preserved with great care among the town papers.

The early records of New Castle, beginning in the year the town was chartered, and for a long time supposed to be lost, have just been returned from England in a state of good preservation, and written with accuracy and distinctness beyond our own. From these records it appears that the meeting house had been erected at least as early as 1693, for in December of that year an order was put on "ye Meeting House" for a town meeting to agree with a "Minister and discorse other things Necessary for the towne's Benneftt." The record of the meeting runs thus: "The Town mett on the 20th Dec. at the Meeting House and by the Inhabitants: then to discorse a minister were chosen" a committee of five to join the selectmen "to discorse and agree with a minister for the whole year next ensuing." The result was that Mr. (Benj'e) Woodbridge was engaged to be the minister for a year at a salary of £60 and the contribution of strangers. Whence he came, and when and why he left there is no record, but he is mentioned two or three times in a strange book written about that time and printed in London in 1698, to which we shall soon refer, and called Mr. Woodoridge, a divine. I judge there was some trouble in regard to the salary, as this is a trouble which seems to run through the records, or the inhabitants felt they had not been sufficiently consulted, for soon after Mr. Woodbridge was settled, his advice was asked in regard to a successor. He named three clergymen, and of course the parish did not agree upon any one of them; but in 1694 Mr. Samuel Moodey was "discoursed" and called by the parish at a salary of £70, finding himself housing and all other things on his own charge. This Mr. Moodey was a son of Joshua Moodey, the minister of Portsmouth, and was graduated at Harvard in 1689. He remained until the latter part of 1702, or early in 1703.—and thereafter appears at the Shoals, where he is spoken of as "a man of piety and a pathetic and useful preacher." The last record in regard to him is on a matter of salary, the town agreeing to pay him not all in money, but part in provisions, and thereafter he is spoken of as the late pastor.

At a town meeting held on the 24th of May, 1703, it was voted to settle Mr. John Emerson, at a salary of $65 and the contributions of strangers; and also to build a minister's house, "when the town is able," and to fence in the land belonging to the "ministry," and to pay the minister the freight on his house goods. Altogether they seem to have begun with Mr. Emerson with a good deal of enthusiasm, perhaps because of his distinguished presence and gifts, which won promises they could not make good in money, for in 1710 Mr. Emerson complains to the town of the poor house in which he has lived ever since he came among them, and puts them in mind of their promise to build a parson's house. This seems to have led to some difficulty, which resulted in the loss of their minister, for although the town voted to build a parsonage, Jan. 18, 1710, the vote was not carried into effect for two years, and on the 17th of September, 1711, Mr. Emerson informed the town that he being sickly of the "ague, and the town not agreeing with him, he thinks it absolutely necessary for regaining his health to move farther from the sea." He left in 1712, and in 1715 was settled over the South Parish of Portsmouth as its third minister. When he left Newcastle application was made to the president of the college and the minister at Cambridge, to procure a minister suitable for the place, and in 1712, Nov. 24th, it was voted "that Mr. William Shurtleff shall be ye minister in this town, and that he be called to office and ordained here," and in the same year it was voted "that ye Reverend Mr. William Shurtleff shall have £65 per year for his annual salary during the time he lives single, but when his family increases by marriage it is voted that he shall have £80 per year." In 1732 he gave up the parish at Newcastle, and on the 21st of February, 1733, was installed over our parish, where he had a ministry of great prosperity for fourteen years.

The first meeting house at Newcastle, built in or before the year 1693, gave way to another in 1706, which was furnished with a bell of fine tone sent over from England, decorated with a beautiful altar piece, and supplied with a silver communion service, to which was added a splended silver cup, the bequest of a sister of Sir William Pepperell, and on the pulpit was a large folio Bible, with illuminated letters, printed at the University of Oxford. This meeting house was, perhaps, as a whole finer than the first old South, at Portsmouth, standing at the same time. In 1828 the present Newcastle church was begun, completed in 1836, and at its dedication a discourse was delivered by my predecessor (Rev. Dr. A. P. Peabody), then the young minister of the South Parish.

In these early records there are votes at the town meetings, which show the same general characteristics of the inhabitants in regard to social and religious customs that we noticed in the last lecture. We find the same order as to seating the townspeople in the meeting house. We find it ordered "that one householder or more walk every sabbath day in sermon time with the constable to every Publick House in ye town to suppress ill order, and if they think conveiniant, to private Houses also." We find the same votes in regard to the entertainment of strangers, and giving their names to the selectmen if they remain more than a few days. We find it ordered, "for the prevention of fire or other dangers which may happen by smoking in the meeting House that every per-on soe smoking at any meeting in the meeting House be fined." We find it ordered, "for the prevention of charge coming on the town by some certain noted common drunkards, that the names of such persons be given by the selectmen to every publick house in the town in a paper, and a fine to be inflicted on whomsoever shall sell any drink to persons so noted and named. We find a vote that all the inhabitants shall pass the ferry free on Sabbath days and on all other public days; and we find many votes at various meetings about 1720, and thereafter, in regard to building a bridge over Little Harbor, which was built, fell into decay and disuse, and was swept away by the tides. Another was built upon its site, of which, within a few years, almost the last traces have disappeared, and now, after the lapse of a century, the old discussion is renewed, and soon a third bridge will span the Little Harbor. Thus do the ways of travel return to their former courses.

The most remarkable incident in the history of Great Island is connected with one of the few cases of witchcraft in our neighborhood; and while one instance of the appearance of the witches at Little Harbor is in all the accounts, this, the far more extraordinary, has been almost entirely lost sight of. There are as you all know, two roads that lead into the ancient village—one by the water and the other a little farther inland. About a third of a mile east by south of the last bridge, on the latter road and very near to it, perhaps, indeed on it, as the highway has been opened since the building disappeared, and on the land now owned by Mr. John Locke, there stood, as early certainly as 1686, a large mansion with a gambrel roof, a hall extending through the lower story, with several spacious chambers above. The house belonged to one George Walton, called a planter, and among the inmates was one Richard Chamberlaine, a prominent public functionary under Cranfield, being variously styled justice of the peace, secretary of state, clerk of the court, etc., and near by was a friend of his, also prominent in provincial matters—Captain Walter Barefoot. When Chamberlaine went home to England he wrote a book, which was printed in London in 1698, of which the following in the name and its explanation: "Lithebolia; or the Stone-throwing Devil. Being an Exact and True Account (by the way of Journal) of the various actions of infirnal Spirits or (Devils Incarnate) witches, or both, and the Great Disturbance and amazement they gave to George Walton's Family, at a place called Great Island, in the province of New Hampshire, in New England, chiefly in throwing about (by an Invisible hand) stones, bricks and brickbats of all sizes, with several other things as hammers, Mauls, Iron Crows, Spits, and other domestic utensils, as came into their Hellish Minds, and this for the space of a quarter of a year. By R. C., Esq., who was a sojourner in the same family the whole Time, and an Ocular witness of these Diabolical Inventions, The Contents hereof being manifestly known to the Inhabitants of that province and known of other provinces, and is upon record in his Majestie's Council Court, held for that province, 4 to, Dedication 2, pp 16, London: Printed and are to be sold by E. Whitlock near Stationer's Hall, 1698."

News and Notes.

Raymon Ovies, a resident of Troy, N. Y., received intelligence last week of the death of two sisters and two brothers in Bilbao, Spain, by the bursting of a bombshell while they were sitting at dinner. On Wednesday he received another letter from his father, informing him that another brother, aged eleven years, had been beheaded while walking through the streets of Bilbao on an errand for his mother.

Referring to the hopes of the prohibitionists the New York Republic says: The prohibitionists hope to play the Massachusetts game over again, and compel the republicans to accept the prohibition candidates. There are some people who never learn anything, but the New Hampshire republicans are not of that kind. If defeat must come, dishonor can always be avoided.

The investigation of the doings at the house of the Eddys in Crittenden, Vt., by Colonel Olcott, is finished, and he will now publish its history and result. Colonel Olcott is trained in detecting fraud and subterfuge; he was, for years, a prominent revenue detective; he went to Crittenden an unbeliever in materialization, has spent weeks in the farm house and applied many tests to what he has seen. He has proved that there can be no confederates in the apparitions and deeds that are witnessed there, and, without yet stating his conclusions as to their natures he asserts that it is an impossibility for the clumsy and ignorant Eddy brothers to personate a hundred different forms and voices, as many as thirty of whom often appear in a single seance, or to produce from an empty closet the varied and bulky costumes the "spirits" wear. Dr. Beard's "exposure" he declares simply laughable; it can't be stretched to fit the facts.

The annual report of the board of visitors of the military academy at West Point says that the discipline of the institution was never higher, that hazing has been done away with, and recommends that in the future candidates for admission be not younger than eighteen nor more than twenty-one.

William Lunney, of Boston, while drunk, killed his father-in-law, Patrick Smith, on Friday, by stamping on his face.

The Watkins (N. Y.) Express says: "The liberals want Hon. Tom Alvord for Speaker, and the democrats want Hon. Jerry McGuire. Way not elect both? 'Tom and Jerry' is not bad." Indications are that it will be a Tom and Jerry legislature, notwithstanding the prohibition suffrages that it stands upon.

Hon. Bailie Peyton, once a leading member of the old whig party, will probably be sent to Congress to fill the vacancy created by the death of Hon. C. Head, late member elect of the Fourth district of Tennessee.

Three men were killed outright, and one fatally and another seriously injured, Friday, by the bursting of the cover of one of the monster cylinders used in constructing the bridge being built by the Old Colony Railroad Company across the Taunton River at Fall River. The accident was caused by the great pressure of air in the cylinder, inside of which the men were working.

In the trial of Beecher this week it is said that Mr. Moulton will produce the two papers that he mentioned but did not print in his statement. One is a note inclosed in one of his letters from Beecher to Mrs. Tilton, found in a copy of the "Life of Christ," which Mrs. Tilton received from her pastor. The other is Beecher's draft of resignation from his pulpit when he was in the midst of his trouble.

—The following translation was made by a Frenchman who professed to teach languages, and who thought he was telling the story in really beautiful English:

A lady which was dine chid her servants that she had not butter enough. This girl, for to excuse himselve, was bring a little cat on the hand, and told that she came to him in the crime finishing to eat the two pounds from butter who remain. The lady took immediately the cat whom was put in the balances, it just weighed the two pounds. "This all the very much well for the butter," the lady then said," but where's the cat?"

—Some one is trying to rule DeWitt Talmage by flattery, and describes his appearance on a late pulpit occasion, as follows:

He is tall and angular, with a face like a snake, especially in the restless movement of the neck; and the eye, which is ordinarily cold and fishy-looking, sends out at moments a slugularly stealthy gleam of cunning. His face was skirted by two red mutton-chop whiskers, and the roof of his head, which was bald, was supported by wings of the same complexion.

Friday afternoon a piece of timber about eight feet long fell from the upper staging around the new vessel building at Feraald's ship yard and just grazing the shoulder of George W. Watkins, one of the caulkers employed there, took the left sleeve from off his jacket and slightly scarred his arm. It was a narrow escape.

Fashion is a fickle goddess, but the show of red that two women made on the street Friday, was a little too conspicuous unless intended to attract the attention of everybody, which they succeeded in doing to the disgust of decent people on the street.

A team loaded with manure was standing at the south end, Friday, and the driver, becoming somewhat annoyed by the horse being balky in starting, jumped on the load and taking the manure fork, plunged the prongs several times in the animal before starting him. Luckily for him no officer of the S. P. C. A. was in that vicinity.

The many friends of Mr. J. Frank Adams will regret to learn of his sudden death at Boston on Friday. He was taken suddenly ill with a malignant pustule on the face and lived but five days afterward. Sir John Mason.

The NEW HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE of March 2, 1759, contained the following memorial to Sir John Mason, who died in 1566:

"TO THE MEMORY OF SIR JOHN MASON, Who though but three score and three years old at his death, yet lived and flourished in the reigns of four princes, viz: Henry the Eighth, Edward the Sixth, Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth, and was a Privy Councillor to them all, and an eye-witness of the various revolutions and vicissitudes of these times. Toward his latter end, being on his death bed, he called for his Clerk and Steward and delivered himself in these terms: 'Lo! here have I lived to see five Princes and have been Privy Councillor to four of them. I have seen the most remarkable observables in foreign parts and have been present at most State transactions for thirty years together, and I have learned this after so many years' experience, that serviousness is the greatest wisdom, temperance the best physic and a good conscience the best estate, and were I to live again, I would change the Court over for a cloister, my Privy Councillor's bustles for an Hermit's retirement, and the whole life I lived in a Palace for an hour's enjoyment of God in Chapel. All things else forsake me besides my God, my duty and my prayer.'"

Sleighing at North Conway.

A large three-story dwelling has been built opposite the Fabyan House, which is to be occupied by the servants in the summer, and kept as a hotel in the winter.

A State Farmers' Convention will be held in Manchester on the 22d and 23d inst., under the direction of the N. H. Agricultural Society. There will be essays and discussions on stock breeding, the production of milk and other subjects. Several eminent agriculturists have been engaged to take prominent parts in the proceedings.

Joseph Rosebush, an employe of the Concord railroad, had a finger cut off at Nashua on Wednesday morning, while engaged in coupling cars.

A Coos county liquor dealer, after disposing of a barrel of the "ardent" recently, to the thirsty ones among his customers was surprised to receive from the Portland house of which he had purchased it, the following telegram: "Send back the barrel we sent you last week, at our expense, immediately. By mistake we sent you burning fluid instead of whiskey."

—According to the Chicago Times a horrible discovery has been made at Flint, Michigan. It is believed that a whole family have for a long time carried on the business of body-snatching. Their name is McNamee, and they consist of a father, aged fifty or sixty years, his two sons, one supposed to be a student at Ann Arbor University, and a daughter. They have been in bad repute for many years, the father having been arrested during the war for running an illicit distillery and as though none of them were known to do any work, they always had plenty of money. Intense excitement followed, and McNamee was at once arrested, and is now in jail at Niles. Dr. William J. McNamee, who was in charge of the dead house at Ann Arbor, fled. Immediately after this discovery was made, two other bodies of persons recently dead were missed, and their friends having instituted search, the mutilated remains were found in the repository at the Ann Arbor College. Further investigation revealed the horrible fact that there was scarcely an unrobbed grave in the cemetery.

—General Sherman won't talk about the Presidency, but interviewers still keep calling upon him, owing to a bad habit he has fallen into of asking, with thoughtless generosity as soon as a reporter shows himself, "Young man, will you take brandy or grasshopper juice?"

—They have excommunicated Ann Eliza, as will be seen from this notice published in the Deseret News: "To whom it may concern—This is to certify that Ann Eliza Webb Young was cut off the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints by the High Council, Oct. 10, 1874."

"DOUBTLESS THE

BEST COUGH MEDICINE

IN THE WORLD."

[From one of the Oldest and very best Houses in America.]

MESSRS. CUTLER BROS. & CO. CINCINNATI, Ohio, March 13, 1872.

Please send us TEN gross small and FIVE gross large "Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam." This is doubtless the best Cough Medicine in the World.

[signed] ALLEN & CO.

P. S. These parties have sold this Balsam for over thirty years.

[From one of Boston's most estimable citizens.]

No. 5 Worcester Sq., BOSTON, March 18, 1873.

Messrs. CUTLER BROS. & CO.

In ordering another small lot of your invaluable VEGETABLE PULMONARY BALSAM, should like to tell you what I know about it, in order that others may have the benefit of my EXPERIENCE.

Since this Balsam first came to my notice, in 1846, I have kept it constantly in the house, never allowing myself to be out of it even night. In all these TWENTY-FIVE YEARS It has not failed in a single instance in my own case to give the desired relief; and I will say the same in regard to my family, whose LIFE WAS SAVED By it as I cannot but think. Here was a case of Consumption of the Lungs, and although attended by a most skillful physician, she seemed to fail constantly, so that we despaired of her recovery, when an old friend and neighbor persuaded her to try this Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam. The result was most gratifying, I assure you. RELIEF WAS IMMEDIATE And recovery rapid. She is now over 32 years old, and is active and well. We never she gets a severe cold, which happens once in a while, she takes thirty of sixty drops, according to the violence of the cough, which has always yielded in a day or two by taking the Balsam only on retiring at night. With it the IRRITATION Is at once subdued, and a good night's sleep secured. I will mention another case, that of a young lady acquaintance, who BLED AT THE LUNGS And coughed frightfully, had night sweats and was fearfully reduced. She left Boston for her country home, 100 miles away, as we supposed to die. I sent her a bottle of your Balsam, and soon had the satisfaction to hear that she was much better. She continued taking it for a while and got ENTIRELY WELL. And is living now, with health, to be ascribed mainly to the use of the Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam. Very truly yours, JOHN CAPEN.

As there are many imitations, be careful to get the genuine. Price in large bottles, which are much the cheapest, $1; small bottles, old style, 50 cents.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior elegance, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possession of a complete volume cannot explicate the quan ity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious intermission of landscape, marine, figure, and animal subjects, sustains an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment, worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical dissertations as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much admiration,

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it. Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, the different pieces, values at over $2,000, are distributed as soon as the series is full. The organization of each series as soon as it is ready, is the next success in the career of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay one year in advance. Full particulars in another place, or application on receipt of a stamp.

TERMS.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union,

SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.

(No charge for postage.)

Specimen copies of THE ALDINE, fifty cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no removal or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON, President.

Pulmocine Cordial.

Pulmocine Cordial.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

THOS. P. MONES, thorough and tasteful Teacher of Music, from A in its alphabet to composition and arrangement, has concluded not to accept a recent call to go South again, but will retain his permanent location in the grand "Old Town by the Sea" where he was born,—and renews the offer of his services as above, with unabated zeal and love for this branch of human education. He is no novice or humbug to beg, borrow or buy bolsters to uphold him in an art he does not fully understand in every phase of its beauty; but could respectfully refer to the best of references, WORKS, and ability to discover, develope and train inherent talent to accomplish splendid results. His pupils are shining in private and public, here and elsewhere. His many Musical Exhibitions—such as others seldom or never present to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from fawning favoritism where true merit is too often absent. Terms, $12 for twelve weeks (twenty-four lessons) at his Music Room, or $12 at the pupil's residence, for Piano or Scientific Vocalization, separately or together. Mr. Mones will also Tune Pianos,—a business "familiar as household words" to him,—and solicits orders.

LAWS

OF THE

UNITED STATES

PASSED AT THE

[GENERAL NATURE—No. 65.]

AN ACT for the creation of a court for the adjudication and disposition of certain moneys received into the Treasury under an award made by the tribunal of arbitration constituted by virtue of the first article of the treaty concluded at Washington the eighth of May, anno Domini eighteen hundred and seventy-one, between the United States of America and the Queen of Great Britain.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby authorized to nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint five suitable persons, who shall constitute a court, to be known as the "Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims." Each of the judges and other officers of said court shall take the oath of office prescribed by law to be taken by all officers of the United States. The President shall designate, by appointment, one of the said judges to be presiding judge of the court; and all vacancies which may occur in said court by reason of death, resignation, or inability, or refusal or neglect of any or either of said judges to discharge the duties of his position, shall be filled in the same manner as vacancies occurring in offices under the Constitution of the United States are filled.

SEC. 2. That the said judges shall meet and organize said court in the city of Washington, where the said court shall hold its sittings. Three judges of said court shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, and the agreement of three shall be necessary to decide any question arising before said court.

SEC. 3. That the said court be, and it is hereby, authorized to publish notice of its sessions, and to make all needful rules and regulations not contravening the laws of the United States or the provisions of this act, for regulating the forms and mode of procedure before the said court, and for carrying into full and complete effect the provisions of this act. Such rules and mode of procedure shall conform, as far as practicable, to the mode of procedure and practice of the circuit courts of the United States; and the said court is hereby vested with the same powers now possessed by the circuit and district courts of the United States to compel the attendance and testimony of parties, claimants, and witnesses, to preserve order, and to punish for contempts; and in all claims which shall be presented before said court the person or persons prosecuting such claim shall be deemed the complainant and the United States shall be deemed the respondent. And said court shall have power to compel the production of any books or papers deemed material to the consideration of any claim or matter pending therein.

SEC. 4. That each of the said judges shall be paid monthly, at the rate of six thousand dollars per annum; and they shall have a clerk, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to be paid at the rate of three thousand dollars per annum; and the said court shall have authority to appoint one short-hand reporter, to be paid monthly, at the rate of two thousand five hundred dollars per annum; and said court shall be further allowed the necessary actual expenses of office-rent, furniture, fuel, stationery, and printing, and other necessary incidental expenses, to be certified by the presiding judge of said court, and to be audited and paid on vouchers under the direction of the Secretary of State.

SEC. 5. That the President may designate a counsellor-at-law, admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of the United States to appear as counsel on behalf of the United States, and represent the interest of the Government in said suit, and in all claims filed for indemnity for losses, as provided by this act, subject to the supervision and control of the Attorney General. Such Counsel shall receive for his services and expenses such reasonable allowance in each claim as may be approved by the court, to be apportioned in each claim adjudicated, and paid from said award upon the certificate of one of the judges.

SECTION 6. That the marshal of the United States for the District of Columbia, or his deputies, shall serve all process issued by said court, preserve order in the place of sitting, and execute the orders of the said court.

SECTION 7. That the said court shall proceed immediately after its first meeting in the city of Washington, with all convenient dispatch, to arrange and docket the several claims admissible under this act, and to consider the evidence which shall have been or which may be offered by the respective claimants, and in opposition thereto, allowing such further time for the production of such further evidence as may be required and as it shall think reasonable and just, and shall thereupon proceed to determine and award upon each of said claims according to the provisions of this act.

SECTION 8. That the judges of the court created by this act shall convene in the city of Washington as soon as conveniently may be after their appointment; and the said court shall exist for one year from the date of its first convening and organizing; and should it be found impracticable to complete the work of the said court before the expiration of the said one year, the President may, by proclamation, extend the time of the duration thereof to a period not more than six months beyond the expiration of the said one year; and in such cases all the provisions of this act shall be taken and held to be the same as though the continuance of the said court had been originally fixed by this act at the limit to which it may be thus extended.

SECTION 9. That all records, documents, or other papers which now or hereafter, during the continuance of the court, may come into possession of the Department of State, in relation to such claims, and which shall be found necessary to the examination and adjudication of the same, shall, upon the order or requisition of said court, be delivered to the court for that purpose, and to be given such weight as evidence as the court shall think just.

SECTION 10. That each of the said judges shall have authority to administer oaths and affirmations, and to take the depositions of claimants, parties, and witnesses, in all matters pertaining to the presentation or examination of said claims; and if any person shall knowingly and willfully swear or affirm falsely in such examination or deposition to any matter or fact material to the investigation of the claim touching which such person is examined, or if any person, whether claimant or witness, shall so swear or affirm falsely to the contents of any memorial, petition, affidavit, deposition or other paper containing any matter or fact material in the examination of any claim pending before, or to be presented before said court, or shall, in giving testimony, or in swearing or affirming to any deposition, affidavit, or other paper, before any officer authorized to administer oaths or to take such testimony, so swear or affirm falsely to any matter or thing material in the examination of any claim pending or to be presented before said court, every such person so swearing or affirming falsely as aforesaid shall be deemed guilty of perjury, the same as if such false oath or affirmation had been taken in a judicial proceeding in any of the courts of the United States, and shall be liable to indictment and trial in the district or circuit court of the United States for the district in which such perjury shall have been committed, or in the proper courts of the United States for the Territory or District of Columbia in which such perjury shall have been committed, and shall, upon conviction, suffer such punishment as is provided by the laws of the United States for that offense.

SECTION 11. That it shall be the duty of said court to receive and examine all claims admissable under this act that may be presented to it, directly resulting from damage caused by the so-called insurgent cruisers Alabama, Florida, and their tenders, and also all claims admissable under this act directly resulting from damage caused by the so-called insurgent cruiser Shenandoah after her departure from Melbourne on the eighteenth day of February, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and to decide upon the amount and validity of such claims, in conformity with the provisions hereinafter contained, and according to the principles of law and the merits of the several cases. All claims shall be verified by oath of the claimant, and filed in said court within six months next after the organization thereof, as provided in section eight of this act; and no claim shall be received, docketed, or considered that shall have not been so filed within the time aforesaid; but every such unrepresented claim shall be deemed and held to be finally and conclusively waived and barred.

SECTION 12. That no claim shall be admissable or allowed by said court for any loss or damage for or in respect to which the party injured, his assignees or legal representatives, shall have received compensation or indemnity from any insurance company, insurer, or otherwise; but if such compensation or indemnity so received shall not have been equal to the loss or damage so actually suffered, allowance may be made for the difference. And in no case shall any claim be admitted or allowed for or in respect to unearned freights, gross freights, prospective profits, freights, gains, or advantages, or for wages of officers or seamen for a longer time than one year next after the breaking-up of a voyage by the acts aforesaid. And no claim shall be admissible or allowed by said court by or in behalf of any insurance-company or insurer, either in its or his own right, or as assignee, or otherwise, in the right of a person or party insured as aforesaid, unless such claimant shall show, to the satisfaction of said court that during the late rebellion the sum of its or his losses, in respect to its or his war-risks, exceed the sum of its or his premiums or other gains upon or in respect to such war-risks; and in case of any such allowance, the same shall not be greater than such excess of loss. And no claim shall be admissable or allowed by said court arising in favor of any insurance company not lawfully existing at the time of the loss under the laws of some one of the United States. And no claim shall be admissable or allowed by said court arising in favor of any person not entitled, at the time of his loss, to the protection of the United States in the premises, nor arising in favor of any person who did not at all times during the late rebellion bear true allegiance to the United States.

SECTION 13. That in estimating the compensation to claimants, interest shall be allowed, at the rate of four per centum per annum upon the amount of actual loss or damage which shall be ascertained in such case to have been sustained, from such date as the court shall, in each case, decide that the loss was sustained by the claimant: Provided, however, That the amount of such interest shall not be included in or added to the amount for which judgment may be rendered on said claim; but in such case a report of the amount of such interest, certified under the seal of the court, shall accompany the report of the judgment on the claim to the Secretary of State.

SECTION 14. That the said court shall report to the Secretary of State a list of the several judgments and decisions made by it, a certified copy of which shall, upon the conclusion of the business of the said court, be by him transmitted to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall thereafter, as soon as may be and upon such notice and in such manner as he shall prescribe, pay the the said judgments, together with interest at the rate of four per centum per annum on the amount of such judgments from the date certified, unto the persons, respectively, in whose favor the same shall have been made, or to their respective legal representatives, in full satisfaction and discharge of said judgments: Provided, That if the sum of all the judgments rendered by the said court, together with interest, shall exceed the amount received into the Treasury of the United States as proceeds of the sum to be paid by Great Britain, by virtue of the said decision and award, then the Secretary of the Treasury shall distribute, in ratable proportions, among the parties in whose favor judgments shall have been rendered, or to their legal representatives, such moneys as have been received into the Treasury, according to the proportions which their respective judgments shall bear to the whole amount received into the Treasury as aforesaid, which payments shall be in full satisfaction and discharge of such claims and judgments.

SECTION 15. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and required to pay the said respective judgments of said court, out of any such money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated; and for that purpose he is hereby authorized when necessary to issue and sell at public sale, after ten days' notice of the time and place of sale, at not less than par in coin, a sufficient amount of coupon or registered bonds of the United States, in such form as he may prescribe, of denominations of fifty dollars, or some multiple of that sum, redeemable in coin of the present standard value, at the pleasure of the United States after ten years from the date of their issue, and bearing interest payable quarterly in such coin at the rate of five per centum per annum; and upon the payment, from time to time, of the said respective judgments of said court as before provided, the bonds of the United States mentioned in the act approved March third, eighteen hundred and seventy-three, entitled "An act for the creation of a court for the adjudication and disposition of certain moneys received into the Treasury under an award made by the tribunal of arbitration constituted by virtue of the first article of the treaty concluded at Washington the eighth of May, anno Domini eighteen hundred and seventy-one, between the United States of America and the Queen of Great Britain," shall be canceled and extinguished to the amount of such payments; and when all such payments shall have been made, any such bonds remaining shall be also canceled and extinguished; and after the payment of the said judgments, and the re-imbursement of the expenses as herein provided, if there shall remain any part of the said money, the same shall be and remain a fund from which Congress may hereafter authorize the payment of other claims thereon. And the moneys necessary for the payment of the salaries of the judges and other officers authorized by this act, and of the expenses of the said court as hereinbefore mentioned, are hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

SECTION 16. That as soon as the business of said court shall be executed and completed, the records, documents, and all other papers in the possession of the court, or its officers, shall be deposited in the office of the Secretary of State.

SECTION 17. In ascertaining the amount of such losses, the memorials, affidavits, depositions, and any other papers in the several cases of losses claimed respectively, now filed in the State Department, or official copies thereof, may be read in evidence: Provided, That no affidavit shall be read except where it appears to the satisfaction of the tribunal that the affiant cannot be produced before it as a witness or his testimony taken by a commission upon interrogatories; and in the hearing of the cause, any party claiming shall produce all books, papers, letters, and documents that may be called for by a general description thereof by any opposing party, or satisfactorily account for their loss or non-production, or suffer such judgment as is prescribed in section fifteen of the act entitled "An act to establish the judicial courts of the United States," approved September twenty-ninth, seventeen hundred and eighty-nine; and on the hearing of the cause, any competent evidence may be produced by either party, either viva voce or by deposition taken upon interrogatories; and for this purpose depositions may be taken by either party de bene, or the court may admit affidavits where it is satisfactorily shown that the witness cannot be produced or his examination by interrogatories and cross examination cannot be had.

SECTION 18. That in case any judgment is rendered by said court for indemnity for any loss or claim hereinbefore mentioned against the United States at the time of the giving of the judgment, the court shall, upon motion of the attorney or counsel for the claimant, allow, out of the amount thereby awarded, such reasonable counsel and attorney fees to the counsel and attorney employed by the claimant or claimants respectively as the court shall determine is just and reasonable, as compensation for the services rendered the claimant in prosecuting such claims, which allowance shall be entered as part of the judgment in such case, and shall be made specifically payable as part of said judgment for indemnification to the attorney or counsel, or both, to whom the same shall be adjudged; and a warrant shall issue from the Treasury in favor of the person to whom such allowance shall be made respectively, which shall be in full compensation to the counsel or attorney for prosecuting such claim; and all other fees upon, or assignments, sales, transfers, either absolute or conditional for services rendered or to be rendered about any claim or part or parcel thereof provided for in this bill heretofore or hereafter made or done before such judgment is entered and the warrant issued therefor, shall be absolutely null and void and of none effect.

NO. VIII.

HISTORY OF THE SOUTH PARISH.

Lithobolia is a Greek word, signifying a throwing of stones, and is the title given to this book, because it describes the intervention of supposed evil spirits, whose manifestations took that form. The belief in witchcraft was then almost universal, even among legal minds best trained to the examination and sifting of evidence. So easy is it for persons to see what they believe they will see, therefore the book begins with a charge against the sceptical, incredulous and infidel spirit of the age which should venture to unbelieve such well attested things, as with equal reason one might as well deny his very senses, infidelity being almost nothing more than the reproach of not accepting the belief of the majority, no matter how much stronger or higher our faith may be in something different. The malicious acts of these fiends ceased about the time the governor arrived, so that he insisted upon it that it was only the waggery of some naughty boys, but this Chamberlain regards as impossible after the sight and testimony of so many considerable persons. These preternatural occurrences were supposed to be caused by the maliciousness of a neighboring woman, who pretended that some land of her field, had been taken into the bounds of this George Walton, and who had been heard to say with much bitterness that Walton should never quietly enjoy that piece of ground. It would often be a source of grim satisfaction to many if they could thus call all the evil spirits to their aid in tormenting those who have infringed upon their rights

This true narrative, the writer says, is set down to rectify the depraved judgements and sentiments of such unbelieving persons as reject the operations and being of witches, and convince all who hear without prejudice by the testimony of eye witnesses almost every day for a quarter of a year together.

One Sunday night about ten of the clock, this Richard Chamberlain, justice of the peace, lodging at the house of George Walton, heard many stones thrown and hit with great noise against the top and all sides of the house. Walton and his neighbor, Amazeen, an Italian, had gone to examine the gate between their houses, which had a habit of being swung off the hinges and cast upon the ground, and as they returned to the house they were assaulted with a peal of stones taken, as we suppose, from the rocks hard by the house, (thus always, in spite of their belief in the supernatural and omnipotent agnency, persons try to let the attendant circumstances make it easier for the divine agency) and by human hands as agents.

Everybody in the house was aroused by the strange alarm, and all looked out as sharply as possible, it being a bright moonlight night, but could make no discovery. Then a shower of stones, some of them as big as the fist, came into the entry of the house, whereupon they withdrew into the next room, none being hit save only two youths, "Praised be Almighty Providence," says R. C. For certainly the infernal agent, constant enemy to mankind, had he not been overruled, intended no less than death or maim. Forthwith they began a search; they searched the hall, they searched the cellar and, of course, the shower of stones began to diminish, but when they came into the room "these unfriendly lapidary salutations" were renewed. The windows were broken, and yet the stones had a way of coming apparently from the inside forcing the bars, and cast windows out, and themselves falling back into the room. One stone they took out of the glass of the window, where it lodged itself in the breaking of it, in a hole exactly fit for the stone. Sometimes they scratched the stones, and found that the same ones were taken up and tarown at them again and again.

After four hours of fright Chamberlain concluded to go to bed (thus do the powers of nature overcome the supernatural, and we go to sleep even in the presence of demons;) but soon he was again awakened by another battery, when it seemed as if shelves, pictures, books and everything had been knocked down, and upon all the household rushing to his room, they found a stone weighing eight pounds and a half, which had burst open the door. Soon after the manifestations ceased for that night. It was a disturbed night for the household, and in the morning each one had some strange experience to relate, which probably lost nothing in the relation,—that day while the men were at work in the field—and with Mr. Woodoridge, the divine, now present to see, the stones came jumping and tumbling on the grass, and upon one person sceptically asserting he was not persuaded but that the boys at work did throw them, the devil rewarded his infidelity by a blow with a stone upon the boy, which convinced the one, and set the boy a-crying. That night Chamoerlain began to play upon a musical instrument, perhaps to drive away his fears—as boys whistle in the night—when a great stone came rumbling into the room, which, he says, was on a much different account than in the days of old, and of old fabulous enchantments—his music being none of the best; and, while many gathered at the house on account of the marvelous thing, just as the stones were being thrown about, two youths saw a black cat in the fields, which was shot at but missed by its changing places, and being immediately at some distance, and then out of sight.

The next Monday Walton went by water to a place called Great Bay, and as the men were at work in the woods felling wood, there came another shower of stones, which they gathered into a pile under a tree, and returning after a time found they had disappeared, and were again thrown about. Once again, returning from Great Bay with a load of hay, about midway in the river he found his boat in a sinking condition, by the pulling out of the stopple in the bottom; "a contrivance, a combination," says R. C., "of the old serpent to have doomed my good landlord and his company." At one time, after a number of prominent persons gathered there had been wondrously affected by these strange things, they offered themselves to give testimonies, which R. C., Esq., then wrote down, and several signed a paper attesting the truth of their being eyewitnesses of at least half a score of stones that evening thrown invisibly into the field and entry and hall and chamber of George Walton. Among these we find the Gov. of West Jersey and the Deputy Gov. of Road Island and other persons of note. Strange sounds sometimes attending the throwing of stones, and besides the stones, strange things flew about, and familiar things strangely changed their places.

One of the worst days was Friday, the 4th of Aug., when the fence between Mr. Walton and the neighbor who was supposed to be the witch was maliciously pulled down to let their cattle into his ground, and when he and his servants went to put it up again they were pelted with above forty stones. Walton was hit divers times, and all that day as they were reaping it ceased not, and there fell above 100 stones. Sickles were bent, and Mrs. Walton going out to make most diligent observation, to dispel the incredulity of some and confirm her own belief, met with a severe blow from the Unseen Power; and Mr. Woodbridge, the Divine, and Mr. Jeffrey, the merchant, were all hit and injured.

Thereafter the stony Disturbances grew less, and last of all they ended with Mr. Walton, who, going in his boat from the Great Island to Portsmouth, to attend the Council which had taken cognizance of the matter, he being summoned thither for examination—as if to have a final fling at him (all such things generally ending upon proper examination), the Devil hit him sadly with three pebble stones as big as one's fist. One gash broke his head, which for evidence Chamberlain saw him show to the president of the council, and from the stroke of another he complained afterwards to his death.

The Lithobolia closes thus:

"Who that peruses these preternatural occurrences can possibly be so much an Enemy to his own Soul and irrefutable Reason as obstinately to oppose himself to, or confusedly fluctuate in, the Opinion and Doctrine of Demons and Spirits and witches! certainly he that do's so, must do two things more. He must temeraniously unhinge or undermine the best Religion in the world; and he must disingenuously quit and abandon that of the three Theologick Virtues or Graces to which the great Doctor of the Gentiles gave the precedence, Charity, through his unchristian and uncharitable incredulity."

So it was the faith of that day that if witchcraft or a belief in the devil went, Christianity went too; still they have gone and Christianity remains.

At Great Island resided Cranfield and Barefoot, and here was the governor's house. Here, too, lived Robert Cutt, the royalist Episcopalian, whose Puritan brothers, Richard and John, at the Bank, took such a prominent part in our early history. Here lived Pendleton, Stillman and Fryer, three leading persons in early Church matters, and the first two among the seven names of those who became members at the organization of a church in 1671. Here lived Theodore Atkinson, for a long time foremost in all provincial matters; Richard Chamberlain, holder of several offices and author of the "Lithobolia;" Charles Story, secretary of the province; here we first find the name of Tobias Lear, whose descendant became a somewhat eminent diplomatist and the private secretary of Washington.

It would be a serious omission and would leave this sketch quite incomplete were I not to mention another name whose descendants have held a prominent place in our parish and town until the present day, and to whose generosity our Church is gratefully indebted. On an ancient monument, within the diocese or Norfolk, of St. George, Norwich, is this inscription:

Here are buried under this stone,
Thomas Sheff and his wife Marion;
Sometyme we warr as yee now bee:
And now we are as bee shall yee;
Wherefore of your charite
Pray for us to the Trinite.
[Obyt mccclxxxxiii.]

Here at Cranbrook, Kent, in England, we first find the Sheafe family, of whom it is believed Jacob Sheafe came to America with Rev. Henry Whitfield, and died in Boston. His son, Sampson Sheafe, came to Great Island in 1675, and here was the beginning of the family in this neighborhood. He had at Newcastle housing, wharf and lands, was one of his majesty's council, and collector of customs at Portsmouth. His descendant, Mrs. White was, in 1821, the sole member of the ancient church at Newcastle.

This brings us to another, and the last name, of persons living at Great Island, who had a conspicuous place in civil, as well as ecclesiastical matters. In 1677, after Sampson Sheafe had returned to Boston, he contracted with one George Jaffrey to go to Great Island, and take charge solely of his goods, housing, orchard and land, and to do no other business, in consideration of £40, lawful money of New England, for two years, and to be found and allowed good and sufficient meat and drink, washing and lodging. In 1682 Jaffrey was tried for an attempt to defraud the revenue, and this matter brought him into conflict with Rev. Joshua Moodey. It seems he was afterwards forced to flee, and his house was taken by the Government, for there is a record dated May 16, 1684, ordering the "General Assembly to convene at Great Island, at the house late in possession of George Jaffrey;" and again, "the talk is that his (Geo. Jaffrey's) house must be court house and prison both, and standing so near the Governor, it is judged suitable for both these ends; that he may have the shorter journey to Court, and the prisoners may be always under his eye." And last of all there is a note in the journal of Rev. John Pike, "Geo. Jaffrey, Sen., of Portsmouth, one of the council journeying from Boston to Piscataqua, on a very cold day, was taken sick and died at Ipswich. A man of singular understanding and usefulness among us." The following description of the old Jaffrey House is from an account of it, partly a history partly a fancy, perhaps one day to be published:

On Jaffrey's Point, which has been corrupted into Jerry's Point, stands this house, well-nigh two hundred years old, "substantially as he (Jaffrey) built and left it, and since he himself somewhere says of his dwelling, that as any one might through clothing see the general outline of his form, and through his form his soul, so his house was only a little farther removed from his essential nature." His house so near the sea, was even nearer when it was built. There is a succession of garments which a man wears, who is in any degree free to choose, and which reflect his being, and the spot where he fixes his abode is one of them. The sight of the sea must have been to Geo. Jaffrey a necessary condition of healthful activity. From no window of his house is it hidden. And it is equally open to the sun, which goes round it in winter and over it in summer. He built it low to be out of the wind, at the same time he chose a situation where no height was needed to bring into view all he wished to see, and he wisely spread it over a wide area of ground for comfort, convenience and because land was cheaper than air. The modern architect knows only how to put floor over floor, as is necessary of large towns, but the lines of buildings in the country should be horizontal and irregular. Under the roof which he hung so low, he put many rooms, in no way resembling one another, all being of various forms, sizes and heights. You seem to be in a different house as you step from one room to another. In the centre, and to crown the whole, he built the huge chimney stack, with fire places on every side; wide enough for a whole family to gather in—deep-mouthed, where you hear the wind roar in winter, and the swallows beat their wings in summer, and where children may stand and look up at the stars and sky; a bringing as it were, a piece of out of doors into the very heart of the domestic enclosure. Others build chimneys as a convenience for their houses, concealing and thrusting them out of the way as much as possible, but he evidently built his house as only an adjunct to the chimney, accounting ample hearthstones of more consequence than rooms. This was the primary idea in the plan of the old mansion, and around this firm, capacious column of brick it grew as the ship grows from the keelson. When all was finished, and he sat down by his open fires now in one room, now in another, he grew more thoughtful; "the affairs of the world sounded more and more distant."

The old mansion has seen its contemporaries fall away, and generation after generation pass on. Business and fashion were lured to our more flourishing town, and for many years few have gone through the fishing village to enjoy and rest in the beauties of the shore beyond, to be lulled by the rote of the sea, full of rest and unrest, or to feel the friendship of the lighthouses, as they send out from every point their guiding rays over the deep. We begin to go back in many things to the choice of our fathers. The dust-laden travellers of summer from our heated inland may be glad of the sea anywhere, and throw themselves down where others have chosen for them, without variety and without beauty, and in their want of knowledge think it is all grand, but one may go a good while along our coast before he finds any views more charming and enrapturing than those from the very sites of the old mansions at Great Island, —The truth of the position that "conscience makes cowards of us all," finds illustration in the hiding of Dr. Vanderlinden Datoy, the younger, whilom of the town of Bois-le-due. In his giddy youth Mr. Vanderlinden, no doubt like so many other young gentlemen differing with his parent as to the adequacy of his allowance, helped himself to a very handsome amount of his father's money and left for parts unknown. Instead of cutting this prodigal off with a franc, the father, who died enormously rich, left him a great fortune, but every effort to discover his whereabouts for a long time failed. Lately, however, his cousin and a companion felt sure that they recognized him in a man they met in a cafe at Brussels, but the man denied the identity, and whilst they were debating what they had better do he took up his hat and vanished. The Brussels police are now looking for the heir, but it may be doubted whether anything short of a sight of the will will convince him that he is "wanted" for anything to his advantage.

If you won't say much about it, Venus will pass across the disc of the sun to-day, and astronomers will hereafter be able to tell how far it is from the earth to the sun—that is, within, say, 200,000 miles.

A Thousand Bankruptcies

Would not create as great a panic in commerce as the withdrawal of HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR from the market, would create among the sick. The reason is obvious. Tens of thousands of both sexes would be bankrupted in health by such an event. The famous specific is effecting such cures in cases of chronic cough and cold, influenza, bronchitis, bleeding from the lungs and apparent consumption, as have never heretofore been accomplished within the memory of man.

PIKE'S TOOTH-ACHE DROPS—Cure in one minute.

Rational Medication.

Medication is only successful when it is rational, and it is rational only when it begins at the beginning. In other words, to cure a malady, its cause must be removed. Weakness, either general or local, is the origin of the great majority of diseases. Reinforce the vital energies, regulate digestion and secretion by strengthening the organs which perform those all-important functions, and dyspepsia, constipation, kidney and bladder complaints, urine difficulties, impure circulation, and the thousand and one ailments which are the consequences of debility, are completely, and in most cases permanent removed. The best, safest and most agreeable tonic and alterative that can be employed for this purpose is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The experience of twenty-five years, during which time it has outlived perhaps ten times that number of ephemeral preparations which have entered into competition wit it, has proved it to be unequalled as a remedy for all disorders accompanied by or proceeding from weakness.

The Green Grass Grows in the meadow, go spread over it a thin layer of Benrine, and the tiny blades will shoot upwards, and grow far more luxuriantly than before. Try the same experiment upon your hair and the effect is still more marked; the hair grows vigorous and seems to indue Benrine all the ingredients to support its life. 10

Since then they have advanced to $2 per bbl.

Mr. A. M. Payson opens a new school for young ladies at Chelsea this week. The term will consist of three years and the tuition is $20 in advance.

An unknown thief stole four carcasses of mutton from Elihu B. Dennett's slaughter house at Christian Shore, Sunday night.

News and Notes.

President Grant's message recommends a speedy return to specie payment and the repeal of the legal tender act as a means.

There are rumors of trouble with Spain.

A Vicksburg dispatch represents the city under great excitement, large bodies of armed negroes being on the march for the city, Sunday night.

Congress met on Monday. In the House 238 members were present.

The New York Court of Appeals has granted Beecher's demand for a bill of particulars.

The annual report of Secretary Robeson shows the navy in a remarkably efficient condition, both as regards the number of vessels, their armament and sea-going qualities. The present number is 163 vessels, with 1254 guns, the armament having been slightly increased in number of guns on the new ships.

The Lowell boiler works were almost entirely destroyed by fire Sunday night; loss, $10,000.

The Secretary of the Treasury recommends in his report that a day be fixed, not more than three years distant, for the resumption of specie payments, and asks that the Secretary be authorized to raise gold by selling bonds to a sufficient amount to keep gold enough in the Treasury to redeem the greenbacks presented. He recommends a system of free banking as a part of the plan of resumption, and also the repeal of the legal-tender act, to apply to all contracts made after a fixed day, except salaries and expenditures under existing appropriations. He thinks the penalties for violation of the customs laws have been injuriously modified in several particulars, but he is opposed to the restoration of the moiety system. As to the tariff, he says that if Congress should determine to take any action, it should be deliberate action, and recommends the appointment of a commission to report on the subject to the next Congress. He strongly urges general economy and a careful revision of all the estimates.

Judge Durell of Louisiana resigned to escape impeachment.

Barnum's two rhinoceroses, male and female, had a fearful fight on Friday, the female being put into the other's cage. The male, weighing 4500 pounds, made the attack, and the female, 1000 pounds lighter, resisted nobly until she was attacked and gored in flank. They were finally separated by a barricade being thrown between them, the female being terribly injured. The elephants looked peacefully on, but the other six hundred animals were wild with fright. Fortunately, they were unable to break from their cages. At one time the male rhinoceros actually lifted the female from the floor with his tusk.

The newspapers in every section of the country owe more than thanks to George P. Rowell & Co. for their exposure of such frauds as C. T. Price et als.

A man named Edward Noonan was killed on the corner of Court and Hanover streets, Boston, Sunday morning, in an altercation with roughs.

State News.

George Cavenough, of Strafford, was knocked down in Dover, Friday night, and robbed of $180, by three unknown men.

A few evenings since a scoundrel pulled the pin connecting the saloon car to the rear of an upward freight train and let it start on the down grade toward Hooksett. One of the railroad men happened to see it moving off, and starting on a vigorous run barely succeeded in jumping aboard and setting the brakes before it got under full headway. The upward Pittsfield train was just then coming in, and had not that car been intercepted from dashing down into it there must have been a terrific collision, if not a terrible disaster.

The scarlet fever is raging at Manchester.

As a Keene policeman was struggling with a drunken customer, whom he was committing to jail, and finally obliged to drag along by main strength, a little girl sliding on the sidewalk volunteered her assistance, saying "load him on my sled and I will draw him." The proffered aid was accepted, and if not fully a success, it was not the fault of the little girl who was ready to lend a hand.

The Attitude of the Prohibitionists.

The Nashua Telegraph says of the nomination of Nathaniel White, Esq., for Governor by the prohibitionists:

His endorsement by either the democratic or republican convention would seem to be precluded by his pledge to support the prohibition platform which forbids any such "entangling alliance." We do not understand that the straight-out prohibitionists expect or particularly desire any such alliance. Their party is made up from both the old parties, and though they more nearly agree in principle with the republicans than with the democrats, they well know that throughout the State there are a few prohibition democrats, as was demonstrated by the defeat of the license bill last June by their votes. The sympathy and co-operation of these men, they argue, can only be expected by the maintenance of an independent organization, so far at least as a State ticket is concerned. Their view in this respect is an honest one, and as such it challenges respect.

The New York Times.

A POLITICAL, LITERARY, AND GENERAL NEWSPAPER.

DEVOTED TO REFORM IN MUNICIPAL, STATE, AND GENERAL GOVERNMENT

ESTABLISHED 1851.

POSTAGE FREE FOR 1875.

As a family paper, THE TIMES has always borne a very high reputation throughout the United States. It is free from all objectionable advertisements and reports, and may be safely admitted to every domestic circle. The disgraceful announcements of quacks and medical pretenders, which pollute so many newspapers of the day, are not admitted into the columns of THE TIMES on any terms.

As a political journal, THE TIMES will be devoted, as in the past, to a discriminating support of the Republican Party, while it reserves the right of expressing independent opinions upon the measures or policy of any Administration, or upon the course of any leaders. It belongs to no faction or clique within a party, and has never entered into any combinations which were likely to imperil its perfect freedom. Its course is that of independence within the Republican Party, for in that way can the interests of the people be most efficiently served.

Started in September, 1851, THE TIMES has ever since been recognized as among the most successful, popular, and influential newspapers in the country. Two of its original proprietors still direct its policy, and, with greatly increased resources and experience, will spare no pains to extend and strengthen its claims upon the confidence and support of that public which it has endeavored faithfully to serve for upward of three and twenty years.

Its editorial columns will be conducted in a spirit of fairness and impartiality, free alike from self-interested aims, political jobbery, or undue favoritism. It will represent the great body of the people, rather than any clique. On all subjects it will maintain an attitude of perfect independence. Its correspondence will be full and timely, and directed with special reference to the publication of the fullest news of all questions, and from all parts. Its reports will be prepared with the utmost care. The literary department will be thoroughly capable here, and will present a full review of the literature, the fine arts, the music, and the drama of the day. The scientific and educational reports and articles are specially prepared by some of the ablest men in the country.

The Sunday edition of THE TIMES includes, in addition to all the news, selected and original literary matter of the most varied and agreeable character. Special arrangements have been made to impart new attractions to this feature of the paper. Among the contributors of original stories or articles to this paper are Bret Harte, J. W. De Forrest, Thomas Hardy, Dutton Cook, William Black, and negotiations are being carried out with many other distinguished authors.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great native artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt to establish an art journal, did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times the cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, and such will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Those who be pacing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any interior page. The judicious intermingling of landscape, marine, figure, and animal subjects, sustains a sustained interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist exclusively to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a fitting and graceful accompaniment, worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical dissquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture, in a former issue attracted so much attention,

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 1000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, values at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular gratis on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union,

SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.

(No charge for postage.)

Specimen copies of THE ALDINE, fifty cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON, President.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

MESSAGE

OF THE

President of the United States.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

Since the convening of Congress one year ago, the nation has undergone a prostration in business and industries such as has not been witnessed with as for many years. Speculation as to the causes for this prostration might be indulged in without profit, because as many theories would be advanced as there would be independent writers among those who expressed their own views without borrowing upon the subject. Without indulging in theories of the cause of this prostration, therefore, I will call your attention only to the fact and to the same questions, as to which it would seem there would be no disagreement.

FINANCIAL LEGISLATION.

During this prostration two special elements of prosperity have been most abundant—labor and capital. Both have been largely unemployed. Where security has been undoubted, capital has been attainable at very moderate rates. Where labor has been wanted it has been found in abundance at cheap rates, compared with what of the necessaries of life could be purchased with the wages demanded. Two great elements of prosperity, therefore, have not been denied us. A third might be added: Our soil and climate are unrivalled within the limits of any contiguous territory under one nationality for its variety of products to feed and clothe people, and in the amount of surplus to spare to feed less favored people. Therefore, with these facts in view, it seems to me that wise statesmanship at this session of Congress would dictate legislation, ignoring the past and directing in proper channels these great elements of prosperity to any people.

The debt abroad is the only element that can, with always a sound currency, enter into our affairs to cause any continued depression in the industries and prosperity of our people. A great conflict for national existence made necessary for temporary purposes the raising of large sums of money from whatever source attainable in the wisdom of Congress. I do not doubt their wisdom in the premises, regarding the necessity of the times, to devise a system of national currency which it proved to be impossible to keep on a par with the recognized currency of the civilized world. This begot a spirit of speculation involving an extravagance and luxury not required for the happiness and the prosperity of a people, and involving both directly and indirectly foreign indebtedness. The currency being fluctuating value, and therefore unsafe to hold for legitimate translations requiring money, became a subject of speculation in itself. Those two causes, however, have involved us in a foreign indebtedness contracted in good faith by borrower and lender, which should be paid in coin and according to the bond agreed upon when the debt was contracted, gold, or its equivalent. The good faith of the government cannot be violated toward creditors without national disgrace. But our commerce should be encouraged; American shipbuilding and carrying capacity increased, foreign markets sought for products of the soil and manufactories, to the end that we may be able to pay these debts where a new market can be created for the sale of our products, either of the soil, the mine or the manufactory. A new means is discovered of utilizing our idle capital and labor to the advantage of the whole people, but in my judgment the first step toward accomplishing this object is to secure a currency good wherever civilization reigns; one which, if it becomes superabundant with one people, will find a market with some other; a currency which has as its basis the labor necessary to produce it—which will give to it its value. Gold and silver are now the recognized mediums of exchange the civilized world over, and to this we should return with the least practicable delay.

In view of the pledges of the American Congress when our present legal tender system was adopted and the debt contracted, there should be no delay, certainly no unnecessary delay, in fixing by legislation a method by which we will return to specie. To the accomplishment of this end I invite your special attention. I believe firmly that there can be no prosperous and permanent revival of business and industries until a policy is adopted with legislation to carry it out looking to a return to specie basis. It is easy to conceive that the debtors and speculative classes may think it of value to them to make the so-called money abundant until they throw a portion of their burdens upon others; but even these, I believe, would be disappointed in the result if a course should be pursued which will keep in doubt the value of the legal-tender medium of exchange. A revival of the protective industries is needed by all classes, and by none more than the holders of property, of whatever sort, with debts to liquidate from the realization upon its sale. But admitting that these two classes of citizens are to be benefited by the expansion, would it be honest to give it? Would not the general loss be too great to justify such belief? Would it not be just as honest and prudent to authorize each debtor to issue his own legal-tender to the extent of his liabilities as to do this? Would it not be safer, for fear of an over-issue by unscrupulous creditors, to say that all debt obligations are obliterated in the United States and now we commence anew, each possessing all has at the time free from incumbrance? These propositions are too absurd to be entertained for a moment by thinking or honest people. Yet every delay in preparation for final resumption partakes of this dishonesty, and is only less in degree as the hope is held out that a convenient season will at last arrive for the good work of redeeming our pledges to commence it. It will never come, in my opinion, except by positive action by Congress or national disaster, which will destroy for a time at least the credit of the individual and the State at large. A sound currency might be reached by total bankruptcy and discredit of the integrity of the nation and of individuals. I believe it is in the power of Congress at this session to devise such legislation as will renew confidence, revive all the industries, start on a career of prosperity to last for many years and to save the credit of the nation and of the people. Steps toward the return to a specie basis are the great requisites to this devoutly-to-be-sought for end. There are others which I may touch upon hereafter.

A nation dealing in a currency below that of specie in value, labors under two great disadvantages. First—Having no use for the world's acknowledged mediums of exchange, gold and silver, these are driven out of the country, because there is no demand for their use. Second—The medium of exchange in use being of a fluctuating value, for after all it is only worth the price that it will purchase of gold and silver metals, having an intrinsic value just in proportion to the honest labor it takes to produce them, a larger margin must be allowed for profit to the manufacturer and producer. It is months from the date of production to the date of realization. Interest upon capital must be charged, and the risk of fluctuation in the value of that which is to be received in payment added. Hence the high prices acting as a protection to the foreign producer, who receives nothing in exchange for the product of his skill and labor, except a currency good at a staple value the world over.

It seems to me that nothing is clearer than that the greater part of the burden of existing prostration, for the want of a sound financial system, falls upon the working man, who must, after all, produce wealth, and upon the salaried man who superintends and conducts the business. The burden tells upon them in two ways—by the deprivation of employment, and by the decreased purchasing power of their salaries. It is the duty of Congress to devise the method of correcting the evils which are acknowledged to exist. But I will venture to suggest two or three things which seem to me as absolutely necessary to a return to specie payments.

The first great requirement is a return to prosperity. The legal-tender clause to the law authorizing the issue of currency by the national government should be repealed, to take effect as to all contracts entered into after a day named in the repealing act; not to apply, however, to the payment of salaries by government, or for other expenditures now provided by law to be paid in currency in the interval pending between the repeal and final resumption. Provision should be made by which the Secretary of the Treasury can obtain gold as it may become necessary from time to time from the date when specie redemption commences. To this might and should be added a revenue sufficiently in excess of the expenses, to insure an accumulation of gold in the Treasury to sustain redemption.

I commend this subject to your careful consideration, believing that a favorable solution is attainable, and that, if reached by this Congress, the present and future generations will ever gratefully remember it as their delivery from a tiraldom of evil and disgrace. With resumption, free banking may be authorized with safety, giving full protection to billholders, which they have not under existing laws. Indeed, I would regard free banking as essential. It would give proper elasticity to the currency. As more currency should be required for the transaction of legitimate business, new banks would be started, and in turn the banks would wind up their business when it was found that there was a superabundance of currency. The experience and judgment of the people can best decide just how much currency is required for the transaction of the business of the country. It is unsafe to leave the settlement of this question to Congress. The Secretary of the Treasury is the executive. Congress should make the regulations under which the banks may exist, but should not make banking a monopoly by limiting the amount of redeemable paper currency that shall be authorized. Such importance do I attach to this subject, and so earnestly do I commend it to your attention, that I give it prominence by introducing it at the beginning of this message.

FOREIGN RELATIONS IN GENERAL.

During the past year nothing has occurred to disturb the general friendly and cordial relations of the United States with other powers. The correspondence submitted herewith between this government and its diplomatic representatives, as also with the representatives of other countries, shows a satisfactory condition of all questions between the United States and the most of those countries, and with few exceptions, to which reference is hereafter made, the absence of any points of difference to be adjusted.

BELGIUM.

The notice directed by the resolution of Congress of June 7, 1874, to be given to terminate the convention of July 17, 1858, between the United States and Belgium, has been given, and the treaty will accordingly terminate on the 1st day of July, 1875. This convention secured to certain Belgian vessels entering the ports of the United States exceptional privileges which are not accorded to our own vessels. Other features of the convention have proved satisfactory, and have tended to the cultivation of mutually beneficial commercial intercourse and friendly relations between the two countries. I hope that the deputations which have been invited will result in the celebration of another treaty which may tend to the interests of both countries.

CHINA AND JAPAN.

Our relations with China continue to be friendly. During the past year the fear of hostilities between China and Japan, growing out of the landing of an armed force upon the island of Formosa by the latter, has occasioned uneasiness. It is earnestly hoped, however, the difficulties arising from this cause will be adjusted, and that the advance of civilization in these empires may not be retarded by the state of war. In consequence of the part taken by certain citizens of the United States in this expedition, our representatives in those countries have been instructed to impress the governments of China and Japan with the firm intention of this country to maintain strict neutrality in the event of hostilities, and to carefully prevent any infractions of the law on the part of our citizens. On this subject I call the attention of Congress to the generally conceded fact that the great proportion of the Chinese emigrants who come to our shores do not come voluntarily to make their homes with us and their labor productive of general prosperity, but come under contracts with head men who own them almost absolutely. In a worse form does this apply to Chinese women; hardly a perceptible percentage of them perform any honorable labor; but they are brought for shameful purposes to the disgrace of the communities where they have settled, and to the great demoralization of the youth of those localities. If this evil practice can be legislated against, it will be my pleasure as well as duty to enforce any regulation to secure so desirable an end. It is hoped that the negotiation between the government of Japan and the treaty powers, looking to the further opening of the empire and the removal of various restrictions upon trade and travel, may soon produce the results desired, which cannot fail to inure to the benefit of all parties.

Having on previous occasions submitted to the consideration of Congress the propriety of excusing the Japanese government from the further payment of the indemnity under the convention of October 22, 1864, and as no action has been taken thereon, it became my duty to regard the obligations of the convention as in force; and as the other powers intrusted have relessed their portion of the indemnity in full, the minister of the United States in Japan has, on behalf of this government, received the remainder of the amount due the United States under the convention of Simonosaki. I submit the propriety of applying the income of a part, if not of the whole, of this fund, to the education in the Japanese language of a number of young men, to be under obligations to serve the government for a specified time as interpreters at the legation and consulates in Japan. A limited number of Japanese youths might at the same time be educated in our own vernacular, and mutual benefits would result to both governments. The importance of having our own citizens competent and familiar with the language of Japan, to act as interpreters and in other capacities connected with the legation and consulates in that country, cannot readily be over-estimated.

MATTERS COMING UNDER THE TREATY OF WASHINGTON.
